"PAY ALL," ALLIES TO BERLIN

JAPAN RUSHING NAVY TO EQUAL THAT OF U. S.

To Be on Even Basis in Six Years.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Is Japan preparing for war with the United States? This question has been brought to the fore of late by the feverish naval building activities of the Japanese that have developed concurrently with the increasing friction between Tokio and Washington, particularly in connection with the interests of the two nations in the Pacific.

The movement for curtailment of naval armament has been coldly received in Tokio, while all the available resources of the island empire have been concentrated on naval expansion. Japanese shipways teem with warships under construction, while numerous battlecraft are being built in the British isles for Japanese account. Japan has purchased hundreds of airplanes from England and British aviators are to train the Nipponese in the art of aerial warfare.

Double Tonnage in Six Years.

To double its naval tonnage and make it nearly equal to the American navy within six years is believed to be the aim of Japan. Reports at the navy department indicate that the Japanese navy will be strengthened 50 per cent by 1924, while the American navy will have increased 19 per cent in that time. In 1927 the Japanese navy will be double its present strength, or nearly equal to the American navy. This does not take into account the secret navy construction in Japan, the extent of which is not known.

On April 1, 1921, the great naval powers of the world stood in this relation as to fighting ships:

	Ships.	Tonnage.
Great Britain	533	1,854,140
United States	450	1,221,763
Japan	88	508,389

Britain Halts Construction.

In the coming six years Great Britain's naval construction will be inconsequential, according to its present plan; the United States will have increased its naval strength by 19 per cent, and Japan with a tremendous spurt will have reinforced its naval power by more than 103 per cent, with work now in sight; that is, on construction concerning which the secret agents of the United States have information. Naval officers feel that they are well within the truth when they estimate that the true increase in Japanese naval power will be more like 125 per cent, since an immense amount of building is of a character that can be hidden from the anxious eyes of foreigners or that can be disguised.

The figures that have been submitted to the chiefs of the American government and which show what the naval power relation will be in 1927, according to building programs now laid down, are as follows:

	Ships.	Tonnage.
United States	535	2,036,371
Great Britain	640	2,013,520
Japan	179	1,276,268+

Building Under Cover.

In every estimate of Japanese naval strength, present and planned, that is transmitted to the President of the United States, the secretary of state, the secretary of the navy, and others that have a right to the knowledge the "plus" symbol always is attached to the figures for Japan, for it represents the unknown quantity in the Japanese dash for sea power, the building that is going on under cover.

The percentages of increase set down here, 19 per cent for the United States and 103 per cent plus for Japan, are based on the number of ships. If the percentages are to be set forth on tonnage they show that while the strengthening to be done by this country is about 67 per cent, the Japan increase amounts to about 112 per cent "plus."

"We would feel a great deal better in this business," said a high naval officer today, "if we knew just what this 'plus' represents. Japan plans her greatest spurt between 1924 and 1927 in the three year period for which neither the United States nor Great Britain has planned a ton of construction."

First Line Fighting Ships.

While the Anglo-Saxon leaders of the world mark time for three years, unless their present programs are altered by events, the leader of the east will strive to add 47 per cent to the strength of her capital, first line fleet

STENOGRAPHER IS MICHIGAN'S PRETTIEST GIRL

Wins First Tribune Beauty Award.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Miss Alice L. Albaugh, 612 East Mansion street, Marshall, Mich., whose photograph appears on first page of today's Rotogravure section as first prize winner in Michigan, in THE TRIBUNE's great Beauty Contest, is all her photographer, Walter Grant, Albion, Mich., painted her. And then some.

Picking beauties from photographs alone is a ticklish job under most circumstances. Not in this particular instance, however. The judges, Pauline Palmer, Albin Polasek, and J. Wellington Reynolds, three well known artists, described the qualities which led to their choice of Miss Albaugh for first prize of $1,000 as "a graceful, distinguished style, poise, symmetry, carriage, pure feminine personality, a certain Madonna like dignity, sweetness of expression, and a general modesty." Had they accompanied me to Miss Albaugh's home to participate in the presentation of the $1,000 check, they would have found their praise none too extravagant. She's lovely.

She's All-American, Too.

An honest-to-goodness, pure, dyed-in-the-wool American girl, too, she is. Her mother is a D. A. R., Mary Marshall chapter. Miss Albaugh is a direct descendant of the first Gov. Bradford, who, history relates, was one of the passengers inside the Mayflower.

She boasts her first vote for Harding and her twenty-first birthday all in the same year. Added to that now is the distinction of being the prettiest girl in Michigan, and one of the contestants for the $10,000 to be awarded the most beautiful among the sixty prize winners in the contest.

Marshall, Mich., with nearly 5,000 population, lies midway between Chicago and Detroit. It is a town of pretty girls, besides being the oldest town in the state. Miss Albaugh was born and raised there and is a stenographer in charge of the office of a corset concern. Her father is assistant postmaster.

"Yes, Alice is a pretty girl, all right," said her daddy, proudly. "But her disposition is what I like best about her. It is the best in the world.

"And she can do everything. She plays the piano, sings, and she can cook! I'll say she can! She took first prize at the county fair for the best cake and doughnuts, and another prize for the best bread. O, she's some girl."

Here Are Her Beauty Points.

Miss Alice is 5 feet 3, weighs about 125 pounds. Her hair is a soft, wavy brown, with live red glints in it. Her eyebrows are finely arched, her lashes long and silky; good teeth, a finely modeled nose and chin, and large, moist eyes of variable hue.

She is an athletic girl, a good swimmer, basketball player and a great walker, which undoubtedly contribute to her matchless complexion. And her manner is charming—unspoiled, unaffected!

When I arrived on my Lady Bountiful errand, she was sewing on a pale pink boudoir concoction to go into her hope chest. Yea, it's true! A young man of her own state has seen to it already that she is not going to be carried off to any other state. He it was who sent her picture in.

How does it feel to have a nice fat check handed to you just like that?

"O, it's wonderful," gasped Miss Alice. Just think, it would take me four years to save that much at $5 a week and I couldn't save that much anyway. I was going to buy a walnut set and fix my room all up, and then have it ready when Gilbert is through school and we can get married. I want a big four poster and a vanity dresser. I was going to buy it on the installment plan. Now I won't have to."

TRIBUNE ACTS ON FAHERTY'S FEE DEFIANCE

Challenge Results in Court Action.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

"The fees to be paid by the city for the total completion of the work, based on the contract authorized by the city council of 2 per cent for each of the two building experts, or an aggregate of 4 per cent for the entire work, will aggregate $2,786,063.

"I challenge any representative or organization of architects, builders, or real estate men to prove that the charges are not fair."

The above official statement of fees for valuations on five street improvements and the challenge came from Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, in an official communication to the city council, first given the public Feb. 19 last.

THE TRIBUNE waited and waited for some one to accept the challenge. No one did. Perhaps they lacked courage, were afraid, or had other good reason.

Tribune Files Suit.

Time ran on, and when exactly sixty days had elapsed The Tribune company on April 19 accepted Mr. Faherty's official challenge and filed a suit in the Superior court to recover for the benefit of all taxpayers $1,004,586, already paid Frank H. Mesce and Austin J. Lynch, the city's two building experts, and to prevent the payment of the remainder of the $2,786,063.

The Tribune company alleged in its bill that the services of Mesce and Lynch, for which they have collected $1,004,586, were not worth more than $50,000, or approximately one-twentieth of what they were paid. The bill also charged that a large part of the payments to these two men were from appropriations which were invalid for that purpose.

Three Other Experts Get Big Fees.

But that is not half the story. While Mesce and Lynch were collecting $1,004,586 as building experts, three real estate experts were also cashing warrants on the city treasury.

Until yesterday it was generally supposed that this trio of real estate experts had collected only $250,000 each, or a total of $750,000. The fact is that that sum is nearly $1,000,000 under the mark. This triumvirate of expert knowledge on real estate have actually collected in real money $1,738,079 for their work last year. Altogether the five experts have received for approximately a year's experting the aggregate of $2,742,666.

Here's How It Was Split.

The cash collections of each of the experts follow:

Expert, building—	Collections.
Austin J. Lynch	$ 544,168.18
Frank H. Mesce	460,418.66
Total, building experts	$1,004,586.84
Expert, real estate—	Collections.
Ernest H. Lyons	$ 580,326.41
Edward C. Waller Jr.	580,326.41
Arthur S. Merigold	577,426.43
Total, real estate experts	$1,738,079.25
Total for five experts	2,742,666.09

This total represents only cash. There is no wind, credits, anticipated income, or expected receipts in it.

According to Faherty's official statement, the five experts anticipate that they will get a total of $4,891,528, counting in the money already received.

That conveys a definite idea of the amount of money involved in the Faherty challenge. City Controller Harding has officially told the finance committee that Mesce and Lynch received the $1,004,000, and the sum paid the three real estate experts is just as authentic, although it has not officially been given the public by the city administration.

Claims Appropriations Void.

The Tribune company not only contends in its bill that these bills are twenty times larger than the services of Lynch and Mesce were worth but also that most of the money was paid from appropriations which "are null, void, and of none effect" and that those appropriations "are in direct contravention of the statutes of said state relating to the appropriations of cities."

These particular payments were made from accounts labeled "450—5—12," "450—S—32," "450—S—42," "450—S—52," and "450—S—62." Among the polite officials of the city hall these are known as 'S accounts," but among the jesting employés they are better known as the "soft service" accounts.

It was from these "soft service" accounts that Lynch and Mesce and Lyons, Waller, and Merigold received the larger part of their money. That the significance of the payments from these accounts may be appreciated,

A LIVING MEMORIAL ACROSS AMERICA

HEART ON SLAB, IF NOT SPLIT, WOULD OUTGROW EARTH

Living Bit of Flesh Nine Years Under Glass.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 23.—[Special.]—On a little white marble slab, covered by an air tight glass dome, and kept at an unvarying temperature of 103 degrees Fahrenheit, a bit of flesh lies motionless.

It was placed there nine years ago after it had been taken, warm and pulsing, from an embryo chicken's breast. It used to beat regularly, as nature intended it should. To day it is dead; and yet it is alive.

Since early in 1912 a surgeon and two nurses have taken turns at watching the fragment.

It is a heart.

Growth Is Amazing.

Every forty-eight hours the surgeon, fitted with rubber gloves and equipped with sterilized instruments, lifts the glass covering and cuts the heart in twain. The new cells are either destroyed or put into fresh growing culture for further experimentation. The old, original heart—no longer formed like one, but a misshapen mass of tissue—is covered up again and the scientists resume their vigil.

If the "heart" had not been divided in half every second day since it was first placed on the slab, today, given proper surroundings for development, it would be a ball larger than the earth!

It's Dr. Carrel's "Heart."

All this was shown in "movies" and explained here today at the annual meeting of the American Philosophical society by Dr. Alexis Carrel, the noted surgeon of the Rockefeller institute of New York.

Schwab's Parents Observe 60th Wedding Anniversary

Johnstown, Pa., April 23.—Mr. and Mrs. John A. Schwab, parents of Charles M. Schwab, today celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home in Loretto, near here. Both enjoy the best of health. Natives of Cambria county, they have lived here since birth. Messages of congratulation were received from President Harding, Thomas Edison, and other prominent persons.

Harding No Fair Weather Golfer; Goes Round in Rain

Washington, D. C., April 23.—President Harding refused to permit his regular game of golf to be called off today by reason of rain and a soggy field. He walked from the White House to the nearby municipal golf links to play.

$1,500,000 DU PONT COUNTRY ESTATE SOLD FOR $470,000

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—White Eagle, the $1,500,000 country estate of the late Alicia Du Pont at Roslyn, Long Island, was sold at auction today for $470,000 to David T. Layman Jr., understood to be acting for Howard C. Phipps. The buyer will occupy the place.

The entire sale lasted only fifteen minutes. The first bid was $100,444, made by Harry Payne Whitney.

The sale was conducted in the main hall of the stately Georgian mansion which Mrs. Du Pont never occupied. She died in January of last year, before it was completed.

Belgians Scatter Flowers on Boatloads of U. S. Dead

NAMUR, April 23.—Several boats carrying the bodies of 960 American soldiers who fell at St. Mihiel passed Namur today. They were covered with flowers thrown by people living along the Meuse. The bodies will be taken to Antwerp, where they will be placed on a steamer and taken to New York.

LOOP FILM HOUSE JAMMED; STRIKE CALLED AND WON

Managers Speed Up in Meeting Demand.

For three years officials of the Chicago Federation of Musicians have attempted to unionize the two girl organists in the Castle theater, State and Madison streets.

Last night they enlisted the aid of the moving picture operators' organization, called a strike of operators, and in forty-five minutes had won their point.

From now on Miss Marie Fenolio and Miss Mildred Luther, 1941 Washington boulevard, the organists, are members of the union and will get the union scale—$70 a week for a five hour day and about $115 a week for an eight hour day.

House Jammed; Strike Called.

The house was jammed when the union officials came. There was F. H. Clifford of the musicians, Ralph J. O'Hara, business agent of the operators; Thomas J. Reynolds, and Joseph "Spike" Sullivan, also of the operators' union.

They had presented an ultimatum to A. E. Beck and M. J. Weil, managers of the theater, early in the morning and had given them until 8:30 to allow the girls to join the union.

Mr. Beck was not at the theater at that time. Nobody knew where he was, it seemed.

Patrons Get Money Back.

Sure enough. The picture flickered out. The manager had to make a speech. The ticket seller had to give back the ticket money. The theater was emptied.

O'Hara was right. His action found Mr. Beck. It also brought R. H. Weaver, general manager of the string of theaters in which the Castle is a unit. The union officials and the movie managers signed up immediately.

Golf Club Bars Women from Links on Week-Ends

Women will be barred from the Evanston Community Recreation Association golf links on Saturday afternoons and Sunday mornings, Peter Jans, the organizer, announced last night.

"The women play too slow," Mr. Jans declared. "Saturday afternoon and Sunday mornings the men want to play, and they don't like to dawdle along a course like the women."

Women members are planning a protest, it is said.

Indict Twenty This Week in Building Quiz

The Dailey joint legislative committee which is investigating building graft in Chicago anounced yesterday that it would ask for a special grand jury this week before which to present evidence against twenty labor and materials men. The evidence necessary to indict has been obtained.

Senator Dailey's announcement yesterday charges that scores of Chicago business and professional men who profess to be enemies of the alleged grafters secretly share in the benefits of the system and privately connive with the graft leaders to defeat the purpose of the investigation.

Public Hearings Start Friday.

Senator Dailey made an earnest appeal for coöperation from the public. He said the time has come when the public should know who has and who has not aided the committee in its investigations, and announced that beginning Friday the hearings will be public.

The committee received a verbal report of the operations of the Lockwood commission in New York from A. D. Rodenberg and James W. Guillett, assistant attorney generals, who returned from a series of conferences with Samuel Untermeyer, chief prosecutor for the Lockwood commission, and Attorney General Daugherty in Washington.

"We are ready to go ahead now with a special grand jury and indict about a hundred of these grafters. We have already got enough evidence to send twenty of them to the penitentiary at once," Senator Dailey said.

Aid Promised by Daugherty.

"We want the public to know that some of the very men who have come in to us and professed to be enemies of the system of building labor graft are men who profit by this same system, and who will not aid us a bit."

Senator Dailey said Attorney General Daugherty promised immediate coöperation in the probe of building graft in Chicago. He pointed out that the Lockwood commission had a staff of twenty highly trained legal experts, including an indictment expert, three brief makers, and eight high class attorneys, all of whose services were given gratis by the law firm of which Elihu Root is the head. He added he would welcome any such offers from high class Chicago legal firms.

Staff Not Adequate.

Senator Dailey said his staff is entirely inadequate to meet the situation in Chicago, and that he is awaiting the passage of the appropriation bills and the governor's approval thereof. He said his committee feels it has made as much progress as did the Lockwood commission in the same length of time.

CARPENTERS VETO CUT

Thirty unions affiliated with the Carpenters' district council voted last night, 9,080 to 98, against accepting any cut in wages.

The men stated they would work for any individual or contracting firm or organization that paid them $1.25 an hour, the old scale. Nothing less will satisfy them.

Earlier in the day there were hopeful symptoms of a reopening of wage negotiations this week by various building crafts. However, the proposal for a 10 per cent cut was not received with any applause by the employers.

TENANTS TO HOLD MAY FESTIVAL FOR RENT FIGHT

A May festival will be held in Broadway armory by the Edgewater branch of the Chicago Tenants' league, to secure funds to establish a legal bureau to help tenants, according to an announcement yesterday. The festival, set for May 12, 13 and 14, will be similar to a country fair, according to J. B. Strauss, president. There will be theatrical features, dancing, athletic contests, and various feature booths.

The league also announced the publication of a special newspaper, "The Tenants' Appeal." Copies will be sent to Springfield in the campaign to secure votes for the Kessinger rent bills.

"White Bread of Peace" to Be Restored in Paris

PARIS, April 23.—"The good white bread of peace" will be restored May 15 under the provisions of a bill which has been adopted by the chamber and will now go to the senate. The measure restores freedom of domestic commerce in wheat and removes the requirement of the use of one-fifth part substitute in flour.

"Nicky" Arnstein a Father While on Trial as "Thief"

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Fanny Brice, wife of Jules (Nicky) Arnstein, gave birth to a son last night at a sanitarium in Washington, where Arnstein is on trial for alleged connection with the theft of Wall street bonds.

PARIS ACCORD TERMS FINAL, PREMIERS SAY

Britain and France Plan Coercion.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LYMPNE, England, April 23.—Great Britain and France will stand firmly by the terms of the Paris accord with regard to German reparations and both will insist that these terms be carried out by the Berlin government.

This became known here today during a mid-afternoon recess which interrupted the meeting between the French premier, Aristide Briand, and Mr. Lloyd George, the British premier. The meeting took place at the country estate of Sir Philip Sassoon.

Mr. Lloyd George met M. Briand at Dover and the two premiers motored together to Lympne. After luncheon the conference began and continued for two and a half hours. Then, after a short rest, the meeting was resumed and was expected to continue far into the night.

Get Busy on Details.

Early in the meeting it developed that the two nations were in hearty accord on the general proposition of compelling Germany to fulfill the Paris accord of last January and that the work of the conference would be to work out the details for coercive steps which would win British approval and possibly British military aid.

No military experts attended the conversations, M. Briand's only attendants being M. Berthelot of the French foreign office and M. Kammerer, an interpreter. Mr. Lloyd George's staff consisted of Sir Maurice Hankey, Mr. Philip Kerr, and Mr. Vansittart Slyvester of the British foreign office.

NOTE TO U. S. ON WAY

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 23.—[By Wireless.]—Under the direction of Secretary Hugh Wilson, American mission clerks tonight were coding a German note to America, which probably will cost the German cabinet its life.

Whether the government will last until the note has been read in Washington and discussed in the reichstag now is the most important question in Berlin parliamentary circles.

The reasons for the imminent fall of the Simons ministry are obvious. Official sources of information are convinced that a cabinet which declared at London that Germany had offered to its "utmost ability to pay," and now is offering through America to pay more, cannot survive. The conservative parties, led by Hugo Stinnes, are determined to crush the government for this action.

Berlin's New Concessions.

Beside offering a definite sum as reparations exceeding the London offer, the note to be sent to Washington tonight, according to a reichstag member, contains the following other important points:

An international loan, enabling Germany to meet its first year's payment.

A plan for French reconstruction, which was officially announced here this afternoon.

Giving to the entente a percentage of German industrial production.

These terms are unacceptable to Germany's great industrialists, among whom Hugo Stinnes is the leader. In party meetings last night Herr Stinnes declared the increased money offer and the production percentage offer economically were impossible.

People's Party Near Bolt.

Stinnes spoke openly against Dr. Simons, the foreign minister, and it was with the utmost difficulty that the other leaders prevented Stinnes from getting the people's party, which he controls, on record against the government. The people's party is a member of the coalition. When it decides to withdraw, the cabinet will fall.

Tonight it is believed that the government's overthrowal will hang in the balance pending the American negotiations. A reichstag debate is scheduled for Monday.

The Simons forces are working desperately to obtain a favorable vote Monday, but the opposition believes that even should the government survive, it is only a matter of a week or a fortnight before a collapse is inevitable.

Ambassador Mayer at Paris and Ambassador Solf to Japan are mentioned as the probable successors to the chancellorship and foreign ministry respectively.

WOULD KEEP GOLD HOME.

PARIS, April 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—Germany instead of either agreeing or refusing to transfer the gold reserve of the reichsbank to occupied territory in the Rhineland, as the allied reparations commission had demanded, has offered to agree not to export or permit the exportation of gold from Germany before Oct. 1 next.

Germany's note in reply to the reparations commission, delivered to the commission today, in which this offer is tendered, says her proffered agreement would adequately protect the allies, who had demanded the transfer because the second paragraph of article 248 of the treaty of Versailles, prohibiting the exportation of gold, becomes inoperative May 1.

FRANCE IS AROUSED

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 23.—Before Monday the French government, through Ambassador Jusserand, will semi-officially advise the American state department of the exact sum France must obtain as reparations from Germany.

This was decided upon hastily late last night just prior to Premier Briand's departure for the Lympne conference to avoid any possibility of President Harding transmitting as satisfactory to America new German proposal which would fall far below the "necessary amount."

Watch Next Move of U. S.

Fears are expressed here that either the United States will forward to the allies as "acceptable" German proposals which France cannot entertain or will request information and advice from Paris, London, Brussels, and Rome, with the result that the conversations may last beyond May 1, when the French have announced they will take new military sanctions.

Although most of the Paris newspapers express satisfaction over the American note to Germany, the independent newspapers make no bones of their discontent over President Harding's willingness to become a mediator for Germany.

Emile Bure, a close friend of Premier Briand, writing in today's Eclair, says:

"Yesterday America was our associate. Today Germany asks her to arbitrate our war damages. How can President Harding intervene without repudiating the very doctrine which permitted America's rejection of the Versailles treaty?

"It is astonishing that the United States, after Switzerland and Czecho-Slovakia refused to do so, consented to transmit to the allies German proposals, if any were presented deemed by America to be worthy of discussion.

Wants Support of French Cause.

"It hurts us that President Harding hesitates to declare openly that our cause is just and also is the cause of the entire civilized world."

Gustave Herve says in Victoire:

"If France accepts American arbitration then the financial aid of America is assured to France for reconstruction and to Germany for paying her reparations."

Joseph Denais declares in the Libre Parole:

"President Harding has pushed conciliation to its extreme limit by consenting to present German proposals to the allies if he esteemed them acceptable. Such an act is not simple transmission, but really a recommendation binding the United States if Germany fails to execute her promises.

"America, thus, is forced to collaborate with the allies in all measures necessary to force Germany to carry out her proposals."

Sees U. S. as World Leader.

Maurice Geneste says in Avenir:

"The United States agrees by suggestions and advice to solve the reparations problem, which signifies first that America resumes a leading role in European affairs and, second, that she no longer refuses to accept her part in collaborating toward liquidation of the war

"The most serious result of the note is that it provokes new discussions, thus causing delay to application of the new coercive measures envisaged for May 1."

In Le Figaro Jacques Roujon writes:

"The United States requests us to find a solution for the reparations problem. France must state clearly what she wants. Hesitation no longer is permissible."

Significantly enough, Le Temps and the Journal des Debats, the semi-official papers do not discuss the American notes concretely. Le Temps warns, however:

"On May 1 part of the German debt falls due. Germany does not pay nor give any immediate guarantee. She talks and she arms.

"It is necessary that she pay and disarm. France is ready to take the necessary steps. Do the allies intend to participate or, restrained through their other tasks, to give us only their sympathies?"

A Tardy Entrance.

Paul Aubriot writes in Bon Soir:

"The United States enters the peace negotiations late as she entered the war late. We waited for America long and impatiently.

"In the last two years America has given us many deceptions. It is permissible to state that the Americans have no interest in alienating French sympathies.

"International difficulties exist outside Europe. No one ignores that Japan is watching America's mistakes with view to using them to her advantage when the time comes."

Writing in La Presse, Louis Maffert says:

"Part of the French press professes satisfaction over the American response to Germany. I am not satisfied at all

"Must more Lusitanias be sunk to make America understand that no good can come from the Germans?"

DOORN COUNCIL SAYS EX-KAISER MUST PAY TAXES

DOORN, April 23.—[United Press.]—Former Emperor Wilhelm tonight faced the displeasure of the Doorn borough council.

Some members referred to the former all-highest as a "tax dodger."

"How is it that Wilhelm has not been billed for last year's taxes?" demanded an inquisitive councilman.

The mayor replied that Wilhelm had asked a delay, stating it would take a year at least to estimate the amount of the royal income on which the tax is based.

"His ex-mightiness will gain nothing by waiting," the mayor assured the council. "We shall see that all arrears are paid up."

U.S. NOTE STRIKES POPULAR CHORD IN ALIEN PRESS

Germany Expected to Act Sensibly on Debts.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Comment filtering through from Europe on the American note to Germany, in which President Harding declined to serve as umpire in the reparations deadlock, but agreed to submit proper suggestions from Germany to the allies which might lead to reopening discussion of indemnities, is giving the Washington administration considerable encouragement.

Reports from Great Britain, Paris, and Berlin are satisfactory to the President and Secretary Hughes. They believe the allies will be responsive to President Harding if Germany forwards suggestions that will constitute a proper basis for discussion.

Wait for Berlin Move.

Germany is expected to reply in good faith to the American note, and some response which may be in the nature of a preliminary to a reparations alternative proposal is expected here within forty-eight hours.

How far the Harding policy may carry the United States into the reparations discussion is problematical, but there are indications here that the allies, should a real basis for renewed discussion be submitted, may invite representatives of the United States to participate in the conference.

Inasmuch as this government has made it so emphatic in its recent communications that it is deeply interested in all the economic issues resultant from the war, the invitation probably would be accepted, it being understood, however, the United States would be party to no understanding which would in any way restrict the interests of this nation.

Studies New Commission.

In some quarters there is a report that the President already has in mind the personnel of a commission to look after the interests of the United States in the reparations discussions to come.

Former Secretary Root is being mentioned in this connection. Former Under Secretary of State Norman Davis also is mentioned.

FLYING TERRORS OF NAVY NOW TO SOAR FOR TRADE

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—The first of a series of naval aircraft converted into flying boats for commercial and civilian aviation, was launched here today in the presence of Secretary of the Navy Denby, Capt. Moffett, director of naval aviation, and senators and congressmen interested in commercial aviation.

These boats are the naval coast patrol flying boats which did such remarkable service during the war in patrolling the entire Atlantic coast in all kinds of weather. They have been converted into six seat open cockpit and six seat inclosed cabin flying craft. They are equipped with 400 horsepower Liberty motors, have a wing spread of 72 feet, and a speed of about 75 miles per hour.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—While France is trying to get a look at the color of Germany's money American business men will see "perhaps $100,000,000" worth, according to Edmund Rumpler, director general of the Rumpler works in Germany. He arrived here today.

"I am over here to buy American machinery and other goods for which there is a heavy demand in Germany and I expect to spend a lot of money, perhaps $100,000,000," he explained.

In 1897 Rumpler, it is said, designed the first German automobile with horizontal two cylinder engine, known as the Nesseldorfer car.

FAITH

No matter what others may say of James Novak, former cashier of the Aetna State bank, who is sought by the agents of a bonding company on a charge of misappropriating $12,400 of the bank funds, at least eight persons maintain his innocence and believe he will return and refute his accusers. The eight persons are Novak's wife and seven children. The picture shows Daniel, 5 years old; Florence, 7, and Helen, 3, as they waited in their home at Hollywood yesterday for their father's return.

PROMOTION OF EDWARDS GIVEN COMMITTEE O. K.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—The senate military affairs committee today voted to recommend confirmation of the promotion of Brig. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards to be a major general. The action was taken by a vote of 12 to 3. The negative votes were cast by Democratic senators, who questioned Gen. Edwards' fitness for the appointment.

Gen. Edwards was commander of the New England national guard division—the 26th—and was removed from his command while at the front and sent home. Much mystery surrounded the affair and the war department carefully guarded the facts concerning it from publicity.

The treatment accorded Gen. Edwards aroused widespread indignation in New England, where he was immensely popular, and one of the first acts of the Harding administration was to place his name at the head of twelve brigadiers slated for promotion.

Senators at today's meeting of the military committee called attention to oft repeated reports that former Secretary of War Baker "broke" Gen. Edwards through political spite and they demanded the records.

Betrothed? Really, I Don't Know, Elsie Janis Says

PARIS, April 23.—[United Press.]—Miss Elsie Janis, American actress, apparently is so preoccupied with other things that she cannot remember the mere fact of whether or not she is engaged. She had to be prompted today by her mother, Mrs. Bierbower.

The United Press asked Miss Janis, who is playing here with own show, to confirm reports that she is engaged to a British lord. Before she replied she turned to her mother and, after a brief conversation, assured the correspondent that the reports are untrue.

BANK AID, SHORT $12,000, FLEES; TOO MUCH POKER

Jimmy Novak did not sit in at the little old poker game at "the club" last night. For Jimmie is a hunted man, the confessed embezzler of about $12,000 from the Aetna State bank at Fullerton and Lincoln avenue, where he was cashier; and Saturday night poker is blamed for his plight. While agents of the National Surety company are seeking him, his wife and seven children are waiting at home, unbelieving and hurt.

Novak has been in full charge of the bank, in the absence of its president and vice president, for several weeks. On Thursday the bank examiners arrived to check over the accounts. At 11:30 o'clock Friday morning, just before the examiners were to go into the vaults to check the securities, Novak hastened to "lunch" half an hour earlier than usual.

Cashier and Bonds Gone.

He did not return. Yesterday the bank examiners discovered $12,400 in Liberty bonds also were missing.

According to Maurice Berkson, attorney for the bank, Novak averted discovery of his peculations for two days by locking the vaults before he left Friday. The examiners were unable to get in because no one at the bank could open the vaults. James Maltman, the president, was in New York and D. S. Davis, vice president, was ill.

No suspicion was attached to Novak's absence at first. When he continued "missing" the bank's officials, fearing sudden death or accident, ordered a search. Then Mr. Davis opened the vaults and it was found the bonds were gone. Suspicion turned to Novak.

Letter Confesses All.

"By the time you receive this," it stated in substance, "you will probably have discovered that I am about $12,000 in default. I have taken this from time to time and have now gone away for a few weeks to try and get the money to square accounts."

Attorney Berkson declared that at the request of the surety company no warrant for Novak will be taken out until Monday.

It was at Novak's home in Hollywood, just west of Riverside, that the "little old Saturday night game" was revealed. Mrs. Ruth Novak, his wife, told about it.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 23.

Senator Knox has revised his peace resolution to make more clear the qualifications to protect American rights and interests. Congress is expected to dispose of the matter early in May.

The administration is awaiting a reply from the German government to its note declining to act as umpire in the reparations deadlock, but is encouraged by the apparent willingness on the part of the allies to entertain alternative proposals.

The free tolls fight is expected to be renewed in congress beginning next week, Senator Borah having determined to call the interoceanic canals committee to consider the American free tolls legislation proposed.

After a fight made against him by Democratic senators, the senate military committee today agreed to recommend confirmation of the nomination of Brig. Gen. Clarence Edwards to be major general.

The census figures for 1920 disclose that Illinois has 1,204,403 foreign born population. More than 205,000 were born in Germany.

The soldier memorial tree planting idea being urged by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE was enthusiastically indorsed today by Associate Forester E. A. Sherman of the forestry bureau and Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry association.

$1,000,000 HEIRS SMILE AT NEW WILL AS 'PERIL'

Assert Court Will Throw Testament Out.

Clarence and Josephine Lasier were untroubled yesterday by statements of St. Charles and Aurora attorneys that it would be necessary for them to break the will of Mrs. Robert J. Haines before they could have possession of the $1,000,000 estate left by her son, Charles H. Haines.

The two were awarded $1,000,000 Friday by a decision of the Supreme court, which declared the will made by Charles H. Haines in 1887 is valid and that made in 1907 is void. The first will found, after being hidden away thirty years, gives the Lasiers as legal heirs the major part of the estate, which, according to the terms of the second, had been turned over to Mercy hospital in Chicago and the St. Charles board of education.

Cite Mother's Will.

Aurora attorneys asserted Mrs. Robert J. Haines after her son's death had made a will giving the property to the St. Charles schools, and contended the Lasiers would have to break this before getting their $1,000,000.

"I am not worried by that story," laughingly said Mr. Lasier, a broker. That will was made on Jan. 13, 1915, about six months after the death of Charles H. Haines. Mrs. Haines signed it with her mark, a cross. She did not know what she was doing and was incapable of handling her business affairs. She died three months later, aged 97.

"We had a suit in the Kane county courts to break the will. When we found the lost 1887 will we just went on having this case continued. There are some technicalities that will cause it to be thrown out of court at the first hearing."

Inherit Old Homestead.

The Haines homestead in St. Charles was built more than fifty years ago. Today it is still one of the landmarks. Charles H. Haines and his wife were born and raised there. This huge, rambling home will now go to the Lasiers.

SENATORS PLAN SPEEDY PEACE WITH GERMANS

But Berlin Must Pay War Debts.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—The United States will be at peace with Germany finally and officially early next month, unless the administration intervenes to slow up the progress of the Knox resolution in congress.

Senator Knox has revised the resolution to conform to minor objections raised against it at a meeting of the foreign relations committee last Thursday.

Meets Various Objections.

In its latest form, the resolution more adequately protects American rights and interests under the Austrian treaty and removes all danger of misconstruction of the language dealing with the disposition of property held by the alien property custodian.

The redrafted resolution will be laid before the senate foreign relations committee Monday. The expectation is that it will be reported favorably to the senate at once. The plan is to have it taken up in the senate immediately, giving it precedence over the emergency tariff bill.

Reports reached the senate today that the state department would prefer to have no final action taken on the Knox resolution until after May 1 in order to give adequate time for the study of Germany's next proposal for meeting the allied reparations demands.

Stands Pat on Reparations.

It was reported that the state department was anxious to avoid giving Germany the slightest ground for hoping that the United States was relenting in its attitude towards the reparations question.

This, however, will not interfere with the senate's plan to take up the resolution early next week. The measure is certain to reopen the whole question of international relations and the Democrats, who still cling to the Versailles treaty, probably will offer considerable resistance to the resolution. There is little likelihood that the resolution can be adopted by the senate with less than a week's debate, which would carry it to May 1.

There's Another Resolution.

House leaders are inclined to defer to the action of the senate notwithstanding the attitude of Chairman Porter of the house foreign affairs committee. Mr. Porter has drafted a resolution of his own, somewhat different from the Knox resolution, and wants to have the house consider it without waiting for action by the senate. Other house leaders state, however, that they are entirely willing for the senate to take the lead in this matter in view of the fact that it is far better fortified with information dealing with the subject.

When the house receives the resolution from the senate, it will be prepared to act promptly and if no unexpected hitch occurs, the resolution ought to be in the president's hands within the next two or three weeks.

JAIL FOR TIGER'S GRANDSON, BOGUS CHECK ARTIST

PARIS, April 23.—Georges Gatineau, grandson of former Premier Clemenceau, whose dealings in American automobiles and other war stocks after the armistice resulted in his being charged with the issuance of alleged bogus checks aggregating nearly 1,000,000 francs, today was sentenced by default to two years' imprisonment and fined 50,000 francs.

Gatineau, who is said to be in England, was also ordered to refund 155,000 francs to one creditor and to pay 1 franc damages to each. All other claims against him were settled, withdrawn or quashed.

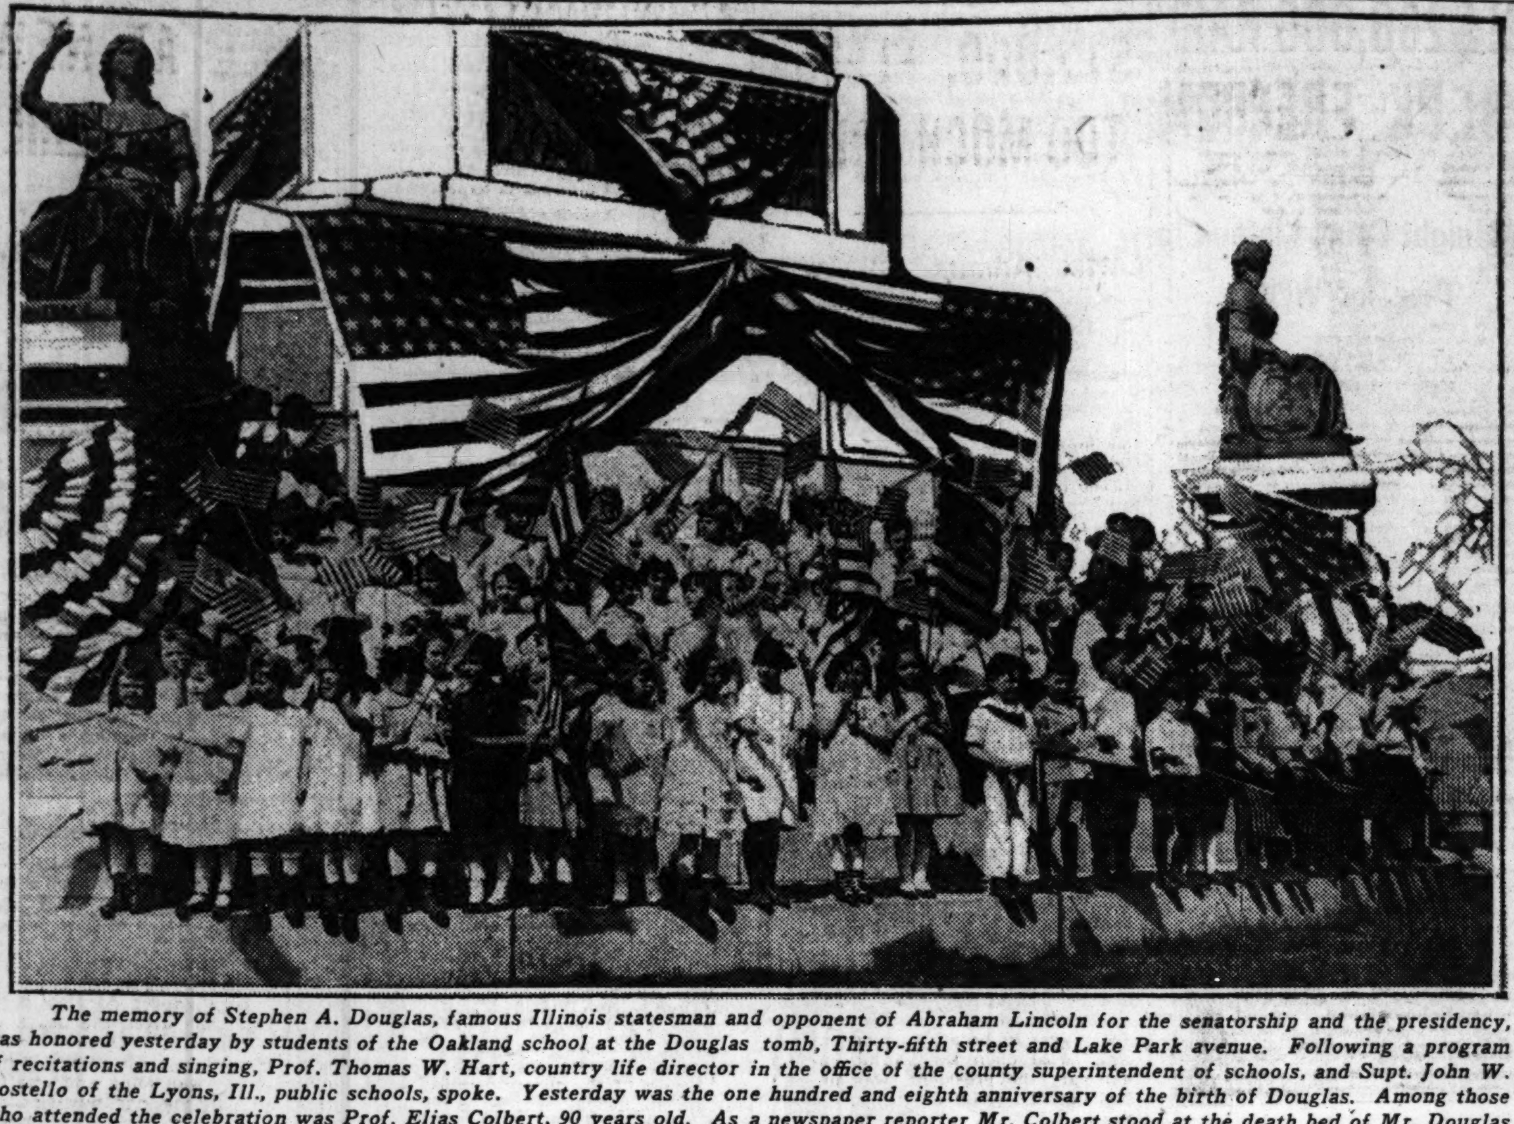
INNOCENCE PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE GREAT



The memory of Stephen A. Douglas, famous Illinois statesman and opponent of Abraham Lincoln for the senatorship and the presidency, was honored yesterday by students of the Oakland school at the Douglas tomb, Thirty-fifth street and Lake Park avenue. Following a program of recitations and singing, Prof. Thomas W. Hart, country life director in the office of the county superintendent of schools, and Supt. John W. Costello of the Lyons, Ill., public schools, spoke. Yesterday was the one hundred and eighth anniversary of the birth of Douglas. Among those who attended the celebration was Prof. Elias Colbert, 90 years old. As a newspaper reporter Mr. Colbert stood at the death bed of Mr. Douglas in the old Tremont house, Dearborn and Lake streets, in 1861.

WAR SKELETON GIVES AMNESTY BILL A VICTORY

French Hero Balked; He Tells Why.

PARIS, April 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—After the chamber of deputies adopted unanimously today an amendment to the amnesty bill, under which an appeal may be taken "from any and all sentences imposed by courts martial during the war upon the simple request of the soldier affected, if living, or his heirs, if dead," the general amnesty bill was passed this afternoon.

The vote on the measure, which embraces virtually all offenses against the military laws, with the exception of high treason and desertion in the face of the enemy, was 528 for to 14 against it.

Navy Mutineers Not Affected.

Adoption of the amendment came after a dramatic speech by Deputy Jade of Finistere, who commanded a company throughout the late war. He recalled that before Souan in Champagne orders came to execute a surprise attack in broad daylight without artillery preparation. Jade refused to send his company over the top, but he was not court martialed.

According to the narrative of the veteran, the officers of the company next in line ordered their men to attack, but the latter refused to leave the trenches, saying they preferred to be shot and buried where they were rather than hang on the barbed wire for days.

The Refusal Spreads.

The general commanding the division then instructed the French artillery to turn its guns on the trenches where this company was stationed. The colonel commanding the artillery, M. Jade said, refused point blank, but he was not court martialed.

A few days later, continued the speaker, several men of the company were tried and shot, although a short time previously they had volunteered for dangerous missions.

"This execution was abominable," he shouted, "and I ask the government to give us guarantees against similar outrages in the future and redress for those condemned now lying in fortresses."

Deputy Ignace, who had opposed the amendment, immediately moved its adoption, Louis Barthou seconded it, and the amendment was voted unanimously.

COPS AND U. S. DRY AGENTS CLASH IN N. Y. HOOTCH RAID

New York, April 23.—The first clash for authority today between the police and federal agents since the state's new prohibition law went into effect resulted in victory for the local bluecoats—but not until reinforcements were called.

When two policemen took a ten ton truck to confiscate 638 cases of champagne, vermouth, and sauterne, which, they said, was illegally stored in a merchant's warehouse, they fould a number of federal enforcement agents, who denied that the police had a right to remove the liquor.

The two husky policemen, however, appeared unimpressed. Summoned by telephone, several other bluecoats appeared a few minutes later. The federal agents were threatened with arrest if they interferd. Finally they stood aside while the local authorities loaded the truck and drove to police headquarters.

Arrests for alleged violation still were greatly exceeding indictments today. Deputy Commissioner Leach reported seventy-five arrests during the preceding twenty-four hours. The grand jury in Kings county refused to indict in eighteen out of twenty-one cases.

MUST HIRE ANOTHER HALL.

Rockford, Ill., April 23.—[Special.]—Illinois Knights Templar will not be permitted to use Camp Grant barracks during their state conclave here next fall, according to Secretary Weeks. He said it is well established policy of the war department not to lend to other than government agencies the use of military buildings and equipment.

COMET ON WAY TO VISIT EARTH; DUE HERE JUNE 13

Cambridge, Mass., April 23.—Winnecke's comet, the periodic, which, according to Dr. Crommelin, a British astronomer, will approach very near to the earth in June, is increasing gradually in brightness, but is still much too faint to be seen by the naked eye. Word to this effect has been received at the Harvard college observatory from Prof. A. O. Leuschner of the students' observeratory of the University of California at Berkeley.

The comet will approach nearest to the sun on June 13.

Seen as "Shower."

Berkeley, Cal., April 23.—Doubt as to whether Winnecke's comet will be in a position to be seen by the naked eye during its present visitation was expressed today by Prof. Leuschner.

"The only way the phenomena will affect the earth will be in the form of a meteoric shower, which should be somewhat spectacular," he said. "The visitation will not be apparent to the earth until this shower occurs. The comet returns every five and a fraction years."

New Job for Pershing Big Puzzle for His Associates

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Weeks' determination to place Gen. Pershing in charge of plans for war organization of the army is creating considerable discussion among officers of the army. In some quarters the fear is entertained that the proposal will result in stirring up strife within the army organization itself. No open criticism has developed, however, because Secretary Weeks has not made public the details of his plan. He announced that the chief of staff would continue to function in the future as in the past, but until the full plan is made public there will be considerable anxiety among army officers.

"BRONZE APOLLO" TO BOOST CANADA TO U. S. NIMRODS

Montreal, Que., April 22.—[Special.]—Fred Beauvais, Mrs. Stillman's guide, is in the limelight again. He announced today as planning a movement to substitute the Laurentians for the Adirondacks in the liking of American sportsmen and sportswomen. The fact that Quebec is the oasis of the continent, since Ontario and the United States went dry, is not lost sight of in his proposition, and Beauvais' experience as a guide is expected to attract many American sportsmen.

Morris Longstreth, the American writer, recently here, has been engaged by the Century company to produce a descriptive and historic account of the Laurentians. It is thought he will be aided by the provincial government, which is expected to put its airplane service at his disposal.

A new state road to the north is also likely to be built, as a result of this movement.

These Doctors Internal Revenue Collectors, Eh?

Scranton, Pa., April 23.—From the esophagus of a girl, 13, surgeons today removed a silver quarter that had been imbedded there for more than two years. The operation was performed without the use of a knife, the surgeons making use of a rubber tube with an electric light at its lower end. This was forced down the girl's throat. The light revealed the blackened coin. The surgeons then introduced forceps and extracted the quarter.

Relatives Hunt Deaf Mute Brought Here by Motorists

Several days ago Lawrence Parmell, a deaf mute of Fulton, Ill., accepted an invitation of automobile tourists to ride into Chicago. Yesterday his relatives asked THE TRIBUNE to find him. "Mother is on the verge of collapse," wrote E. L. Parmell of Fulton, a brother.

'POSITIVE' ABOUT BOMB SUSPECT AT SCRANTON

New Yorker Identifies Ligi with Case.

New York, April 23.—Two sharp developments marked today the search for the perpetrators of the Wall street bomb explosion last September.

In Scranton, Pa., Tino Ligi was positively identified as a man seen talking to the driver of the death wagon shortly before the tragedy, by Thomas J. Smith of Brooklyn, employed in the legal department of an insurance company in Manhattan.

Think Suicide Was Deranged.

The other incident that caused police activity was the suicide of Adolph La Sar, 57 years old, in his furnished room in Brooklyn. In an incoherent dairy mentioning half a dozen names of men in New York and Chicago, was written:

"They furnished the wagon load of T. N. T. with which I blew up Wall street."

Close examination of the man's effects and inquiry into his habits while in the Brooklyn house, convinced the police tonight that the suicide was deranged and none of the evidence associated him with the crime.

Three wills, leaving his clothing and a few personal effects to persons who could not be located, were among the papers.

"Identification" of Ligi.

Smith, who made the alleged positive identification today of Ligi at Scranton, was formerly a lieutenant in the New York city fire department. Charles Scully, head of the radical squad of the local bureau of the department of justice, accompanied Smith and Raymond Clark, a foreman for a house wrecking firm in this city, and a man named J. Nally to the Pennsylvania jail.

First Clark and Nally were taken into a room in which Ligi and six other men were standing in line, hatless, coatless, and with their collars and ties removed. They failed to identify Ligi as the man they believed to be the driver of the bomb wagon.

Smith, however, according to statements made later by Scully and P. J. Ahearn, who arrested Ligi Monday in Scranton, identified the suspect after he had walked halfway down the line and stood peering into Ligi's face for about half a minute.

Explains Why He Is Positive.

"I was crossing Wall street, near Nassau street, about a half hour before the explosion," Smith explained. "My attention was called to the bomb wagon chiefly, I suppose, because I had been familiar with explosives for many years, and I wondered where the wagon was bound.

"I particularly noticed the horse, which seemed just about able to stand. I walked over and patted the horse on the nose. While I was doing this a man, who I am positive beyond doubt was Ligi, stepped out from the curb and engaged in conversation with the driver of the wagon, who was standing beside it on the street.

"This man seized a man whom I believe to be the driver by the arm and said in an excited voice:

"'Come, get to hell away quick.'

"The driver held back, and I thought for a moment that there was going to be a tussle. The man whom I identified today made one more appeal and then darted away."

His Fourth Divorce in Month; Wives All Blonde

Fort Sheridan boasts the "most married soldier in the country" in the person of Private Albert Adams of the motor transport corps, aged 22. Adams says he was divorced from three wives during the last month, and now his fourth wife is suing for divorce and a payment of $900 in lieu of alimony. All four are blondes, he declares. The next wil be brunette.

RUSS PEASANTS LIKE LOCUSTS ON RAILWAYS

RIGA, April 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The opening of free trade in grain between the peasantry and the cities of Russia has brought about such an utter state of chaos in the railway services that an official decree issued April 15 in Moscow orders sentence of five years in a concentration camp for persons traveling on the railway locomotives and platforms.

According to the newspaper Economic Life of April 20, the free trade decree has resulted in the peasants, "like a stream of lava, overflowing all the railway lines, occupying all the passenger trains, and even the freight trains, riding on the locomotives, on the roofs, and even on the bumpers."

4 Bombs Apprise Fiume Election Day Is Near

FIUME, April 23.—Feeling is running high in connection with the local elections to be held Sunday and four bombs were exploded today, injuring several persons. The police are enforcing the regulations against the carrying of firearms, clubs and canes. They are patrolling the town in pairs.

Several Fascisti were killed and a number wounded when ambushed by Communists today near Piacenza. Daggers were employed in the hand to hand fighting, which occurred at one stage of the attack. Sporadic fighting is still in progress.

Fascisti from Piacenza organized a punitive expedition, which burned Communist headquarters. Socialist headquarters at Bari were burned today.

Barbers Fight Bill That Hits at Massage, Shampoo

Illinois barbers are fighting a bill introduced by State Representative Krump, which would place all "cosmetic therapy" in the hands of licensed facial practitioners. Barbers claim it would eliminate the revenue from massaging and shampooing and force many shops out of business.

The Master Barbers' association yesterday denied any reduction in prices is being considered as a result of the recent decrease in the cost of living.

Raffle Case of "Old Crow"; and It's "Old Crow," Too

Members of a certain fraternal organization which meets at Cass and Ohio streets last night raffled off a case of "fine Old Crow." So well and so secretly had they advertised the raffle that they obtained $2,000. The member who won crowed like a rooster. Then he opened the case. Inside was an old rooster, which also crowed.

VOLSTEAD MIXES BITTER PILL FOR THIRSTY "SICK"

Would Blast Hope Via Palmer Ruling.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Beer drinking shall not return via the w. k. prescription under the Volstead act if the framer of that bill has his way.

Following the announcement that a new set of regulations, limiting the amount of beer and wine a physician may prescribe at one time to four and seven-eighths gallons of beer and three gallons of wine, had been drawn up for the approval of David H. Blair, new commissioner of internal revenue, Rep. Andrew J. Volstead drafted a bill today absolutely prohibiting the use of beer and wine for medicinal purposes.

Issues His Ultimatum.

"My bill is intended to wipe out the Palmer ruling," said Mr. Volstead. "If the new commissioner limits the size and number of beer and wine prescriptions so these alcoholic beverages shall not be used for improper purposes, I may withhold my bill for a time.

"Full authority to control the situation rests with the commissioner. He can make regulations that will make the country just as dry as he wants. If he fails to do so now, congress will probably do it for him."

The regulations which stirred Mr. Volstead to action, are based on the theory that it would be impractical for a person to obtain a prescription for each bottle of beer ordered by the physician.

Volstead to Piperize.

Mr. Volstead expressed a determination to watch the enforcement officials closely. If they show a disposition to stop the liquor traffic he will be satisfied, he said, but oherwise he proposes to write into the law regulations that will shut off beer and wine entirely and make the country "dry as dust." He is confident he can put the most stringent dry laws through the house, which, he said, is "drier" now than ever before.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Kramer today announced a modification of the ban against withdrawals of liquor from warehouses to permit wholesale druggists to draw bonded booze out, effective May 16. This does not include wholesale liquor dealers, it was pointed out.

On the other hand, prohibition forces have tightened up on whisky consumption. Last year 40,000,000 gallons were consumed under the permit system. Only 6,000,000 gallons are in sight for the "sick" under the present rate of the doling out of permits.

SETTLEMENT CHILDREN ENTERTAINED.

One hundred and fifty children from the American house, the Association house, and the Northwestern University Settlement house were guests of the Drama league in the clubroom of the Art institute yesterday. Dr. William E. Barton of the First Congregationalist church, Oak Park, spoke on the landing of the Pilgrim fathers.

TRIBUNE ACTS ON FAHERTY'S FEE CHALLENGE

Defiance Over Experts Brings Court Action.

other information regarding the appropriations must be presented.

Includes "Soft Service" Item.

When the city council passed the budget for 1920 it made appropriations from bond funds totaling $26,600,000 which had been approved by the voters for the improvement of Western, Ogden, Ashland avenues, South Water, Robey, and Randolph streets. On each improvement it had a specific appropriation "For services of building experts" and made another appropriation "For expert services and commissioners' fees," and also for various other kinds of expert work.

Then at the bottom of the list of appropriations for each improvement it added a blanket appropriation item to cover anything which might have been overlooked. This was the "soft service" item. The ordinance said that this item in each instance was "for such other expenditures in connection with this improvement as may be ordered by the city council."

After diligent and painstaking search no record can be found that the city council ever gave a single order to use any of the money appropriated for "soft service" in any item. Chairman Richert and other members of the finance committee have also said that the council never passed any ordinance or resolution permitting the use of appropriations in these items.

Harding Fails to Appear.

The committee requested Controller Harding to appear before it and tell by what authority he permitted money to be paid out of these "soft service" accounts, but he failed to appear.

The records show that Mesce, for example, was paid $395,376 from the "soft service" appropriations of his total collections of $460,418. The three real estate experts also drew heavily from these accounts. Of Lyons' total collections amounting to $580,326 he took from the "soft service" appropriations $524,465. Waller and Merigold drew the same amounts from these "S" appropriations.

Comparatively only a small amount had been paid out of these soft service accounts when the matter was officially and directly brought to the attention of Mayor Thompson, Corporation Counsel Ettelson, Controller Harding, President Faherty of the board of local improvements, and perhaps others connected with the city administration.

The general subject of expert fees has been discussed and debated for several years. The amounts were getting so large in the opinion of the finance committee in 1917—although trivial in contrast with the amounts now involved—that it appointed a committee to investigate the subject. This committee was headed by former Ald. Willis O. Nance. It submitted a report May 24, 1918, and ordered it printed Nov. 18 of that same year. It criticized the system. Faherty then as now was the advocate of enormous fees.

The recent revival of the subject came about a year ago when Ald. Wallace charged that Mesce and Lynch had collected $100,000 for only three months' work. At that time it was looked upon as a sensation.

The council finance committee became alarmed. It recommended an ordinance to the city council repealing the order and ordinance by which the five experts were employed. The council passed the repealing ordinance June 29 last. To be dead certain that the experts were knocked off the pay roll, another ordinance was passed for that purpose, Aug. 26 last.

Ordinance Vetoed by Mayor.

On Nov. 10 Mayor Thompson vetoed the council action. In his veto message he said that he had been advised by the law department that the council was without power to amend the appropriation ordinance in the manner it had attempted.

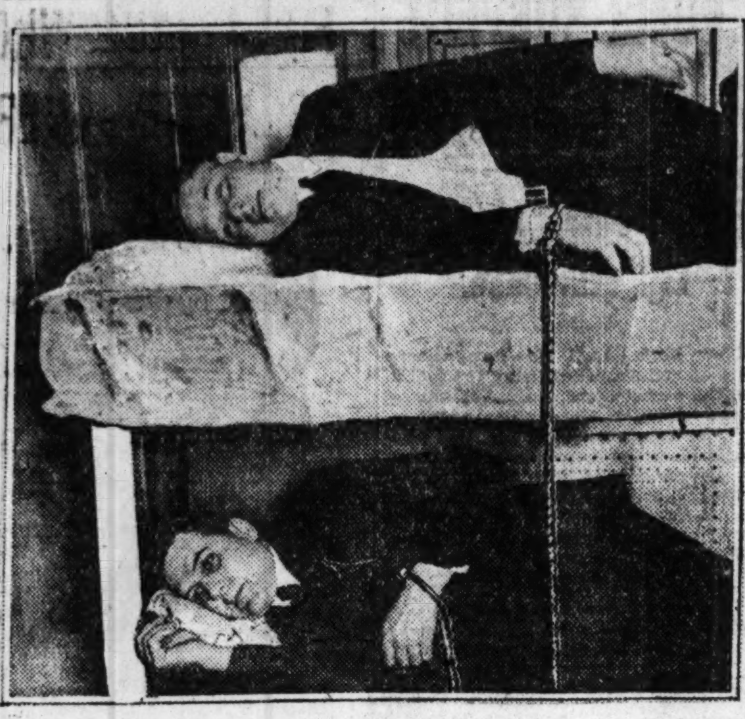
"By reason of said veto," reads the bill of The Tribune company, "the said defendants were enabled to carry out the object of said conspiracy and confederation and to pay unto said Mesce and Lynch from the funds of said city the enormous sums hereinafter mentioned."

There the matter rested until Jan. 26 last, when Ald. Wallace charged in a session of the finance committee that more than $1,000,000 had been paid to Mesce and Lynch for last year's services. Four days later Controller Harding verified the charge, saying that the payments totaled $1,004,586.

The committee started an investigation, which ran along until after the April election of aldermen. Then when the committee attempted to proceed a quorum did not attend. The close aldermanic followers of the city administration failed to appear. There the matter officially rests, so far as the committee is concerned.

During this last investigation Faherty has sought to justify the fees paid the experts. He placed a large advertisement in the newspapers and also sent a long communication to the city council. The committee has heard several architects and engineers who gave the impression that the fees paid are excessive.

HOW SWEET IS SLEEP



Police officers who have laid awake nights guarding prisoners in transit will appreciate this new idea in handcuffs. A pair of ordinary manacles are connected with a six foot steel tempered chain. The chain is covered with leather so it will not clink and annoy Pullman passengers. It will permit the officer to sleep in the one berth while his prisoner reposes above. William Baldwin (shown in the lower berth) and Edward R. Martin, both detectives employed by Ben Newmark, chief investigator to State's Attorney Crowe, perfected the device. Detective William Lang is posing as the "prisoner" in the photograph.

GEM MEN HELD IN $260,000 RAID SEEK FREEDOM

Midnight Court Listens to Plea for Writs.

Julius and Leo Reingold, jewelers in the Kesner building, held for two days in connection with the theft of $260,000 worth of diamonds from Leroy Present, made application last night at 11 o'clock to be released on writs of habeas corpus.

The writs were requested from Judge Williams by Attorneys Max Korshak, Alex Bernstein, and Abel Krepske, who declared the Reingolds were being held without cause.

There was some delay in the proceedings. A 11 o'clock Lieut. Edward Grady appeared in court. He said Chief Fitzmorris and Chief of Detectives Hughes, named in the writs, could not be found and he did not know where the prisoners were. The judge issued writs and made them forthwith, then sent his bailiff, C. J. Aaronson, to round up Fitzmorris and Hughes and the prisoners.

Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes previously had announced he was holding the two because he was convinced the robbery was a frameup and he was waiting for them to make statements.

Victim Suspects Frameup.

Two men came into the Reingold offices on the fifteenth floor of the building Friday morning, bound and gagged Julius Reingold and Present, and escaped. Present had been lured to the place by a decoy letter. He is the representative of Phillip Present & Son of Rochester, N. Y., diamond importers.

Present is also of the belief that the robbery was deliberately planned. He doubts Reingold's story that he, too, was robbed. He and Chief Hughes both say Reingold was not tied as tightly as Present was.

Morris Levinson, diamond merchant in the State-Lake building who was held for a time, has been released. He had been in Reingold's office just before the robbery. He said Reingold had given him nine diamonds to sell for $2,000 though they were worth $2,300.

Gem Thief Offers Aid.

A feature of yesterday's developments was a wire received by Present from a diamond thief in Pittsburgh whom he had once befriended. The thief said he was coming to Chicago to aid in the recovery of the gems.

A clew that led to Decatur flickered out. Two men sought to sell some "diamonds" to a pawnbroker in that city. It was learned the "diamonds" were paste.

Evanston Tire Thieves Rob Students and Doctor

Thieves stole two extra tires and rims from the auto of Edward Mayo, Beta Pheta Pi house, valued at $150, and two tires and wire wheels from the machine of George Schrader, valued at $200, while the cars were in front of Patten gymnasium, Evanston, Friday night. Two spare tires also were stolen from the car of Dr. William R. Parkes, 1840 Chicago avenue, Evanston.

GRAIN RATES STAND.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—The interstate commerce commission denied today the application of the Puget sound cities for a reopening of the grain rates case from the Snake river basin. Schedules recently prescribed increased rates 5 per cent to the Puget sound cities and decreased them 5 per cent to Portland.

'A ROSE BY ANY NAME'; B. KINDER IS AN AUTO COP

He was indignant. A cop had left in his auto a card requesting him to report to Evanston police headquarters and pay a fine because his auto lights were out.

"It isn't that I'm kicking about," he said. "But this fellow signed the card, 'B. Kinder.' A joke's a joke, but I'll not be insulted. I demand this policeman's name."

The sergeant smiled. He had been asked the question a hundred times by equally indignant motorists.

"The officer's name," he said, "is B. Kinder."

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

A Great Physician Said:

"It's not so much how long you sleep, as how well you sleep that counts."

He spoke the truth. Eight hours of sound, restful sleep refreshes more than ten hours of dream-troubled hours in bed.

We would all be happier if we would realize the importance of sleep and the fact that to get 100 per cent value out of sleep, we must sleep on a good bedspring.

Just any spring will not do—not by a long way. The average coil, woven wire or national spring makes it impossible for the body to lie relaxed and at ease. It makes restful sleep impossible.

So be particular about the spring you use.

Consider carefully the advantages of the De Luxe Spring—the spring scientifically constructed to rest the body. This spring is so designed that it easily accommodates itself to the body without excessive pressure on prominent parts of the anatomy.

Examine the De Luxe at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare the De Luxe with any spring at any price, the more certainly you will recognize its superior, luxurious comfort. It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel, and on the side rail appears the Rome Quality Trade-Mark, which identifies all Rome products. For wood or metal beds.

CLUB LEADERS LAUD TREES AS WAR MEMORIALS

Plan Meets with Favor on All Sides.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The entire country is responding to the plan of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to plant trees as soldier memorials.

"Besides being a wonderful thing sentimentally," said Col. George T Buckingham, president of the Union League club, "it is time people were awake to the fact that in a few generations the country will have no trees. It is highly important and should appeal even if you haven't the necessary amount of patriotism to spur you on to help the great work."

The General Federation of Women's Clubs writes that the Illinois women are the first to secure a planting plan for its 170 miles of Lincoln highway. Illinois' memorial tree is the oak, and these federated clubs, with the help of the schools, have already planted hundreds of memory trees.

But that isn't enough. They want to do more, and ask to be a part of the organization that is to give America great avenues of shade trees that will be famous for all time to come. Mrs. Ida Evans Arnold, chairman of the federation's roads and Lincoln highway committee, spoke for the country's clubwomen.

Proud of Idea.

Mrs. F. C. Farwell, president of the Fortnightly club and prominent member of the Garden Club of America, wrote James Keeley, who suggested the memorial tree planting campaign, and said:

"I am proud and thrilled at the 'tree planting' suggestion. Many more are, too, I suspect. It's a truly inspirational suggestion. I wrote at once to the editor of our Garden Club of America Magazine to ask her to mention it in the current number, suggesting some fifty-one clubs take up the idea."

Britten I. Budd, president of the Chicago Elevated railways, will serve on the committee that will further plans for the Illinois tree planting. The meeting of this committee will be held at the Union League club as soon as those interested in state forestry, heads of service, and patriotic organizations, club representatives, and others can be brought together.

12,000 Boy Scouts, 12,000 Trees.

Dr. W. H. Hurd, Boy Scout executive for Chicago, says that at the end of the year there will be 12,000 Scouts here, There are 8,000 now, and members are coming in at the rate of from 400 to 600 a month.

"Every boy," he announced, "will plant a tree. I am sure of that, and it will be a joy for him to do it."

J. R. Lambert of the State Horticultural society writes:

"I heartily indorse THE TRIBUNE'S plan of planting trees along our highways as a memorial to our soldiers, and I am sure it will meet with the coöperation and approval of the horticulturalist in our state."

Aurora Men Get in Line.

H. A. Bliss, secretary of the chamber of commerce at Aurora, and J. A. Young, one of the committee working out the plan, says that the chambers of commerce of Aurora, Joliet, and Elgin have gotten together and started tree planting along the Lincoln highway from Joliet to Aurora, to Geneva, and on to Elgin. He says they will all be glad to coöperate with THE TRIBUNE in the greater work of lining all the great highways with memory trees.

The Youth's Companion has signified its intention of helping. The state of Missouri has already taken action to set aside a strip or strips of land to be adorned in memory of Missouri's soldiers, sailors, and marines.

PARISH CLUB PLAY TONIGHT.

The Parish club of St. Alphonsus parish will present "Stop, Thief" at St. Alphonsus athenaeum, Southport, Oakdale, and Lincoln avenues, tonight. Miss Gertrude Wuerth will play the principal part.

THEY'LL NOT FORGET!

Ogle county, under the direction of Mrs. Horace G. Kauffman of Oregon, chairman of women's organizations, Council of National Defense, has already planted trees in honor of her soldiers and sailors of the great war—a hard maple for those who lost their lives, and a white elm for the living—in a row along Rock river at Oregon, opposite Lorado Taft's statue of Black Hawk. The trees are marked by a concrete pier, on which is a bronze plate, lettered "Service Row, in Honor of Ogle County Soldiers and Sailors in Great War, 1919." The dedication ceremony, shown above, took place Aug. 29, 1920. Several towns, other than Oregon, have similar memorials.

TREE MEMORIAL IS EDUCATIONAL AS WELL AS IDEAL

U. S. Bureau Indorses Tribune Plan.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Educational possibilities of memorial tree planting for soldiers along the highways of the country as urged by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE were discussed here today by Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Forestry association.

Indorsement of the idea also came from E. A. Sherman, associate forester of the department of agriculture, who declared that living monuments of trees to American soldiers were more fitting than "inanimate blocks of stone" and quite as permanent.

Mr. Pack insisted that the memorial tree plan would have a practical as well as an ideal influence.

"In the memorial tree planting campaign," Mr. Pack said, "we will find the greatest good. If this nation can be turned to a nation of tree planters and a nation realizing the value of trees to the economic life of the country, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will have had a part in the greatest of all things that a newspaper can do—that is, the direction of the thought of the people along the right lines.

"The planting of such living monuments is more fitting than erecting blocks of stone or granite and quite as permanent, the life of a tree being from 200 to 1,000 years," Associate Forester Sherman said.

BOOZE RUNNERS MEET A JINX AT SHERIFF'S GARAGE

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 23.—[Special.]—Two men, giving the names of John Serriet of Joliet, Ill., and Allen Long of Lockport, Ill., stopped at Deputy Sheriff Cook's garage in the village of Saline this morning to have their car replenished with gas. Cook casually asked, "How many have you got?"

"Twenty-five cases," they replied.

They had; also they waived examination and are bound over to the May term of Circuit court under $2,000 bail. They admitted they were driving to Chicago. They had real Canadian Club, 300 quarts of it.

HORSE KICK FATAL.

Rock Island, Ill., April 23.—L. H. McNeal, a farmer near Sherrard, Ill., was almost instantly killed this morning when kicked by a horse.

IOWA OFFICIAL FOR PLANTING OF U. S. WAR TREES

Ames, Ia., April 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The idea of planting memorial trees on our national highways and in other public places is a splendid one. Every county and community through which these highways pass should plant trees to commemorate the heroic deeds of those who gave up their lives in defense of our country. Why not extend the memorial idea to the veterans of the civil war as well?

I have this further suggestion to make: That in planting such memorial trees that only the hardy, long lived ones be used, that we confine our selections to the native trees. I would not, therefore, plant such trees as the Norway maple or white birch. My selection would be the American elm, hard maple, basswood, and oaks for this northern country. In the south other types should be selected, adapted to the particular region. I am also heartily in favor of only planting definite kinds over certain highways.

L. H. PAMMEL,
President State Board of Conservation.

HUSBAND SPIRITS PLAGUE VICTIM FROM HOSPITAL

Mrs. William Gallagher, wife of the cashier of the sanitary district and a tuberculosis victim, who was forcibly placed in a hospital after a struggle with two quarantine officers Thursday night, remained in quarantine less than an hour, Health Commissioner Robertson learned yesterday. Gallagher appeared in the county hospital and took her away in a taxicab.

"The hospital authorities tell me Gallagher said he planned to take his wife to the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium," Dr. Robertson said. "While the attendants' backs were turned the couple slipped out. They did not appear at the sanitarium."

"We are searching for Mrs. Gallagher, and when she is found she will not be permitted to remain with her children," Dr. Robertson declared.

Fred Neff, wounded gunfighter and suspected bandit, was kidnaped from St. James hospital at Chicago Heights early yesterday morning—but he's in custody of the police again, and the three friends who aided him are also under arrest.

FRED NEFF.

Neff, one of the "toughs" of Chicago Heights, shot it out with Policeman Bill Patten in a dark garage on the night of April 6. The men fired only at the gun flashes and Patten fired but four times.

Neff was shot twice in each leg. Patten was unharmed. Patten, who was a lieutenant in the Pittsburgh police department some years before, has had experience in gun fighting and bears some wounds to attest the fact. He fired while stretched out on the floor, his gun as far from the rest of his body as he could stretch it.

S. O. S. Brings Friends.

Neff's wounds were healing nicely and he would have been discharged today. He sent out the S. O. S. call to his friends. They came in a taxicab, bringing a ladder and a suit of clothes. They rescued Neff through a second story window when the nurse was out of the room.

It happened that Policeman Pietz had dropped into a drug store the night before and heard Joe Santucci, Hugh McGavick, and Jim Rogers talking about a friend in the hospital and planning to visit him. He paid no attention to the conversation at the time, but when Neff escaped he told Chief of Police Thomas Stone about it.

So They Just Bide Their Time.

"Nothing to do," said Stone, "but wait until Santucci comes back with his taxi. No doubt he'll have McGavick and Rogers with him."

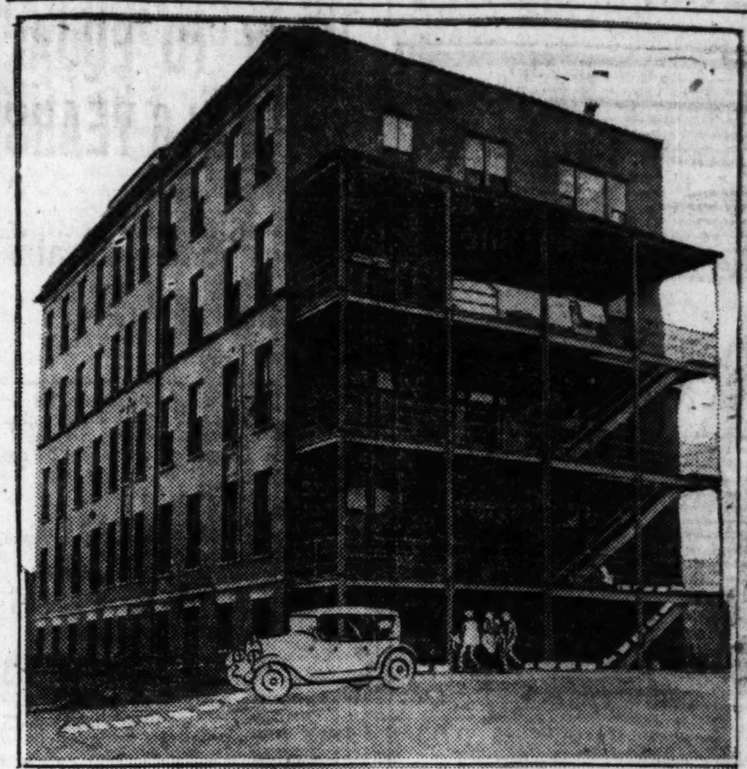
It was even so. The three came back together, and were gathered in.

Santucci admitted everything and told where Neff was to be found—611 West 60th street in Chicago. The Chicago police captured him and took him to the hospital in the county jail.

Machine Gunners to Hold Open House in Armory

On next Monday evening, at the First Infantry armory, 16th street and Michigan boulevard, the machine gun company of the First infantry, Illinois national guard, will hold open house for men interested in machine gunnery howitzers, trench mortars, and 75 millimeter guns. Many veterans of the machine gun company of the 121st infantry, 33d division, A. E. F., will be present. Any men 18 years old and over who are interested will be welcome.

SNAPPY STUFF



When Fred Neff, wounded gunfighter, decided to depart from St. James hospital in Chicago Heights, where he was nominally in custody of the police, his friends removed him from a ward on the second floor, in the manner shown by the photo diagram. But Neff was recaptured because of a remark his rescuers chanced to make in a drug store, unconscious of the presence of a policeman. Neff is in the county jail now.

PAGEANT HERE TO MARK PILGRIMS' TERCENTENARY

At a meeting of the pageant committee of the Drama league yesterday plans were completed for Percy Mackaye's pageant, "The Pilgrim and the Book," which will be presented under direction of Mrs. A. Starr Best on Saturday evening, April 30, at Orchestra hall as a part of the national pilgrim tercentenary celebration.

The University of Chicago, Northwestern university, the Chicago public library, Newberry library, Lewis institute, the Church federation, and all the women's clubs are coöperating with the league in the production. Groups of women from the women's clubs of Chicago, Englewood, Wilmette, Austin, Hamilton park, and Woodlawn will participate. John Norton, choirmaster at St. James' Episcopal church, will direct the music. A chorus of 200 children, under direction of Hazel Burns Holcombe, will sing "Mayflower Morning," the official ode of all the pilgrim tercentenary celebrations.

Percy Boynton of the University of Chicago will give an address on "Puritans and Anti-Puritans."

Admission is free, but tickets must be secured from the Drama league headquarters, 59 East Van Buren street.

Chinaman, Dead in Hotel, Leaves Note for Friend

Lee Sing, a Chinaman, was found dead yesterday in the Dover hotel at 1110 North Clark street. Near by were a bottle which the police believe contained poison, and a note asking that Wing Lee Wo, 434 South Clark street, be notified.

MANILA DEFENSE ROUTS RAIDERS IN SHAM ATTACK

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

MANILA, April 23.—Twenty-three years after Admiral Dewey ran the gantlet of the Spanish forts in Manila bay an American destroyer fleet unsuccessfully made a night attack on heavily fortified Corregidor island at the entrance to the bay, during joint army and navy manuevers lasting three days. Fourteen destroyers, the entire coast artillery garrison, and military aircraft participated in the sham engagement, during which one army seaplane was damaged.

The destroyers Hart and Rizal led that attack which the forts repelled, thus averting technical capture of Manila. The naval vessels operated from Olangapao.

It is declared the technical defeat of the destroyers demonstrated the ability of the Corregidor forts to defend themselves from a sudden destroyer attack.

MARRIAGE WRIT FOILS COP WHO PREYS ON LOVERS

Chief Suspends Man Who Tried to Rob Farmer.

This story tells how a city policeman is accused of having plotted to separate a farmer from $400; how the farmer, weeping and on bended knee, at first "fell" for the scheme, and finally how a marriage license saved the day and resulted in the suspension of the policeman.

The story, according to affidavits signed by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Byberg, 6203 Princeton avenue, and filed with Chief of Police Fitzmorris, follows:

Patrolman Julius Werner, Englewood station, rapped on the Byberg door on the evening of March 30.

"You are living together and you are not married. These papers command me to take you to the station," the policeman said.

Money Might Fix It.

Byberg dropped to his knees, weeping, and grasping the policeman's hand. The policeman relented slightly. Money, he said, might fix it up. A canvas of the household revealed only $25.

"That's not enough, but I'll let you set your own price," he said. "What's it worth to you?"

Byberg was not used to dealing in petty graft. He blubbered out that it would be worth $400 to him.

It was arranged. Byberg was to go to Sheridan, Ill., to get the money from his bank there. He promised to turn it over to the policeman on April 1. But the policeman had not forgotten about the $25 in cash. As he left the room he said to Mrs. Byberg:

"Put that money in your daddy's pocket to buy gasoline."

The policeman held his pocket open and Mrs. Byberg providently dropped in $15.

The next morning Byberg left for Sheridan, but during the trip he did some tall thinking. He brought the $400 back with him, but he didn't give it to the policeman. He hurried to the county clerk's office and bought a marriage license.

Werner Tries to Hedge.

Werner, the affidavits say, appeared in the county clerk's office. Apparently he saw that the game was up, for he whispered in Byberg's ear that Mrs. Byberg could have her $15 back if she wanted it, Byberg's statement says. Byberg hurried to a church and was married.

Soon after he appeared in the office of Capt. James Allman of Englewood station. Lieut. Samuel Rank checked up on his story. On his report Chief Fitzmorris signed the suspension order.

ANOTHER STRONG MAN OF NIPPON RAPS WAR TALK

Baron Goto Says Japan Is for Peace.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BARON GOTO.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

TOKIO, April 22.—Baron Shimpei Goto, present mayor of Tokio and regarded as the possible next premier, asserts that Japan absolutely has no aggressive designs against America and that Japan is fortifying solely for self defense.

He asserts that some militarists wish to extend the scope of armaments, but only for self interests.

He says that Japan is not able to compete with America in armaments and declares America's greatest weapon is an economic boycott, especially on the silk trade.

Complains of Restraints.

"We Japanese cannot deny that some see as a threat the American possession of the Philippines," he said. "This fear is not so much the creation of the Japanese as it is of the Americans. When we go to the Philippines we are subjected to considerable restraint, so we have to come to the conclusion that America is not so free as we expected.

"Such is the view of the small minority, but the majority never give the Philippines a thought. If restrictions for free residence in the Philippines were removed Japan would be perfectly reconciled. Any feeling of enmity would be wiped out and, far from having any hostile intentions in the Philippines, the Japanese would live there, abiding by the laws as peacefully as they live in Hawaii.

Hints at U. S. Militarism.

"Some Japanese, looking at the present conditions of affairs in America, have come to believe that a new form of imperialism has cropped up there. This group believes that it is not a peaceful imperialism, but militaristic.

"Sometimes the opinions of these propagandists are turned to the use of a portion of our military and naval officers for their own interests, thus making it appear to outsiders that Japan is very militaristic. All this is due to a small faction.

"You will be able to discern the truth of any statement when you consider carefully whether it is possible for Japan to compete in armaments. The resources of Japan cannot be hidden. I cannot understand why Americans are worried over the possibility of a war with Japan.

"Of course Japan is greatly worried by its annual increase of 600,000 in population. If it could send the surplus to the Philippines and South America I believe that many worries would be relieved."

"NO NEED OF WAR"

TOKIO, April 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The leading morning newspapers, following the official deliberations of Friday on the question of mandates, say they believe there is renewed hope of settlement of the problem through direct negotiations between Japan and the United States.

According to the Jiji Shimpo, Great Britain, France and Italy have advised Japan to resume pourparlors with the United States.

The newspapers express the opinion that Japan will adhere to her stand regarding rights acquired by mandate, but will endeavor to come to an amicable settlement by compromising on the question of communications.

JAPS TO FUSS, BUT YIELD.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—Japan is prepared to make concessions to the United States in the dispute over the island of Yap, according to authoritative opinion here today. This will not be done for some time, however.

Despite reports from Tokio that Japan will remain obdurate in insisting upon the validity of the mandate over Yap, it was learned here that high Japanese authorities incline to the view that every nation vitally interested in the Yap issue must eventually make concessions and that no one power can have its full claims accepted.

ANGLO-AMERICAN PEACE IS "HOPE OF THE WORLD"

MELBOURNE, April 23.—For Australia ever to take part in a struggle with the United States is something unthinkable and outside the bounds of possibility, declared William M. Hughes, premier of the commonwealth, in concluding the debate in the house of representatives today on the coming imperial conference. The subject of the Anglo-Japanese treaty was prominent in the discussion, and in alluding to it the prime minister said:

"It is unthinkable and not within the bounds of possibility that we should ever take part in a struggle against America. We cannot be bound by any treaty which we do not ourselves ratify, although the practical consequences of war between Britain and America, whether Japan was or was not her ally, would, of course, have to be faced by us."

Policeman Halts Runaway and Saves Three Boys

There are more ways than one of stopping a runaway nag, says Policeman N. J. O'Rourke.

Three weeks ago he stopped a speeding horse by grasping the bridle. Friday, at Polk and Clark streets, he swung on to a wagon, climbed the horse's back, seized the reins, and saved three 4 year old boys.

Sam Sone, 610 West 25th street, had left the wagon to mend the harness. His brother Harry and his nephews, Joe and Dave Gerasi, were on the seat. The horse took fright at a flying paper and started south in Clark street.

JUDGE ORDERS ONE MAN ARMY TO DEMOBILIZE

For six months Knute Lillinef, 31, of 1136 North Clark street, must resist that impulse to sport his war trophies in the street. Judge Howard Hayes in South Clark street court yesterday placed Knute on probation for six months.

"He was marching about in the middle of Clark street with a Spanish rifle fitted out with a German bayonet," Detective Sergeant Leonard told the judge, "and him a Swede! The people ran in every direction and he was commanding himself, 'Squads right!' and 'Squads left.'"

"Moonshine and Spanish rifles and German bayonets don't go well together," warned Judge Hayes.

of fighting ships. Here are the figures:

Capital ships, first line, in 1927—

	Great Britain.	United States.	Japan.
Battleships	30	27	13
Battle cruisers	6	6	12
Totals	36	33	25

These figures are somewhat different from the ones submitted by Secretary Daniels to the house committee on naval affairs three months ago. They represent newer, truer information.

Construction Status Satisfactory.

On April 1, 1921, the status of construction of battleships was: California, 96.1 per cent completed; Colorado, 69.3; Maryland, 96.8; Washington, 61.2; West Virginia, 49.5; South Dakota, 26.7; Indiana, 23.1; Montana, 18; North Carolina, 27.2; Iowa, 16.1, and Massachusetts, 2.5.

Two, the California and the Maryland, virtually are completed and ready for the sixteen inch guns that will make them the most powerful craft afloat. Several are well advanced. Upon a few work has not much more than begun. The construction status of the battleships is regarded as satisfactory at the navy department. All except two or three could be rushed to completion in a short time.

This is not the case as regards the six battle cruisers, a type of vessel whose worth was amply demonstrated by Admiral Beatty's operations in the North sea. The state of building of the six is: Lexington, 13.8 per cent; Constellation, 7.9; Saratoga, 18.1; Ranger, 1.2; Constitution, 4.3, and United States, 4.3. It is understood that immediately after the naval appropriation becomes available work will be rushed on the six great battle cruisers, all more powerful than the finest ship of the type that Great Britain sent into action against the Germans.

As regards the ten scout or light cruisers, their condition is: Omaha, 90 per cent; Milwaukee, 84.7; Cincinnati, 80.6; Raleigh, 51.4; Detroit, 51.2; Richmond, 62; Concord, 60; Trenton, 41; Marblehead, 39, and Memphis, 32.

Twenty-one destroyers are well on their way toward completion, the Tillman, the Lawrence, and the Paul Jones being ready to be launched. Half a dozen will be ready within a few weeks. Twenty-four of the new submarines are already in the water, some of them having been completed in 1919.

WAR MOTHERS AND FATHERS

After visiting our beautifully kept National Cemeteries in France, a war mother said: "There is not one cross out of line; not one blade of grass too long." This care will continue as long as our Nation exists.

And the reverence of the French people! Where can we equal that, here at home? French men passing by these hallowed spots raise their hats; and on Sundays and holidays French families pass through the narrow paths with deep interest and respect.

Have you read Owen Wister's letter to the American Legion concerning the removal of our heroic dead? "They have been dragged from the soil their sacrifice made sacred and where, as an honored and cared for company, they lay in peace, their graves tended, their memory historic and precious to France."

Suresnes, opposite Paris—Belleau Wood—Romagne en Argonne—and Flanders Field, at Boni—are the resting places of Heroes.

Will you deprive your son of the honor of lying in that sacred ground?

Write to the War Department before it is too late. Tell them not to break the ranks of this quiet army that can know no defeat.

With sincere sympathy,
A WAR MOTHER AND FATHER.

DEPEW TELLS HOW TO LIVE TO BE A HUNDRED

Isn't Cranky, Diets, Home Nights, No Cards.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—It was one of his best birthdays, according to Chauncey M. Depew, 87, and he vowed tonight he would reach the century mark.

After a day at his offices as chairman of the New York Central board of directors, Mr. Depew had "the regular birthday dinner," and there were a "few friends about the table to help me make merry."

At his office, interrupted by a rush of telegrams, telephone calls and personal visits of friends and associates, Mr. Depew gave a few observations on life and things in general, and, in particular, explained how he is going to live to be 100 years old.

Sheds His Eccentricities.

"In the first place," he said, "if I ever had any eccentricities I've shed them. A man doesn't have eccentricities when he reaches my time of life. He has habits and they ought to be good ones. As for today, save for the fact that I am so surrounded by a veritable garden of flowers, I feel like a bud just coming out. Otherwise, today is like all the others. I will be at my office from 9:30 o'clock until 4:30, doing my regular work.

"The true philosophy of life is this: The more you like a thing the more reason there is for giving it up if you find it isn't good for you. You'll find then that Nature will adjust herself to you as you will to Nature. She's a good old bird, Nature, if you treat her properly.

"My diet, which is helping to carry me on the long road I am traveling, is very simple. I have the same breakfast every day in the year. It is an orange, one four minute egg, one half a corn muffin, and a cup of coffee, which is mainly hot milk. I have this at 8:30, because, you know, I get up at 10 minutes to 7 every morning.

Doesn't Play Cards.

"For luncheon I partake principally of vegetables, with no meat, and a glass of water for beverage. This is at 1 o'clock. At dinner I taste everything and eat little. Vegetables, fish or fowl or vegetables, are all I have, but I enjoy them immensely. I never eat between meals and realize that now I consume less than half what I did at 60.

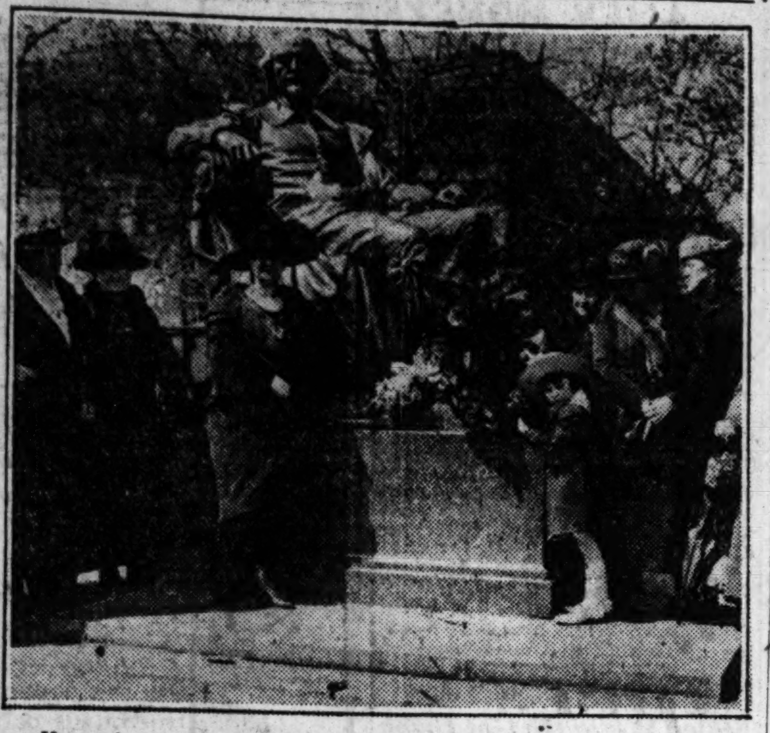
"Practically all my evenings I spend at home, save for an occasional visit to a play. Years ago I used to be at a public dinner somewhere or other almost every night in the week. Cards? No, I never play. I remember what Commodore Vanderbilt once said to me. 'Sonny,' he said, 'don't play cards unless you have a card head!' I haven't that, so I never play," he chuckled.

Dietetic Newspaper Reading.

"Two hours every night I devote to reading. First, I take up the newspapers and read them all in the journalistic fashion, which permits me to get through with them quickly, but competently. I read the editorials with which I don't agree and then, as a sort of dessert, the ones which coincide with my views. As for books, I keep pace, I think, with the best thought of the day.

"A week from tonight the Montauk club of Brooklyn will give me a dinner and this will be the thirtieth consecutive year the club has thus honored me on my birthday," concluded Mr. Depew. "And the only thing I have to do in return is make a speech, but remember I have had to make a different one every year."

Forever Honour'd, Forever Mourn'd



Yesterday was celebrated as the 357th anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare. The day also marked the 305th anniversary of his death. The latter date has been fixed definitely; the former is assumed by most historians to have been April 23, 1564, although there is considerable disagreement. The Chicago Woman's club staged a memorial about the statue of the poet in Lincoln park. The photograph shows the ceremony, in which the Glencoe Woman's Library club also took part.

Austin Residents Protest New School Land Bill

Vigorous protests aginst the proposed bill giving the school board absolute control of school lands were voiced last night by several hundred property owners meeting at Laramie and Gladys avenues. The protesters believe that if the bill passes the school board will sell some Austin school lands to a railroad, thereby depreciating their property. Ald. John F. Clark, George Sykes, and others spoke.

"U. S. OF WORLD" COMING, BAHAI SPEAKER SAYS

Dr. Jenabi Fazel Mazandarani, formerly a professor in the Imperial university of Teheran, Persia, was guest of honor at the banquet which marked the opening of the thirteenth annual Bahai congress at the Auditorium hotel last night.

Lecturers returning from tours of Europe, Asia, Africa, and South America told of the spread in those countries of the Bahai movement, which stands for one universal religion, one language, universal peace, and the "parliament of man."

"Through Bahaism," Dr. Mazandarani said, "racial, national, and religious prejudices will be wiped away. Instead of the United States of America there will spring up a United States of the World."

Dr. Zia Bagdadi briefly sketched the spread of the teachings in the near east and his wife chanted a Bahaist hymn in Persian. Other speakers were Miss Alma Knobluch, Miss Martha Root, Mrs. May Maxwell, Mirza Ahmad Sohrab, and Louis Bourgeois.

TWO WIVES IN 3 ROOMS; POLICE ONLY DISCORD

Belgian Emigre Surprises New Yorkers.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—With the "coöperative husband" case still before the public, an even stranger matrimonial case developed tonight—a man with two wives in a three room apartment over in Brooklyn, one of the wives French and the other Belgian.

The man in the case, Antonie Ruyts, 45, has been living for several months with the wives. The Belgian talks only Flemish, while the other only French, and they communicate with each other by a system of knocks on wood.

Husband an Iron Worker.

Ruyts is an iron worker. Unlike the "coöperative husband," Herbert Andrews, a stock broker, he isn't blessed with money. Like Andrews, Ruyts is rather handsome. He is held on $1,000 bond on a charge of bigamy.

Ruyts was living in Antwerp in 1916, according to the story he told, with his wife, Charlotte, 45 years old, and two daughters, one now 13 and the other 15 years old.

The Germans ordered Ruyts to work for them and he fled to Paris, where he met Mme. Marie Pierre-Labar, a handsome widow of 48. The pair lived together in Paris until January, 1920, when they came to America.

They Meet Conventions.

Coming to this country, they were held at Ellis island until permitted to go ashore to be married. Ruyts then swore that he was a bachelor.

In November, 1920, Ruyts sent to Antwerp for his Belgian wife and two daughters, and when she arrived, Ruyts swore to her, placing his hands on the heads of his two little girls, that he would have nothing more to do with the French woman.

He then took his Belgian wife and daughters to his apartment in Brooklyn, where he introduced the French wife as the "boss" of the house, it is said.

Boss No Idle Title.

According to investigations, "wife No. 2" seems really to be the "boss," for in addition to being about as large as Ruyts and "wife No. 1" combined, "wife No. 2" is better dressed than the other woman, and apparently has the choice of bedrooms.

The French wife had been working in a theatrical costume establishment in Manhattan, and when the Belgian wife arrived she was taken to work there also, the French wife accompanying her back and forth each day. In the evening, it was said, the Belgian wife has not been permitted to go out alone.

The French woman is so devoted to her Belgian husband that she volunteered to be arrested in his place.

When Ruyts was arrested, both women remained together in the apartment with the little girls, who were left in the custody of their mother. Ruyts wept bitterly, the investigators said to have had twelve children by his Belgian wife, but only five of these are alive. Three daughters are in Belgium. They are married.

The Co-op Triangle.

In the "coöperative husband" case a Pittsburgh press dispatch states:

"A reunion is due within the next few days in the Jersey City home of Herbert Thornton Andrews, the New York broker, who took Esther Marie Tatnall, a Pittsburgh stenographer, to his home as wife No. 2, and thereby stirred up trouble.

"Advices from Andrews to business associates in this city today were that a reconciliation was to be effected with Mrs. Maude Augusta Andrews and their two children, Charles, aged 6, and John, aged 8."

CANAL TOLLS TO PRECIPITATE NEW SENATE ROW

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Proposed free tolls for American vessels in the Panama canal, it is becoming apparent, will precipitate a struggle in congress as stirring and spectacular as the previous fight over the issue seven years ago. Differences on the subject are expected to begin developing in the senate next week.

Senator Borah, chairman of the committee on interoceanic canals, said today he expected to bring the free tolls bill before the committee at an early date, probably next week.

It is understood efforts will be made to delay the proposed legislation by hearings. Senator Borah said he saw no need of hearings, but he was not advised what view the committee would take.

SCHOOL BOARD OFFICIAL WEDS GARY TEACHER

Miss Frances Parkhurst, special teacher in the Gary school, and Dr. Frank G. Bruner, director of special schools for the board of education, were married yesterday in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Parkhurst of Berwyn.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. F. Waring, pastor of the Berwyn Baptist church. Miss Carrie George and Miss Frances Parkhurst, a sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. Orville Parkhurst, a brother, was best man.

The couple left last night for Asheville, N. C., on a honeymoon trip. They will return in about ten days.

ASKS BRITONS TO PRAY FOR PEACE IN ERIN

Cardinal Bourne Writes Plea for Harmony.

BULLETIN.

LYMPNE, England, April 23.—Lord Derby came to Lympne today to see Premier Lloyd George. In view of Lord Derby's recent visit to Ireland it was believed the Irish situation was discussed.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 23.—A message to be read in all Catholic churches in England signed by Cardinal Bourne made public today appeals for united and fervent prayer for divine guidance that "a true and lasting understanding may be established between the sister countries, England and Ireland."

"It is our wish," the message continues, "that in every church throughout England and Wales the rosary be recited with this intention. In many of our large churches it may be possible to arrange for continuous recitation of the rosary during the day."

RAID CORK MAILS.

CORK, April 23.—Bands of armed men rounded up fifty postmen just as they were leaving the central postoffice today with mail deliveries and took the mails "in the name of the Irish republic."

The haul, weighing several tons, was removed in carts to an unknown destination. As a result, the entire city and the outlying districts were without mails today. The raid was carried out without attracting the notice of the crown forces on duty nearby.

Fight in County Clare.

DUBLIN, April 23.—[By the Associated Press.]—The police and military barracks in Kilrush, County Clare, were attacked last midnight by a large party of armed men and a fight ensued which lasted three hours, in which one police sergeant was killed and two soldiers wounded. Two royal marines were taken prisoners, but escaped uninjured. The attackers withdrew without capturing either barracks.

Two hundred raiders held up a train of thirty-four cars today between Glaslough and Monaghan. The raiders made prisoners of the driver, fireman, and guards, and then set fire to the train.

Trouble in North Ireland.

LISBURN, Ireland, April 23.—Fighting attended the first visit of auxiliaries to Lisburn, when a company arrived from Belfast today. One member of the force was killed and another wounded tonight when two civilians fired on them in Donegal square. Two civilians were wounded during the fighting.

ROLLER SKATER, 8, DIES OF INJURIES CAUSED BY AUTO

James O'Neill, 8 years old, of 225 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, died in the West Suburban hospital yesterday of injuries received April 4, when he was struck by an automobile while roller skating in Pleasant avenue, near Taylor street, Oak Park.

The boy was taken to his home after the accident by the driver of the automobile, who gave his name as R. H. Vroman, 218 Pleasant avenue. James was later taken to the hospital by his father, C. J. O'Neill.

A State Bond

Exempt from All Federal Taxes

To Yield 5 3/4%   To Yield 5 3/4%

OCTOBER 1ST 1889

$3,000,000 5¾% Gold Bonds
(Real Estate Series)

State of North Dakota

Exempt from Federal Income Tax, Including Surtax

Dated July 1st, 1921, and interest payable semi-annually in gold January 1st and July 1st each year at the office of the State Treasurer at Bismarck, North Dakota.

They have back of them the entire taxing power of the State; but they also contain additional features of security, consisting of the deposit of first mortgages on improved North Dakota farm lands in amount equal to the par value of the bonds. These mortgages represent about 40% of the value of each farm.

The payment of both principal and interest of the above bonds is guaranteed and protected by the entire taxing power of the sovereign State of North Dakota and may be enforced by a direct tax levied on both real estate and personal property. This constitutes one of the best protected and highest grade obligations ever offered to the public in the form of State bonds.

Price: Par to Yield 5¾%

These Bonds will be allotted in the order in which subscriptions are received. We reserve the right to pro-rate sales to subscriptions or to reject any and all subscriptions.

Interim certificates bearing interest at 5¾% will be given pending actual delivery of the Bonds, which will be made on July 1st or thereabouts.

LANCASHIRE COIN LOW, BUT MEN'S MORALE IS HIGH

Coal Miners Still Firm for Demands.

BY AMBROSE LAMBERT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BURY, England, April 22.—"We can only be beaten through our stomachs," said John McGurk, a member of the miners' executive committee and one of the most powerful men among the Lancashire miners, to a CHICAGO TRIBUNE correspondent today.

"I have never seen the miners more united," he declared. "The Lancashire and Chester federation, representing 100,000 men, is unanimous in reiterating that there will be no peace without national wages and a national profits pool. Local meetings throughout the county are attended by thousands of miners. The message from them is to fight on. At every meeting the Versailles peace treaty is denounced as being responsible for the present coal crisis.

Propose Big Wage Cut.

"The owners' scheme for the reduction of wages hit the Lancashire men hard, the average proposed wage reduction being 25 per cent. The coal production was 1,497,000 tons last February.

"The miners in the county are quiet, but determined. Distress, however, will be acute in another week. The strike pay of a pound a week with 2 shillings additional for each child will cease on Friday. That, plus starvation, is likely to lead to trouble."

In touring Lancashire one sees a panorama of tall chimneys devoid of the usual clouds of black smoke issuing from them. One is confronted by miles of idle factories and thousands of empty coal trucks. Large detachments of special police brought to the district have aroused resentment, but there have been no serious conflicts. Troops are not in evidence. The only ominous signs are the passing ammunition trains, which are plainly marked.

No Local Coal Shortage.

The people in Wigan, St. Helens, and other mining towns are determined not to suffer from lack of coal. Entire families, mothers, and tiny tots included, dot the wayside digging up surface coal and carrying it off in every sort of vehicle and bag. There is a profitable business in Wigan disposing of appropriated coal at a half a crown a bag. Some miners are said to be making two or three pounds a day in this manner.

I talked to many of the simple folk throughout the county and all declared they would starve rather than submit. The general spirit of the women is particularly high.

OAK PARK YANK'S FRENCH BRIDE WILL GO HOME TO VISIT

MRS. WILLIAM BRAYTON.

Mrs. William Brayton of 821 Lake street, Oak Park, one of the brides won in France by American soldiers, will sail early in May for her home in Lyons. Mrs. Brayton was Mlle. France Vermain until two years ago, when she met Capt. William Brayton of the 23d engineers, who had stopped off in Lyons on his way to Nice. Capt. Brayton prolonged his stay, and two years ago she became his wife. She will remain in France until October.

BALKY TAXI FARE CHASED THROUGH 4 CARS, NABBED

Crews of four street cars, pedestrians, and the police of the North Halsted street station yesterday joined in a chase for a man who is alleged to have refused to pay his taxi bill at Belden and Racine avenues.

The man—Abraham Tuckhorn, former saloonkeeper at 8 North Clark street—was finally captured after leading his pursuers back and forth through the street cars. According to the taxi driver, Hallen F. Colston of the Yellow Cab company, the man engaged the cab at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and at that time had $900.

"He spent it all and did not have enough to pay the fare," explained the driver. Tuckhorn lives at 2517 Smalley court with his brother Simon.

15,000 GARDENS TO BE TILLED BY COUNTY SCHOOLS

Fifteen thousand gardens—one for every pupil in the Cook county schools—will be cultivated by the children this year, it was announced yesterday by Seth Shepard, supervisor of farm projects. He plans to make the school gardening program more extensive this year than ever before. The children will start spading up their land the next week.

"Our garden program last year was so successful that we aim this year to have every pupil interested," said Mr. Shepard. "Some schools will raise their vegetables and crops according to a community plan, but most of gardens will be cultivated individually.

Pupils to Pocket Profits.

"The pupils will rent their own land and pocket the profits. At the end of the season several prizes will be distributed."

Mr. Shepard expects the total profits to exceed $100,000. Thus far $52,000 has been the high mark. Onions, beets, carrots, radishes, tomatoes, and beans will be the principal vegetables raised.

BOY IS THRIFT SAGE

In order to be thrifty one must have confidence in himself.

Every person can earn money, but most people cannot save it.

Every boy should form the thrift habit.

The above are a few of the maxims that took first prize in a contest just closed in the Cook county schools for the best essay on "Thrift." The winner was William Draper, 15 years old, a pupil in the county school at Evergreen Park.

William is of the opinion that the only way to have money is to "save a certain amount of what you earn each week." For, he says:

> "Little sums of money,
> Saved up by the wise,
> Make the wealthy wealthier
> And help the poor to rise."

William, whose father is postmaster at Evergreen Park, competed with 200 other pupils in the contest. He says he will spend the $20 he received as first prize for books.

GUN AND BLADE CLUBS MEET HERE TO EXTEND WORK

Organization of Gun and Blade clubs, composed of former service men in training at the universities of Illinois, Chicago, Wisconsin, Michigan, Northwestern, and the Michigan Agricultural college, was perfected by delegates from the six schools at a meeting yesterday in the offices of the Fort Sheridan association, 21 North La Salle street.

The Gun and Blade clubs are a result of a realization by the men in training that they needed some form of association to aid in solving their own social and economic problems. Many had been out of school for years, some had dropped their studies in the grades or early in high school, and nearly all are older than the average students. For these reasons they felt themselves "out" of the regular university life.

The first club was organized at the University of Wisconsin. Its success was so pronounced that others were formed immediately at the other schools and it was decided to form a district executive council. The Fort Sheridan association is assisting to make the organization a success.

Among the first things to be undertaken by the executive council is the arousing of interest in the summer camp at Fort Sheridan from June 15 to Sept. 15.

E. M. Boerke, University of Wisconsin, is president of the council; C. W. Cleworth, University of Illinois, vice president; Wilfred Hocking, University of Michigan, treasurer; Harold De Baun, University of Chicago, secretary; Edward R. Paul, Northwestern, historian, and Joseph Blake, Michigan Agricultural college, assistant secretary.

ATTACK TARIFF PLAN TO ADJUST ALIEN MONEYS

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Further attacks on the exchange equalization provision of the emergency tariff bill were made today before the senate finance committee.

B. A. Levett, representing the New York Merchants' association, urged that the provision which limits depreciation of foreign currency in assessing import duties to the 66 2-3 per cent below normal be eliminated entirely from the bill.

Other witnesses who objected to the exchange equalization scheme were Walter D. Schmitz of New York, an importer of bentwood furniture from Czecho-Slovakia, and John D. Duffy, attorney for a number of importers of bentwood furniture.

"I want to find out if this provision to limit depreciation to 66 2-3 per cent has any friends at all," Senator McCumber said. "If it has they don't seem to have appeared here."

The committee concluded public hearings on the emergency tariff bill, an executive session was held at which the bill was discussed without reaching any conclusion as to amendments.

Held for 'Borrowing' Auto Stolen While He Got Drink

Phillip Gogola, 1733 Blucher street, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $1,300 yesterday by Judge Howard Hayes of South Clark street court, after he admitted "borrowing" an automobile from Samuel Shure, north side restaurant owner. Gogola said that when he stopped to get a drink at a saloon the automobile was stolen. It was found later, stripped of all accessories.

POETESS WEDS BY MYSTIC RITE OF NEW PAGANS

Greek Dancing and Barbecue Mingled.

BY M. D. TRACY.

[United Press Staff Correspondent.]

Oakland, Cal., April 23.—With the full April moon bathing the gardens of the Joaquin Miller home in silvery light, Juanita Miller, daughter of the late poet, tonight was bride at a pagan wedding revival.

As she was gripped in the embrace of her scarlet coated husband, she stepped from the "cycle of pink tulips of curiosity" into the "cycle of white lilies," the seventh and final cycle of her life.

It's Feast of Reason.

Hundreds of "intellectuals" and a few hundred more who chiefly were curious, attended the strange ceremony.

"The world is my only guest," Juanita had announced. Apparently the world had accepted the invitation.

The moon was just getting well into its business of shining when Juanita stepped into the scene. She moved quietly among her seven flower beds, each symbolic of one of the seven cycles of her life, and then she broke into song.

Juan Miller, her "lily love," appeared, clad in his cloak of scarlet and white. Coyly, from out the flower beds, she greeted him.

Then Bride Disappears.

There was music and then Juanita disappeared. In a moment she was back in the center of the half circle of guests—this time garbed in the gown she had made herself. It was of high grade burlap trimmed with this year's eucalyptus caps.

With Juan she danced her bridal dance—an esthetic and highly symbolical improvisation, which she had created for the occasion. There was more music and more dancing and then Juanita ascended the "altar of love." She held in one hand the skull of the long deceased Miller family cow—a reminder that this life is but transitory.

Nanny No "Intellectual."

The music was soft, disturbed only by the bleating of the Nanny goat, whose only child was sizzling on the altar, a sacrifice to the god of love. Juanita leaned toward Juan and their lips met. A moment passed and Juanita leaped from the altar into a joyous dance.

Then the kid was taken from the fire and carved. It was served to all comers while it lasted. Bread and butter and grapejuice followed.

Sleeps, Talks of 2 Wives; Pinched; Freed by No. 2

Out in Evanston Frank Smith talked in his sleep of two wives. The second wife, formerly Christina Iverson, listened and called a policeman. Yesterday Mrs. Smith No. 2 relented. When the case came up before Police Magistrate John M. Boyer she pleaded her husband's case. He will get a divorce from wife No. 1," she says. Frank is free.

"My love!" he whispered. And they melted into each other's arms.

In the lines set forth above a whimsical fellow literatus memorialized the marriage yesterday of Miss Lois Seyster to Lynn Montross. It was, you see, a romance of popular fiction, in the sense that the principals found that they loved each other while collaborating on affaires d'amour for publication in a novel.

He promised to love, honor, and think up plots for their short stories.

She promised to love, read proof, and write the titles for their poems.

"Stick close to your work," his professor in journalism had advised him when he was graudated from the University of Nebraska with honors and an ambition to write. He stuck, and finally landed in the office of a Chicago publication.

"Stick close to your work," her English teacher had told her when she was graduated from the University of Illinois with a Phi Beta Kappa key and an ambition to write. She stuck, and finally landed in the office of the same publication.

From 9 to 5 every day, they stuck close to their WORK. From 8 to 11, every evening, they stuck, closer, to THEIR work. Together they wrote a novel, "Hale Ayres," and a book of verse, "Galleon Dawn," which are to be published this fall.

And yesterday afternoon Lois Seyster, 4160 Drexel boulevard, was married to Lynn Montross, 3907 Ellis avenue, at the studio building, 153 East Erie street, in the presence of a group of young writers and artists.

STAGE FOLK HELP NEW YORK NEWS WARM NEW PLANT

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—New York's theatrical folk helped the members of the staff of the Daily News, New York's picture newspaper, and their families, "warm" the new building of the fast growing child of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE tonight at the informal opening of the new plant and offices at 25 Park place, just off Broadway.

The program started at 8 o'clock and lasted until the early hours of the morning.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner of the city of New York, congratulated the Daily News on its tremendous success and predicted it soon would be "the most widely read newspaper within 500 miles of New York."

The new plant and equipment and the spacious offices of the newspaper created keen interest among the more than 300 guests. Department heads acted as "reception committees."

Numerous stags stars from various theaters had a share in entertaining the party.

JUDGE WINDES WILL RUN AGAIN FOR BENCH JOB

Adds to the "No-Party" Ticket's Strength.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Judge Thomas G. Windes, dean of the Circuit court, has determined to be a candidate for reëlection. His decision was announced yesterday at a meeting of the Democratic executive committee, and was hailed as a distinct gain in popular strength for the "sitting judge ticket," sponsored by a committee of the Chicago Bar association.

Until recently Judge Windes' health was such that it was believed he would retire at the end of his present term, but Dennis J. Egan announced the jurist's health has improved so remarkably during the last few weeks that he will run again. This means that all five of the present Democratic judges will be on the coalition ticket.

Nominate Ticket on Tuesday.

The Democratic committee, following a conference of representatives of the Chicago Bar association with Democratic representatives and spokesmen for the anti-city hall Republicans, met for a final discussion of the lineup for the nomination of the coalition ticket by the Democratic convention on Tuesday.

With the addition of Judge Windes' name, it was considered certain that at least fourteen and possibly fifteen of the present judges will join in the movement to prevent a raid on the Circuit court, the south parks and the jury commissioners' office.

Having a clear understanding of the methods of Fred Lundin, boss of the city hall machine, the conferees were not surprised to hear reports that one of the Republican judges who agreed to go on the coalition ticket had determined not to run under the Democratic heading, but they were still hopeful he would not consent to run under the banner of Thompsonism.

Judge De Young in Doubtful List.

Some of those present also expressed the opinion that while Judge Frederick De Young had declined to accept the invitation to join the majority of his bench associates in the movement, he may also refuse to wear the Thompson label.

At its weekly luncheon the Lawyers' association voted to hold a six day primary beginning May 16, in which all members of the bar in Cook county will be eligible to vote.

DOWNSTATE FOR ELECTION OF OLD JUDGES IN JUNE

Springfield, Ill., April 23.—[Special.]—Downstate Illinois is for the reëlection of judges now on the bench. Fifteen of the seventeen circuits outside of Cook county have nominated their candidates for the June election, and in but one instance has a sitting judge been denied renomination.

The record stands as follows for the fifteen circuits that have completed nominations:

Circuit judges renominated........	37
Judges not candidates..................	6
Defeated for renomination	1
Vacancy by death	1

Two circuits, the Peoria and Bloomington territories, remain with conventions to be held. In Peoria there are two Democrats and one Republican on the bench. Republican and Democratic conventions are to be held simultaneously next Thursday, and an agreement is reported in sight to renominate the three judges on a nonpartisan basis, as was agreed to in the Springfield circuit last week.

GERMAN CHIEF ASSAILS PLAN TO DIVIDE SILESIA

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, April 23.—[By Wireless.]—A vehement protest against Gen. Lerond's statement that as chief of the interallied plebiscite commission he recommended the division of Upper Silesia was made today by German Chancellor Fehrenbach.

Not only does the chancellor declare that a territorial division is unjust and against the decision of the plebiscite, but he attacks the Versailles treaty decision, which gave Poland German eastern territory, where Herr Fehrenbach declares, "If the inhabitants who were forced to become Polish were questioned, a great majority would declare for Germany."

Here Is Statement.

The chancellor's statement follows: "Gen. Lerond said immediately following the plebiscite that in his mind the plebiscite result drew a clear line against Germany. This line would separate about 75 per cent of the population from Germany, leaving only about 500,000 to Germany. Gen. Lerond said the industrial districts would certainly not go to Germany.

"For ages immemorial Silesia has belonged to Germany. Reasons for tearing it apart do not and cannot exist, since the whole total plebiscite resulted in an undeniable majority for Germany. It is not necessary to mention all the details proving the economic relationship of the parts of Silesia. It is sufficient to draw your attention to the organic uniformity of the Silesian roads, railways, waterways, estates, mines, and smelting companies which stretch from one state to another. Should a part of the works be separated despotically, they will certainly break down.

"Naturally, should Silesia remain in Germany, we shall give all guarantees of securities for the Polish minorities."

AUTO KIDNAPERS ROB. WEST SIDE BUSINESS MAN OF CASH, GEMS

J. T. COUNSELL.

John T. Counsell, president of the West Madison street Business Men's association, was robbed of $80 and jewelry valued at $1,600 by automobile robbers. The bandits cornered Mr. Counsell and his niece, Miss Sadie Rycraft at Washington boulevard and Laramie avenue. Miss Rycraft was frightened into hysterics. Mr. Counsell was forced to enter the robbers' car and go away with them. Several blocks away, after being robbed, Counsell was thrown out of the car.

RULING DUE MAY 1

BY L. C. WALTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WARSAW, April 23.—[By Wireless.]—Albert Kerfanty, the Polish Upper Silesian plebiscite commissioner, who is in Warsaw on a flying visit, today told a correspondent for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that final decisions bearing on the Polish government's attitude will be taken at a conference he will soon have with Foreign Minister Sapieha and Premier Witos.

THREATENS WIFE; FINED $100.

COL. CLIFFORD SLATED TO HEAD SOLDIER RELIEF

President Harding's recent promise of prompt relief for neglected former service men materialized yesterday in the announcement of the intended appointment of Lieut. Col. Edward Clifford of Evanston as director general of a federal department which will take over the soldier rehabilitation work heretofore handled jointly by the bureau of war risk insurance, the United States public health service, and the bureau for vocational training.

The report of the appointment was received in Chicago with general satisfaction. It is considered the first definite indication that the plea made by an American Legion committee headed by Gen. Charles G. Dawes before congress a few weeks ago was successful; and it places at the head of this important department one of the state's leading champions of the cause of war veterans.

Colonel Saved for Position.

Col. Clifford, according to reports last month, was slated as commissioner of internal revenue. David H. Blair was appointed to this post. The Evanston candidate's friends said President Harding was reserving him for the position to which he was reported to be assigned.

Col. Clifford, who served as head of the war credits board of the war department during the fight with Germany, left the service only to enter another fight, this one in the interest of war veterans. As organizer and first commander of Evanston post of the American Legion, he established something of a record in building up the membership from fifteen to 700 in less than a year.

At the first national convention of the American Legion, held in Minneapolis, Minn., in November, 1919, Col. Clifford waged a fight for soldier relief that won him recognition. He was appointed chairman of the finance committee of the Legion for the department of Illinois. In this capacity, he was largely responsible for the founding and successful financing of the American Legion Weekly.

Pushed Fight at Own Expense.

"No man in the state—in the country, for that matter—has put forth greater effort in behalf of fellow service men than Col. Clifford," said an American Legion post commander last night. "For a whole year he maintained an office at his own expense and gave his entire time to the work."

Col. Clifford, a member of the firm of Elston, Clifford & Co., with offices in the New York Life building, retired from active business in 1916. Recently, however, he has been engaged in confidential work for a group of Chicago banks.

Y. C. 'WATERED' FOR $128,540,677 EMPLOYES CLAIM

The New York Central railway, the growth of three consolidations, is capitalized by $128,540,677.75, and is costing stockholders of the system and its patrons more than $6,000,[illegible] annually.

This and other charges intended to indicate an "unwise financial policy" were contained in an exhibit filed yesterday with the railroad labor board by rail employés' organizations in connection with the wage reduction disputes.

The exhibit is said to have been compiled largely from reports of the investigation made by the Hadley securities commission during the Taft administration. These reports were not made public.

Figures of the Employés.

W. J. Lauck, representing the railway employés, summarized the exhibit as follows:

"Previous to the first consolidation [illegible] 1869 the capitalization of the two [illegible] increase in the properties. The consolidated company arbitrarily increased the capital stock without adding one cent to the value of the property by $44,428,330. The total overcapitalization in the consolidation was, therefore, $56,028,330."

Costs $6,000,000 a Year.

It is charged that from 1870 to 1910 the New York Central property was "saddled with a permanent capital liability of $36,000,000, for which nothing was received," bringing the total excess capital stock to $93,034,026.82. A funded debt of $35,506,650.91 added to this makes the total overcapitalization of $128,540,677.75, according to the exhibit.

"The total cost of overcapitalization assumed by the New York Central is more than $6,000,000," the exhibit states.

This exhibit, as well as others preceding it, was introduced in support of the general effort to show that mismanagement, not high wages, is responsible for the financial plight of the roads.

N. Y. C. Cuts Wages 20 Per Cent.

The New York Central yesterday gave notice of a 20 per cent reduction in the pay of virtually all skilled employés, effective May 20. The notice also indicated a revised code regulating working conditions will be substituted for the rules of the national agreements, which, in accordance with a recent decision of the railroad labor board, lose force on July 1.

FIVE MORE CHICAGO WOMEN WIN RIGHT TO PRACTICE LAW

IRENE V. M'CORMICK.
[Moffett Photo.]

Irene V. McCormick is one of the five Chicago women who passed the bar examination, according to the recent announcement of the state board of examiners. The others are Margaret W. Downe, Lottie R. Greenspen, Estelle E. Wells, and Mrs. Mary E. McLaughlin.

STICKS TO PAL UNTIL DEATH AND THEN SOME

Plainwell, Mich., April 23.—Fred Barker, exhausted from the hardships he endured on his 1,500 mile funeral tramp, arrived here early today with the body of his brother-in-law, J. Warde Brown, who died of pneumonia two weeks ago at a frontier trading post in northern Canada.

Refusing to part, even in death, with his companion in submarine fighting during the world war, gold prospecting and trapping in the far north, Barker remained seated in the express car beside the rude coffin during the last part of the trip. Barker collapsed after reaching here with the body.

Funeral services for Brown will be held here tomorrow afernoon.

MOSCOW CABLE FROM HAYWOOD AWAITED HERE

"Big Bill" Haywood will be located before the end of another twenty-four hours.

This statement was made yesterday by Otto Christensen, principal attorney and one of the bondsmen for the I. W. W. leader, who mysteriously disappeared on the eve of the date set for his return to Leavenworth to serve a twenty year sentence for sedition.

"I think," Christensen told District Attorney Clyne, "that Haywood is in Moscow attending a conference of the Red trade unions. I have received word from Riga that my cablegrams informing him of the Supreme court's decision that he must serve out his sentence have been forwarded to Moscow. I believe that indicates a knowledge of Haywood's presence in the Russian city."

Looks for Direct Word.

An answer direct from Haywood is expected by Attorney Christensen. If he does not receive any word, federal officials say, that fact will strengthen reports that Haywood is planning to remain abroad and has no idea of keeping faith with his bondsmen or the courts.

While Attorney Christensen was in conference with the district attorney, Vincent St. John, former secretary and treasurer of the I. W. W. and frequently dubbed the "brains" of the group, appeared at the federal building with his attorney, Clarence Darrow.

"I have no statement to make about Haywood's disappearance," he told reporters.

Mr. Clyne subsequently stated St. John called to give assurance he would report at Leavenworth Monday. He will be accompanied there by deputy marshals.

Three Other I. W. W. "Lost."

After his conference with Mr. Clyne, Attorney Christensen told Maurice Klein, acting marshal, that he had no definite information concerning the whereabouts of three of the convicted wabblies. This statement lent strength to a rumor that Haywood had been accompanied to Russia by a number of co-defendants.

"The mere fact that I am not able to assure the marshal that all of the forty-five I. W. W. members out on bond will be on hand Monday is not, necessarily, evidence that they have jumped their bonds," Christensen explained. "It only means they have not reported to me."

Attorney for Peggy Joyce Says She Plans Hard Fight

Peggy Hopkins Joyce is preparing affidavits to disprove the charges made in the divorce bill of her millionaire husband, James Stanley Joyce, lumberman, with offices in the McCormick building. This message was brought back to Chicago yesterday by Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, who has been retained by Peggy's New York lawyers to represent her at the trial. Mr. Kirkland declared he had talked with his client for only ten minutes, and that the details of her case had not been arranged.

MACK IGNORES FOES' DEMAND THAT HE RESIGN

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Julian W. Mack of Chicago, president of the Zionist organization of America, has been asked to resign unless he recalls the Palestine donation fund started in opposition to the Keren Hayesod, the official fund of the World Zionist organization, which was recently started by proclamation of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the international body.

The letter to Judge Mack was sent as the result of a meeting of chairmen of the district organization on Thursday night, at which Judge Mack was charged with insincerity and "betrayal of the Zionists of America."

Most of the speakers at the chairmen's meeting contended Judge Mack had no legal right, under the resolutions of the Buffalo Zionist convention, to establish the Palestine donation fund without the approval of the world organization.

Judge Mack said tonight he had no intention of resigning and called the action of the chairmen "absurd." When asked what would come of it, he said "Nothing."

ALEXANDER BELL PROTESTS 'RUDE' BORDER OFFICER

Noted Inventor and Wife Slept in Detention Hut.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Incensed over treatment by a United States immigration officer, which resulted in his wife, his secretary, Miss Catherine Mackenzie and himself spending Tuesday night in the immigration detention building in Vanceboro, Maine, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, arrived here today to make a complaint to the state department.

Protests are Unavailing.

Dr. Bell's secretary is a Canadian. The detention order was issued against her only, and, according to the scientist, was animated by spite on the part of the immigration agent. When protests were unavailing, Dr. and Mrs. Bell voluntarily left the train and spent the night with Miss Mackenzie.

Next morning they returned to St. John. Wahington authorities had been appealed to and the difficulty was quickly adjusted. The party then resumed its journey, arriving in Washington yesterday.

Threatened to "Get Her."

Miss Mackenzie's difficulty, Mr. Bell said, grew out of encounter with the inspector last September, when he threatened to "get her" if she came back.

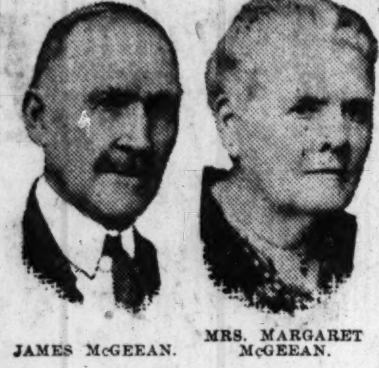
On that ocasion, it was explained, Miss Mackenzie and her mother were on their way to Boston, where the former expected to take a steamer for Europe. The inspector demaned a head tax from each of them as "alien immigrants."

That Odor Will Not Rout North Shore Golfers Today

North Shore golfers needn't fear to get out on the links today. The odor from the Great Lakes Chemical company near Highland Park, which drove players from the Exmoor, Onwentsia, Skokie, and Bob-o'-Link links recently whenever a west wind blew, is no more. City Attorney Samuel Holmes of Highland Park yesterday announced the company had "adjusted the smell."

Their Second Wedding

Married 50 Years, Couple Will Go Through Ceremony Again on Golden Anniversary.



JAMES McGEEAN. MRS. MARGARET McGEEAN.

At a nuptial mass tomorrow morning in St. Mel's church, Mr. and Mrs. James McGeean of 4247 Wilcox avenue will renew marriage vows pledged fifty years ago at St. Bernard's church in Watertown, Wis. Forty guests will be entertained at breakfast following the mass, which will be sung by the Rev. Father Kennedy, a cousin of Mr. McGeean.

Chicago has been Mr. McGeean's home since 1869. He is a veteran street car man. During the Chicago fire he ran the last car over the Jefferson street line as the fire hose was placed across the track. Mr. McGeean is now employed by the elevated roads. Both he and his wife are 75 years old, and both enjoy vigorous health.

There are five children and seven grandchildren.

GREAT LAKES TO ATLANTIC WATER ROUTE WINS O. K.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—That the proposed waterway from the great lakes to the Atlantic is feasible and practicable is the opinion of the engineers of the international joint commission.

Members of the senate have been informed privately to this effect and Senator Atlee Pomerene, Ohio, has submitted recommendation for an appropriation to meet that state's share of the expenses of construction.

The engineers have prepared a report stating that the project can be constructed at a lower cost than was first estimated. It probably will cost the United States and Canada $250,000,000 for the project, divided equally between them.

The engineers estimate that the project can be completed in four years.

Fears Her Husband Has Kidnaped Little Son

Three year old Lloyd Jewett Jr. disappeared yesterday from his home at 2123 Darrow avenue, Evanston, and his mother believes his father has taken him. She says Jewett threatened to take the boy when he left her some time ago and went to Bakersfield, Cal. Mrs. Jewett says her husband was seen in Evanston yesterday.

MANY CHARITIES OFFER AID FOR UNWED MOTHER

Seek to Give Child a Fair Chance in World.

"We have built this maternity hospital not for sentiment or philanthropy, or to shield the sinner, but because we realize the great value of a baby's soul."—Archbishop Mundelein at the dedication of Misericordia Maternity hospital.

The main trend of modern study of the problem of illegitimacy is in the direction of the child's welfare and protection rather than into the causative factors of his birth. All efforts to extend social service and to enact new legislation deal first with the child's health and education, and, second, with his protection by the courts. The new attitude is that the illegitimate child is a member of the community and, as such, is entitled to all the opportunities and benefits accorded any other child.

Two great regional conferences on the "Standards of Legal Protection for Children Born Out of Wedlock," attended by the leading welfare workers, child experts, and legal reformers of the country, were held a year ago, one in Chicago and one in New York.

The Old Way and the New.

At one of these Homer Folks, secretary of the New York State Charities Aid association, announced the new point of view of social service as follows:

"The older idea, with which we were familiar twenty years ago, rather assumes that everybody can look after his own child, and so the old way was to hold out a threatening hand and say, in effect: 'You can take good care of your child if you want to. If you don't, we will take it away from you and punish you.' The newer idea of the health official and nurse is: 'Of course, you want to take good care of your child. If you are short of anything, let us help you out.'"

Provision for the care of illegitimate babies in earliest times was occasioned by the prevalence of infanticide and abandonment. What might be called involuntary infanticide through ignorance or lack of funds is the main cause for the protection of illegitimate babies today.

First Foundling Home in Paris.

The first modern founding asylum was established by St. Vincent de Paul in Paris in 1638. St. Vincent's orphan asylum on the north side, which handles approximately 300 illegitimate babies annually, is an offspring of that famous parent organization. Other organizations of national scope caring for illegitimate babies are the Florence Crittenden missions and the Salvation Army maternity homes.

In Chicago and Illinois, the United Charities, the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, the Jewish Aid society, the Central Bureau of Catholic Charities, Juvenile Protective association, and numerous other organizations are also aiding in this work.

Figures compiled for THE TRIBUNE by the Illinois Home and Aid society show that, of 4,145 children aided by that organization in 1918, 1919, and 1920, 831 were of illegitimate birth. Only nine of the 185 children received by the home department of the society in those three years died. The home department receives the permanent guardianship of children committed for adoption through the courts of the 102 counties of the state. The proportion of children are about two-sevenths for Chicago and five-sevenths for the rest of the state.

Figures for Three Years.

The aid department of the society handles the case of children referred from Cook county for temporary care. The figures for the two departments follow:

	—Home—		—Aid—
Year.	Legit.	Illegit.	Legit.	Illegit.
1918	156	57	782	220
1919	115	67	863	215
1920	79	61	1,319	211

This society, which handles the cases of the Negro children as well, received 211 applications for aid from Negros in 1920. Forty-eight were cases of illegitimate children.

Of 5,336 families in need of rehabilitation reached by the United Charities last year, 148 cases of illegitimacy were reported. Thirty-nine unmarried mothers were aided and assistance given to twenty-four unmarried couples.

Work of the Jewish Aid.

The Jewish Aid society helped 678 children in 1920. Of the 405 placed in homes, only about ten were of illegitimate birth. The society reports only three deaths of babies in the last three years, and two of these were of illegitimate birth.

It can be seen from these incomplete figures that only a small percentage of the estimated 3,000 illegitimate babies born in Chicago last year received the benefit of institutional care and protection.

Damage estimated at $5,000 was caused by a fire in the Great Western Novelty company plant at 226 West Huron street yesterday.

WOMEN ON ALL JURIES, PLAN OF JUDGE M'DONALD

And the Feminine Bailiff May Arrive Next.

Women will be called to serve on all juries in Cook conty, if recommendations made yesterday by Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald of the Criminal court are acted on favorably by the executive committee of the Circuit and Superior courts.

In a letter to this committee Judge McDonald asked that the matter of impaneling women jurors in all cases be taken up at a joint meeting of the judges' committee and the jury commissioners. If their report is favorable, the commissioners immediately would begin preparing a list of women for county jury service.

Judge McDonald's action followed the formal request of Assistant State's Attorney Lloyd Heth for a woman jury to try Mrs. Cora Isabella Orthwein, divorcee, to be tried for slaying Herbert P. Ziegler.

Judge Broadens Plan.

"I'm satisfied there is no legal obstacle," Judge McDonald said. "It is simply a question of whether we wish to have women jurors in all cases. It is out of the question to call a special jury of women for this one case."

"We are ready to go ahead with women jurors in all cases," replied Mr. Heth. "State's Attorney Crowe is in favor of the plan."

Most of the opposition to the enlisting of women for jury service has centered about the increased work that would be caused by the necessity of preparing a list of eligible men and women totaling more than 800,000. Another factor is the fact that most of the court buildings have no facilities for the care of the women. It would be necessary to employ women bailiffs.

Ninety Days for New List.

Charles W. Seinwerth, a jury commissioner, estimated it would take at least ninety days to make up the new list.

"We are ready to go ahead," he said, "as soon as the plan is approved. We are already compiling a list of all women electors outside the city proper."

The Orthwein case is scheduled for trial before Judge Wilson on May 16. If it is possible to obtain a woman jury by waiting a few weeks, the case may be postponed.

HERE'S GOOD NEWS! BREAD PRICES WILL TUMBLE TOMORROW

Beginning tomorrow morning, Chicago will save approximately $17,500 a day on its bread bill. Wholesale bakers will deliver bread to the retailers at 8½ cents for pound loaves and 12½ cents for pound and one-half loaves, reductions of 1½ cents on the small and 2 cents on the large loaves.

The reduction follows four conferences with Russell J. Poole, city Hi Cost expert. At a final conference with Mr. Poole yesterday the bakers declared the cut will mean that they will lose money until May 31, when they expect to put into effect a 20 per cent reduction in wages.

One big baker said the wholesale cost of a loaf of bread is now 46 per cent labor. He said the cost of making and delivering 266 pound loaves of bread is as follows: One barrel of flour, $8; other materials, $2.88; labor and fuel, $11.57; administration expense, $1.73—total, $24.18—making the cost per loaf 9.09 cents. Bakers are buying flour as low as $7.25 a barrel, but declare they have much $8 flour still on hand.

If retailers are satisfied with profits of 1½ cents on each loaf, bread will retail at 10 cents for pound loaves and 14 cents for twenty-four ounce loaves.

YOUNG CRANE NOT GIRLS' ANNOYER, TWO BOYS STATE

Witnesses Say Man Was Not Nearly So Tall.

Developments in Judge Thomson's court yesterday, where Herbert P. Crane Jr. is being tried for an alleged attack on two little girls in Lincoln park last January, indicated the jury will have to give serious consideration to his stature.

Attorneys for the defense introduced two juvenile witnesses who declared they were ten feet from the assailant when the alleged attack took place. Both failed to identify Crane.

Say Assailant Was Short Man.

William R. Briggs, 845 North Wells street, and Harvey Witke, 112 West Erie street, each 14, declared it was impossible to make out the assailant's features, but each seemed confident he was of short and stocky build.

"We were hurrying home to dinner and took a short cut through the park," William said. "A short distance from the monument we heard screams. A little girl was on the ground and a man was choking her."

"Did the man resemble this defendant?" asked Attorney Frederick W. Bangs, pointing to Crane.

Not Nearly So Tall.

"No," was the decisive answer. "He wasn't nearly so tall."

Crane's housekeeper, Mrs. Sarah Frizell, of 338 Belden avenue, described his movements on the day of the alleged attack. She declared he had been out of the house for only ten minutes.

BET YOU CAN'T GUESS CAUSE OF THIS BANK SCARE

It was nearing noon. The Winnetka State bank, with piles of money in sight, was about to close its doors. A rakish taxi hove to on the opposite curb. It contained two men, "suspicious characters." The men sat and looked at the bank.

Henry Hale, president of the depository, armed everybody in the place, called up Chief of Police Waino Peterson, then warned the Winnetka Trust and Savings bank.

The chief and his force arrived quietly. They interrogated the pair, while fingering their weapons and waiting for the right moment to shoot. And they learned the men had come to get a prescription filled in the corner drug store. Merely that. They proved it by the druggist.

KISSABLE?

Wealthy Manufacturer Sues His Wife, Alleging She Was Given to Protracted Periods of Osculation with Other Men.

MRS. MINNIE H. ODALSKI.

These words greeted the ears of Edmund J. Odalski, a wealthy hardware manufacturer, when he walked into his home at 3710 Wrightwood avenue one night two weeks ago. He recognized his wife's voice.

The real surprise came a few minutes later, according to a bill of divorce filed yesterday against Mrs. Minnie H. Odalski, when his wife paid her "forfeit" to one Don Smith, an insurance broker. So "fervent and prolonged" was the kiss that it was an "embarrassing eternity" for the husband, the bill states.

Furthermore, Odalski, who at present is living apart from his wife at the Bradley hotel, is suing Smith for $25,000 for alienation of his wife's affections. Both bills were filed by Attorney Benjamin Ehrlich.

Illinois Boys of Santiago Hold 23d Annual Reunion

The twenty-third annual reunion and dinner of the Illinois branch of the Society of the Army of Santiago de Cuba was held last night in the Hotel Sherman. Among the speakers were Capt. Percy B. Coffin, Sergt. E. L. Prescott, Lieut. Albert E. Gebert, Henry R. Rathbone, Dr. Frederick A. Fisher, and Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn.

BRITAIN'S GUNS END CAREER OF ENEMY WARSHIP

Lion, Beatty's Flagship, Is Disabled.

The fierce attack by the German dreadnaughts on Admiral Beatty's flagship Lion is graphically described by Lieut. Young in yesterday's installment of the Dogger bank battle. Despite the battering it received from the enemy's powerful shells, the Lion continued to give a good account of itself, its guns working as fast as the gun crews could make them work.

BY LIEUT. FILSON YOUNG.

[Copyright: 1921: In U. S. by The Chicago Tribune.]

The Blücher now seemed to be well on fire, and the interval between her and the other battle cruisers was increasing. Admiral Von Hipper had definitely decided to leave her to her fate and push on for safety. She was the weakest of his ships, and had been in the most exposed position the whole time. If he had put the Blücher in front of him on the way home she would have been better protected and might have kept up her speed, while he himself would have had the post of honor in the rearmost ship.

In speaking of posts of honor I had forgotten to say that the admiral and his staff did not remain long in the conning tower. The only view from that protected place is through a very narrow slit at the height of the eye, which, although it gives a view of a kind around three-quarters of the horizon, was of little use to the admiral.

He was thoroughly enjoying himself and did not like to waste his day in the cramped and crowded security of the conning tower; and he and the flag lieutenant, the flag commander, and secretary were soon up on the compass platform again, where the view was perfect, although the danger from splinters was considerable. They were flying about us all the time in the foretop; often we could see them, and one had the feeling that if one put a finger out beyond the shelter of the thin steel screen it would be shot off.

Speed Is Urged.

10:28 a. m.—Lion to battle cruisers: "Form a line of bearing N. N. W. and proceed at your utmost speed."

It was absolutely necessary now to press the chase as hard as possible and the definite speed signals were abandoned, especially as full speed had now been worked up to in every ship, and it was a case of getting in as close as possible to the enemy and pressing the advantage of our gun fire, which was beginning to punish him severely.

10:45 a. m.—Lion to battle cruisers: "Turn together one point to port."

These two alterations were made with the same end in view—that of closing the range. The Lion was at this time being heavily battered by the constant fire of the Seydlitz and Moltke; it was marvelous how she stood the pounding of their formidable eleven inch shells, which, although they had neither the weight nor the bursting power of our 13.5s, had been able, as we have seen, to stave in the armored side of the ship. But it was obvious that the Lion could not keep up her speed much longer. At 10:35 she was hit and again a minute later, and at 10:41 we thought her last moment had surely come when we got a message up the voice pipe from the lower conning tower saying that "A" turret magazine was on fire.

Await Final Blast.

We sat amid that terrible din waiting for the last gorgeous explosion and the eternal silence that would follow it, but it did not come; and after four minutes of suspense our sentence of death was reprieved in a welcome message that the fire was out, the magazine flooded, and we were proceeding at twenty knots.

10:45 a. m.—Lion to battle cruisers: "Close enemy as rapidly as possible consistent with keeping all guns bearing."

It was now clear that the Lion could not maintain her position at the head of the squadron, and the admiral, in this and the following signals, endeavored to make it clear to the others that they should continue to press the attack.

10:48 a. m.—Lion to Indomitable: "Attack enemy making to the northward."

The Blücher had hauled out of the enemy's line to the northward on fire, with a heavy list, and as the Indomitable was too far astern to be able to engage the three other ships she was detailed to finish off the Blücher.

Lion Is Hit Twice.

10:49 a. m.—Lion hit by salvoes twice.

10:51 a. m.—Lion hit by salvoes twice.

10:52 a. m.—Lion listing 10 degrees to port. Port engine stopped. All lights out and wireless out of action.

10:58 a. m.—Lion to battle cruisers: "Turn together eight points to port."

This signal was made in consequence of the sighting of enemy submarines on the starboard bow. It was necessary to make a sharp turn so as to get clear of the track of the destroyers ahead of us.

This was made to modify the eight point turn ordered a few minutes before, which, while it was necessary in order to clear the squadron of the track of the destroyers, would, if persisted in, cause it to lose ground in the chase. The "course N. E." signal, if obeyed, would take the squadron between the sinking Blücher and the other enemy battle cruisers in case they should attempt to close round her, while if they continued their flight it would bring at any rate the two fastest of our battle cruisers closer on their track.

Signal Halliards Shot Away.

11:05 a. m.—Lion to battle cruisers: "Attack the rear of the enemy."

All the signal halliards had now been shot away except two, and on these the two separate signals before described were blowing out in the wind, each consisting of two flags, "Compass B" and "A. F." (attack rear of enemy).

11:07 a. m.—Lion to battle cruisers: "Keep nearer to the enemy."

The Lion had now hauled out and the remainder of the squadron was about to pass her, heading to the N. N. E. in a somewhat straggling line of bearing. To make his intentions finally clear as they passed the Lion, the admiral made one more signal. The compass signal was hauled down and the signal "74" made, "Keep nearer to the enemy." This signal, with "A. F." and another hoisted on a tack line, "Repeat the signal the admiral is now making," wah flying as the squadron passed, and remained flying until it had gone out of sight, and indeed for some time afterwards.

ELKS TOUR CITY FOR $2,000,000 BUILDING SITE

The Elks' national headquarters building committee toured Chicago yesterday seeking a location for the $2,000,000 headquarters building. Chicago is one of a number of cities being considered.

The committee, headed by former Gov. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, included J. P. Fanning, Edward Rightor, James Nicholson, Fred Harper, Bruce Campbell, Ray Benjamin, R. W. Brown, and Fred Robinson. The reception committee was composed of William J. Sinek, John F. Delaney, Patrick L. McArdle, and Frank Carroll.

END OF BASEBALL POOLS DECREED BY FITZMORRIS

Chief of Police Fitzmorris declared war on baseball pools yesterday, announcing that private investigators have already turned evidence into his office against the operators of twenty pools.

"Crime is on the decrease, my reports show, and the department has time to give to noncriminal violations of the law," he said. "The baseball pools come first.

"Because of the ramifications throughout the city, captains have difficulty in handling pools. Investigators are geeting evidence against them and we expect to nail each of the twenty by arresting the operators themselves."

Though the operators of the pools, according to the chief, are not numerous, their agents number hundreds and their patrons thousands. Several pools operating in Chicago are national in scope, the chief said.

Body of Harry D. Parker on Way Here for Burial

The body of Harry Deol Parker, husband of Lottie Blair Parker, author of "'Way Down East" and other plays, who died in Miami, Fla., April 19, will arrive in Chicago today for burial tomorrow. Mr. Parker until a few years ago was active as a theatrical producer and manager. For the last twenty-five years he has made his home at Great Neck, Long Island. Burial will be in Rosehill cemetery.

ODD BIRDS ADORN OUR FAMILY TREE AT NEW MUSEUM

Grandpa Neanderthal One of Cavemen Present.

Saunterers down Michigan boulevard may be intrigued to know that in a former incarnation they were, perhaps, related to Homo Neanderthalis.

Nothing much to look at were these Neanderthal persons. Antoinette Donnelly wouldn't have allowed them even a short sprint in a beauty contest. In the first place, they had no chin to speak of, their foreheads were almost missing, and their heads were—well, flat.

"Gosh, what an awful mug!" you would say if you met one on the street. And then the Neanderthal man, as likely as not, would crack you over the cranium just by way of greeting, not recognizing you as part of his distant posterity.

A Portrait of an Ancestor.

But, admitted that these Neanderthal persons weren't much for looks, there is, it is alleged, only a missing mental link or two between them and the busy business man of the present day.

The Neanderthal man was a short, stocky, hairy individual, about 5 feet 3 inches in height. He had short arms and legs, a powerful build, huge hands and feet, a great apelike chest, and a clumsy, shambling gait. His neck jutted out from between his shoulders like that of an animal. He could never throw his chest out or stand squarely erect, and his mental powers reflected his physical limitations.

A more uninventive person could be hard to imagine. He took life as he found it, but never tried to improve anything. They say he liked to go hunting, but the refuse in his caves indicates he was fonder of falling upon wounded and disabled beasts than he was of actually chasing game.

He was fastidious in his laziness, as well. He, or more than likely, she, cut up the animal on the spot, and lugged home only the choicest portions. The Neanderthal caves are full of the long bones of game, but ribs, necks, and vertebrae are rare.

Girls! He Was a Cave Man!

The Neanderthals were the "cave men," as the term is applied. They were fond of living in caves, because such places didn't require any work to keep up. Sometimes they got rheumatism from sleeping in damp caverns. They wore skin clothes, we know. They did not have stone hatchets, contrary to the popular opinion. Neither did they have bows and arrows, darts or javelins. They fought and hunted with clubs, spears, and stones, and were in a lower state of savagery than the lowest savage of today.

The Neanderthal men were not all bad, however. They were ungainly and ugly, but they cared for their families after a fashion, and appear to have been genuinely grieved when one of their number died. The race lived on the earth for half a million years and only died out some 15,000 or 20,000 years ago.

There are lots of other queer homos who lived—and still live—in various sectors of our sphere. You'll find 'em all dwelling à la deplica, and very still and peaceable, just across the Illinois Central tracks at Roosevelt road. For nearly a year transportation experts have been busy moving exhibits from the original home of the Field museum in Jackson park to the new $6,750,000 palace on the lake front.

On May 3 the new museum will be opened to the public

ENGAGED.

Chicago Society Girl Who Will Become Bride of A. H. Revell Jr.

MISS ISABEL JOAN WATKINS.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH OGLE WATKINS of 199 Lake Shore drive announce the engagement of their daughter, Isabel Joan, to Alexander H. Revell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander H. Revell of the Webster hotel. The wedding will take place in the late autumn. Miss Watkins was one of the season's most popular debutantes, and is a general favorite in the younger set, as well as in the east, where she spends much of her time. She is a niece of Mrs. William J. Chalmers and of Mrs. William C. Pullman. Mr. Revell is a Yale graduate of the class of 1915, and is associated in business with his father.

ARKANSAS TAX PAYERS SUE TO TEST ROAD LAW

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—A suit to test the constitutionality of the Arkansas road laws under the federal as well as the Arkansas constitution has been filed in the Chancery court of Askley county, Ark., by various landowners and taxpayers. They allege that the district has been burdened with a road debt of $1,343,859, which, the complaint states, is "more than double the fair assessed value of the real property of the entire district."

The complaint also charges that the road commissioners agreed to pay to Guy E. Thompson for selling the road bonds a fee in excess of $50,000, and that the principle "of absolute confiscation" of property holds throughout the district.

It is also asserted that a tract of land valued at $200 has been assessed for roads at $423.46 and that this tax was imposed without the consent of the taxpayer.

Hold Private Funeral Service for 'Jack' Cudahy

Los Angeles, Cal., April 23.—Private funeral services were held here today for John P. Cudahy, who killed himself Wednesday. The body was placed in a vault pending a decision as to its final disposition. Cudahy left no will, according to his attorney, who stated it was unnecessary, as his income of $100,000 a year would automatically go to the widow and children.

DAVIS AGAIN IS AMID ALIENS AT AMERICA'S GATE

Came as Immigrant Boy; Visits to Inspect.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Forty years ago an immigrant boy 8 years old, from Tredegar, Wales, passed through the old immigration station at Castle Garden.

Today this boy, James J. Davis, now secretary of labor, stood again among immigrant throngs, this time at the Ellis island station. He was making the first of a series of inspections in a general survey of immigration stations, for the purpose, he said, of improving the service "along common sense line."

Severs Red Tape.

Secretary Davis was not long in putting the "heart sense" idea into effect. He severed the red tape which would have deported a widow and her four little children and a pretty Polish girl of 19 years. He ordered that a Spanish stowaway, clad in rags, be outfitted.

"I can remember my arrival almost as if it were yesterday," said Secretary Davis. "The first impression of the immigrant is the lasting one."

Entering the baggage room, Secretary Davis paused before a great pile of trunks and bags.

"That looks familiar," he said, pointing to a big, iron strapped box. "We had one just like that. Mother had two feather beds, but they were stolen."

Finds Little to Condemn.

Secretary Davis displayed the "common sense" in recommending several changes which he believed would better conditions at Ellis island, although he said he found "much to praise and little to condemn, in spite of complaints made in the past."

The improvements which Secretary Davis favors are renovation, the establishment of a delousing department, and a plan whereby radicals will not be sent to Ellis island until the eve of their deportation.

It is understood that Secretary Davis also favors an extension of the labor bureau to Europe in order that prospective immigrants may be "hand picked" before they are permitted to come here.

Real Sleuth Clears Men "Trapped" by 2 Amateurs

Finger print evidence furnished by an amateur detective caused the indictment of A. P. Webster and Marvin Etnier, burglar alarm mechanics, in connection with the theft of $35,000 in Liberty bonds. Other evidence, furnished by Capt. Michael Evans of the identification bureau, exonerated the men. The amateur's evidence was worthless, according to Capt. Evans.

DEATH NOTICES

IN MEMORIAM.

BAUER—Elsie Bauer. In loving memory of my wife who passed away two years ago, April 24, 1919.

Today recalls sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest.
Those who think of her today
Are the ones who loved her best.
LOVING HUSBAND.

DEAN—Mary E. Dean, April 25, 1919. "To live in the hearts of those we leave behind is not to die."

GIETL—Paul Gietl. In sad remembrance of our beloved father, who passed away April 25, 1919.

In patience he suffered,
His sufferings were sore.
Now they are ended;
He suffers no more.
The parting was painful,
But God knew best
When he called our dear father
Home to rest.
FROM LOVING WIFE AND SONS.

MOTZER—Millie Virginia Motzer, passed away one year ago today at the age of 15 years.

A precious one form us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled.
The spot that's vacant in our home
Never can be filled.
From parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Motzer; Brothers Harvey and Chesterfield, Sister Irene, and Auntie Annie B. Cook.

DELTOR
The New Miracle in Home Clothes-Creation

IN the NEW things it does and the NEW economies it brings, the Deltor is truly a miracle-worker for every woman who makes her own clothes! It makes possible a Parisian finish and chic that home sewing, no matter HOW skilfully done, could never quite achieve heretofore. It makes possible

A Saving of 50c to $10 on Materials Alone

And it makes all as easy as looking at pictures—for the Deltor shows you, by a marvelously simple set of pictures that any woman can follow at once—

1 How to layout your pattern, in your size, on every width of suitable fabric, as the expert would, using every inch of material, and saving ¼ to 1⅛ yards on one dress.
2 How to put the garment together with the skill and finesse of the expert—so that you not only have no trouble with collars, or sleeves, or any detail at all, but, as each part joins the next with perfect sureness, you achieve the set, "drape," perfection of a finished product of Paris!
3 How to finish your frocks with the inimitably clever little touches of the true French modiste—where to embroider, where to picot, where to use hemstitching instead of French seams—every little touch that makes a real French creation look so different from the commonplace.

FIND out what the Deltor can do for YOU. Select any new Butterick pattern (the Deltor comes ONLY with Butterick patterns)—and use its new and wonderful advantages to add to your wardrobe the "dress of your dreams"—for less than you ever dreamed it could cost!

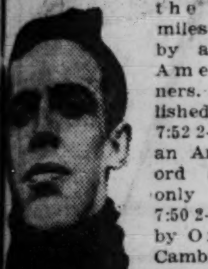
DEMPSEY FITS HIMSELF FOR BATTLE OF HIS CAREER

IX NEW RECORDS ET, ONE IS TIED, N DRAKE RELAYS

nes Defeats Illinois in Star 2 Mile Event.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Des Moines, Ia., April 23.—[Special.] Ames relay quartet today in tthe Drake games ran the fastest two miles ever made by a team of American runners. They established a mark of 7:52 2-5, which is an American record and second only to that of 7:50 2-5 hung up by Oxford and Cambridge runners at the Penn relays last year. Illinois was the principal victim of Ames' record feat.



NED MERRIAM. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Five other records for the games were broken and one was equaled.

The old American record of 7:53 was established back in 1910 by tthe Irish-American team of New York, composed of F. Riley, J. Bromilow, Melvin Sheppard, and A. Kiviat. Six years later Penn's team tied the mark in the Penn relay games.

Coached by Ned Merriam.

The Ames spiked shoe experts deserve great credit for their running today. The team, composed of Arthur Wolters, Stanley Graham, Herbert Webb, and Otis Higgins, was coached by Ned Merriam, and they inhaled all a veteran flier could teach them.

While the lion's share of the honors went to Ames, the teams representing Cedar Rapids High school also gathered laurels. The Hawkeye "preps" won four relay races and established carnival marks in three of them. Cedar Rapids started on its record breaking rampage by winning the half mile relay in 1:34 3-5. The old mark of 1:35 2-5 and was made by East Des Moines High in 1917.

New Prep Medley Mark.

Cedar Rapids then took the one mile relay and hung up a new mark of 3:34. The former record was 3:36 3-5 and was made by East Des Moines in 1916.

The team completed its day's work by winning the high school medley in 8:45, which broke the mark of 8:46 made by the same team last year.

Next in the honorary roll came Cornell college of Iowa, coached by Finger, a former University of Chicago athlete. With George Bretnall, one of the best runners of middle western colleges, as anchor man, Cornell won the mile and two mile relays in its class. Finger's team took the one mile in 3:23 3-5, which bettered the old mark of 3:26 1-5 made by Wabash in 1917. Cornell lowered the mark in the two mile by winning the event in 8:11 4-5. Morningside was the holder of the former record of 8:15.

East Des Moines High had the distinction of tying the Drake relay record of :46 4-5 in the shuttle race.

Illini Wins Two Races.

While teams and individuals in the Missouri Valley conference won honors in the games, Big Ten squads cut in for their share of glory. Illinois took first place in the one mile relay, four mile, and finished second in the two mile. Notre Dame took first place in the half mile sprint relay, while the other major contest went to Ames.

Honors in the two individual events went to athletes of this section. Wright of Nebraska, victor in the high hurdles at the Illinois indoor relays and winner of the same event in the outdoor conference last year, won the 120 yard high timbers, with Wynn of Notre Dame, second. Anderson of Minnesota was third, while Knollin of Wisconsin, who won the high sticks in the Big Ten indoor meet, was fourth. The Cornhusker leaped the barrier in :15 2-5.

Deering Wins Dash.

Dave Deering, also of Nebraska, proved the fastest sprinter of the field by taking the century in even time. This sterling athlete, who is looming up as one of the west's premier sprinters, won the dash at the Illinois indoor games and will be a factor in the outdoor meets to be held by the Missouri Valley conference and by the Big Ten universities. Paulu of Grinnell was second and Wilson of Iowa third. Kelly, who came all the way from Pittsburgh to represent Carnegie Tech, was fourth.

In the high school relays, Oak Park and La Grange, Cook county schools, performed well. The former was beaten by Cedar Rapids in the one mile, while the latter succumbed to the same team in the medley.

6,000 See Events.

A crowd of 6,000 saw the games, which were conducted by M. B. Banks, Drake director of athletics. A. A. Stagg of Chicago acted as referee, while John Griffith, founder of the games while athletic director here, was the starter. This year's event was by far the most successful in its history, and is looming up as one of the west's greatest outdoor track and field classics.

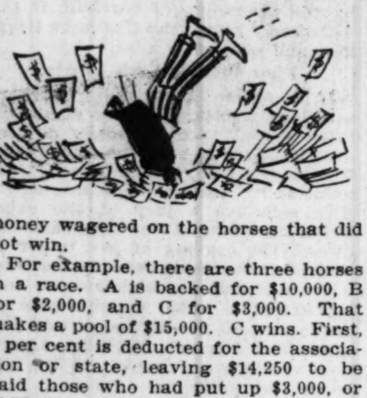
In the Wake of the News

PARI-MUTUEL betting, we think, is preferable to the old time odds layer in many respects, although heavy bettors and plungers as a rule prefer the bookmaker.

In the pari-mutuels the bets are recorded with machines and the public makes the favorites and determines the odds. In principle it is a pool, with the backers of the winner taking the money wagered on the horses that did not win.



For example, there are three horses in a race. A is backed for $10,000, B for $2,000, and C for $3,000. That makes a pool of $15,000. C wins. First, 5 per cent is deducted for the association or state, leaving $14,250 to be paid those who had put up $3,000, or $4.75 for each dollar invested, which equals odds of 3¾ to 1.

These machines have the names of the horses and jockeys on their face, and as each bet is placed a man clicks the machine, which shows the amount bet on each horse and the total bet on the race.

The money in all the different machines forms one big pool, so it is difficult to determine the odds you will receive, and, moreover, you do not know how the wagering may veer later.

The Wake usually looks at the machines of higher denomination, $25, $50, or $100, as the case may be, makes a mental calculation, then at the $2 machines, and averages the play. This, of course, is only approximate, but is based on the theory that big players are more apt to fancy favorites, while the small fry shoot at long shots.

The speed with which the returns from the various machines are added and verified after a race and the calculation of odds made is simply marvelous. At the larger tracks the men at this work are as accurate as bank clerks.

Reason for Mutuel Betting.

Argument for mutuel wagering is that it discourages dishonesty. A horse must win for its backers to cash. Under the booking system bookies have been known to "lay against" a horse which was "dead" either through connivance with the jockey, trainer, or owner. "Pulling" a horse—jockey refusing to allow it to win—or running it "short"—not ready for a race—can give no direct return. To profit, those in the know must pick the winner and bet on it. Of course, a disappointing race may bring better odds the next time out, but again the winner must be picked, and racing, like baseball, is never certain.

Mutuel betting or anything else cannot absolutely prevent dishonesty, but can make it more difficult.

The Havana race track operates under both forms of betting. It is noteworthy that the management found it necessary to install machines for the natives, who flock almost exclusively to the mutuels.

Dear Wake: What kind of love (or is it hate) are they learning at the Big Ten U's? With Chicago high schooling, four years' evening work at two Chicago technical institutes, and twelve years' business experience, supplemented by Alex. Of age-long strivings of the human soul
We could define, nor once be at a loss.
But now! Pathetic group of dumb illiterates,
We spell a tedious way from page to page;
Seize with new hope each sheet the newsboys scream,
Groping for light, and mumble in vain rage.
We are the horde of distant graduates
Who cannot learn the standing of our team.

Spars Daily with Lightweights to Add Speed.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey was being badly beaten by Joe Benjamin, the California lightweight, as we stepped in on the champion at Freddy Welsh's farm in Summit, N. J., this afternoon. Crashing down to inevitable defeat in a simple game of pool, the big boxer was fighting back just as earnestly to stave off Joe's victory as though he were occupied in a championship battle with the odds drifting against him. As a pool player Dempsey still retains his title as champion pugilist of the world.

HARRY NEWMAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Jack is a hard loser, even if the match happens to be a pool game, and when Benjamin pocketed the last ball, giving him the game, the champion rebelled against handing over the dollar side bet which had been agreed upon.

Catching Up with Morpheus.

Back in the quiet hills of Summit, far removed from the maddening throngs of New York's Broadway, Jack Dempsey is resting up, trying to get on even terms with his sleep schedule, which had been severely interrupted during his ground and lofty tumbling stunts while working in vaudeville.

It is a different Dempsey one sees on being ushered into the presence of the smiling lad who will cross arms next July 2 with Georges Carpentier for the boxing championship of the universe.

The sallow and drawn Dempsey who fought Bill Brennan last December has disappeared and in his place we see the rollicking, confident boy who flattened the giant Willard in three short rounds.

Looks Tough for Georges.

The same Dempsey who pasted the elongated Fred Fulton into a helpless bulk in one brief round is once more in evidence, and if appearances count for anything the French champion is in for an interesting trip when the two toe the scratch in the Jersey City arena July 2.

Dempsey has not as yet got down to hard work, and for the moment is just a big boy at play. Little Betty Welsh, aged 7, and Master Freddy Welsh, aged 6, the two handsome children of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Welsh, are the constant companions of the big fighter, and for hours the champion finds amusement taking part in the kid games of the two youngsters, of whom he is very fond.

"Never felt better in my life," was Dempsey's quick response to our first query as to his condition. "I am taking things easy for the present," added Jack, "and right now am not thinking about nor talking about the fight. All the hard work will come later. I'm on a vacation now, trying to get even with myself for the many hours I lost flopping around the country."

Explains Brennan Bout.

"Do you feel better than when you were preparing for the Brennan fight?" we asked, as the champion began telling of his wonderful improvement at golf.

"Yes, indeed," was Jack's reply. "I worked too long and too hard for that Brennan contest, and just before the time approached for the battle I went stale. It was a mistake and taught me a lesson.

"I couldn't get started in that bout with Brennan and before I realized it the rounds were skipping by before I concluded to take a hand in the proceedings. I was flat and logy at the start with Brennan, but I guess the finish was satisfactory enough to my friends."

"How about Carpentier, Jack? What round do you expect to win in?" we ventured.

Shies Off at Predictions.

"Tough fellow, Carpentier," was Dempsey's reply, "but I wish you would say that I am not given to making predictions. This boy Carpentier is a great fighter. His record speaks for itself, and if he weren't a great fighter he would never have stepped into the niche he now occupies in the boxing world.

"Of course, I expect to win. I'd be a fine chump if I did not think I was going to win. By the same token, the Frenchman thinks he is going to win—that makes it fair enough all around, doesn't it?"

"You can depend upon one thing," added Jack, "I will be in the best of shape when the old bell sounds. It ought to be a good scrap—and let the best man win. However, I am not naming any round. I want to play fair with my friends. Tell them that I will be ready when the time comes, and that I will never stop trying from the clang until the whistle blows ending the contest.

Staves Off Rustiness.

"At present I am doing just enough work to keep from getting rusty. This country life is great stuff. Three Question.

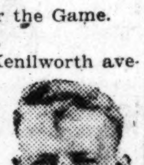
What Is Your Opinion of the Playing of the Renovated White Sox?

Where Asked.

White Sox Park, after the Game.

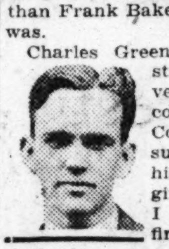
Answers.



Michael Smith, 1214 Kenilworth avenue, mechanic.—The new Sox have a team which is nearly as good as last year's. Up to date, they have not been hitting very well, but when they do, the leaders had better look out.

Jack Gill, 1001 Sunnyside avenue, real estate broker.—Judging the play of the Sox this year, I think they will replace Connie Mack's team for a few seasons, or until they can build up a better aggregation. There are still a lot of bad holes left in the team.

Nellie Carr, 713 Waveland avenue, manicurist.—I think the White Sox look awfully good, especially in their brand new white uniforms. I think that new player, Mulligan, will be a better player at third base than Frank Baker ever was.



Charles Green, 5635 North Clark street, salesman.—Not very good this year. Of course, you can't blame Comiskey for that. I suppose if he had it in his power, he would give us a better team. I figure the Sox will finish in about fifth or sixth place.

Frank Lawrence, 936 W. 35th street, bleacher fan, 7 years old.—The White Sox look good to me. With Dick Kerr to do the pitching, and Ray Schalk as a catcher, the fellows look like as good a team as any of them. The new players are snappy, too. I'll be rooting for the old Sox all the time.

PADDOCK'S SPEED CARRIES HIM TO WORLD'S RECORDS

Redlands, Cal., April 23.—Charles Paddock, University of Southern California sprinter, established his hold on the title of the "greatest runner of all time" today when he broke four world records and equaled another on the University of Redlands track.

Paddock was trying to set six new world marks. He was running in the Southern California A. A. U. meet.

In the 100 yard dash Paddock equaled the world's record of 9 3-5 seconds. Continuing to another tape in the 100 yard event, he covered the 100 meter distance in 10 3-5 seconds, which is one-fifth of a second faster than the previous record.

In the 200 meter event he set a mark of 21 1-5 seconds, a fifth of a second faster than the former mark. He then ran 300 yards in 30 1-5 seconds and 300 meters in 33 1-5 seconds. The latter mark is almost three seconds better than the previous record, held by the famous B. J. Wefers, which had stood for nearly twenty years.

Unified Cub Attack Ruffles Cards in Opening Scrap, 5-1

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

St. Louis, Mo., April 23.—[Special.]—The ridiculous manner in which Mr. Rickey's Cardinals performed made it compartively easy for Mr. Evers' Cubs to cop the delayed opener of the National league season here today, 5 to 1. The locals were without much needed pitching strength, and their fielding was far worse than the errors indicate, while on the other hand the Chicago lads presented a most unified front, both on offense and defense.

JIM YORK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The game started with a pair of southpaws, George Tyler for the Cubs and Jake May for the Cardinals, on the slab. After hurling two scoreless sessions Tyler developed a lame wing, and Jim York, also left handed, was ushered forth to work. He proved a most accomplished youngster, sailing through to the finish with all the ease of a veteran.

Hornsby Fails in Field.

May was forced to quit under pressure in the fourth, not being able to cope with his mates' poor fielding and the Cub wallops. However, there were a few blows that should have been outs, the lucky taps being mainly due to the fact that Rogers Hornsby does not perform in the outfield as well as on the inner defense. Hornsby failed on two drives that the ordinary outfielder would have caught.

After May was out of the picture Arthur Riviere took up the job of checking the Cubs. He did very well.

Evers' lads got started in the second inning. Although they unloaded three hits, only one tally resulted. Barber singled to left with one down, and Deal's Texas leaguer fly fell safe in right. Deal figured he could get an extra base on it, but was flagged, Fournier to Lavan. Barber pulled up at third while this was going on and scored when O'Farrell lined to left for two sacks. The latter drive should have been caught by Hornsby.

The Cub fourth opened with Maisel looping a Texas leaguer to right. After Barber had flied out, Deal doubled to left center and Maisel romped to third. O'Farrell walked and York lined to left, but Hornsby couldn't make a shoestring catch, so it went for a single, and Maisel and Deal counted. Hits by Flack and Hollocher scored O'Farrell, after which May was yanked and Riviere called in to subdue the uprising.

Score Again in the Sixth.

Deal drew a life in the sixth on Lavan's boot, and after O'Farrell had popped out York was safe on a muff by Toporcer. Flack then grounded out to Fournier, and Deal scooted home on the out.

The Cards collected their lone tally in the fifth, aided by the only Cub error of the game. Toporcer singled with one gone, and Riviere did the same. Terry took the return throw on the latter's swat and, in an attempt to catch Riviere, who had overrun first, heaved wide, permitting Toporcer to score.

WHITE SOX and Detroit again today.

Collins and Falk led the swatting with three hits each.

Cobb used eight left handed batsmen against Gleason's two southpaws.

Although the game went into extra innings, it was played so fast it finished before the 5 o'clock whistle blew.

Catcher Bassler of the Tygers called the turn on every steal the White Sox attempted and nailed his man each time with the aid of a pitchout.

Kelly Herbst, the catcher obtained from the Florida Hotel league, was given his release by Manager Gleason and left for home last night.

Hooper went back almost to the stand and pulled down a drive by Jones in the fourth, which looked as if it was going into the seats.

William Francis Pratt, the University of Alabama infielder, reported to the Sox boss and practiced before the game. He is a shortstop and a cousin of Derrill Pratt.

Notes

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 23.—[Special.]—The Cubs will wind up their visit here tomorrow. Vaughn and Haines may be the twirlers.

Unless Hornsby can do better in left field than he did today, Manager Rickey had better put him back where he belongs.

John Heydler, president of the National league, was on hand. He heard some of the rabid fans say a lot of mean things about his umpires.

Les Mann was sent up to bat for Riviere in the eighth. He hit the ball hard enough and on a line, but Maisel speared it in deep left center.

The customary opening day ceremonies were put on. Mayor Kiel pitched the first ball, Manager Rickey was presented with a chest of silver and some flowers, and Manager Evers drew a bouquet of roses.

Word was received from President Veeck today that Dave Robertson, outfielder, had decided to report to the Cubs. He will join the team at Cincinnati Monday. Veeck also informed Evers that Judge Landis had decided not to discipline Hoke Warner, who was charged with having played semi-pro ball.

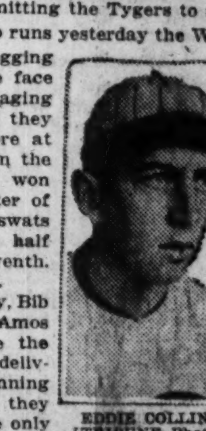
BY I. E. SANBORN.

After permitting the Tygers to steal a lead of two runs yesterday the White Sox kept plugging away in the face of discouraging breaks until they tied the score at two apiece in the ninth, then won with a cluster of three solid swats in the last half of the eleventh. Score, 3 to 2.



EDDIE COLLINS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Earl Sheely, Bib Falk, and Amos Strunk were the lads who delivered the winning hits, but they were not the only heroes of the scrap, for their ammunition never would have been exploded but for the sharpshooting of Eddie Collins and Harry Hooper in the earlier periods.

Starts Like Hurlers' Battle.

It started out to be a slab battle between U. Red Faber and Dutch Leonard and Faber never would have had to turn a hair to win if his pals had been better thief catchers. The Tygers pulled double steals in the first and third rounds which apparently caught the Sox defense off watch and each twin theft meant a run.

The White Sox were helpless before Leonard's southpaw stuff for five innings, but in the fifth started something that listened like a rally. It was dammed up by a brilliant play by Bush robbing Falk of a sure hit. Balked in that round the Gleasons kept on fighting and tied the knot with clean swatting in the ninth.

Hodge Finishes Strong.

In the meantime Faber had faded out in favor of a pinch hitter in the eighth round after holding the Tygers to seven hits. That brought Shovel Hodge to the slab and the elongated southerner sure did finish brilliantly. Not a hit was made off him in the three rounds he pitched and only one base on balls kept him from making it one, two, three in every inning.

Hodge turned loose a slow ball that was too intricate for the visitors to fathom. He mixed it up with his speed so effectively that it was only a question of when the Sox could win by breaking down the Tyger defense.

The dam broke in the eleventh. Collins, with three swats already to his credit, flied out. Sheely, who had been passed once intentionally, tore off a single to right. Falk, who had driven home one tally, sent a wallop into the far corner of right field for two bases. They halted Sheely on third, and it was up to Strunk. Amos whacked a hot one at Young, who tried to smother it, but the ball squirted through safely, and the game was over.

Strikes Out Cobb.

Detroit's defensive play surpassed Chicago's on the whole, but in the aggregate Leonard was tagged harder than Faber and Hodge were. The latter sent the rooters into ecstacies by striking out Manager Ty in the tenth inning.

The Tygers grabbed the lead in the first. One down, Bush singled and went to third on Cobb's single. Veach fouled out. Cobb wandered off first far enough to pull a throw from Faber, then dashed for second. Sheely did not look at third, but pegged the ball to second, and Bush scored before Collins could relay it home.

In the third Young singled and the next two died. Then Young stole second and went to third because there was nobody on second to take Schalk's peg. Veach walked, and again the visitors worked a double steal successfully.

Collins Drives In Tally.

Nothing doing for the Gleasons until the sixth. In that round Hooper singled with one out, but was forced by Johnson. Collins clouted one so far into right that Ernie scampered home in safety. Sheely was passed as a "safety first" measure. Falk tore off a liner which Bush scooped off the ground in brilliant style.

Collins opened the ninth with a double to deep right center. Sheely sacrificed him to third, and Falk punched a hot one through Young, scoring the tying tally. Falk forced Bib and died stealing. But it was different in the eleventh, as already disclosed.

ILLINI CLOUTERS CRUSH MAROONS IN 8 TO 2 SCRAP

"LEFTY" BARNES. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Urbana, Ill., April 23.—[Special.]—"Lefty" Barnes was in fine fettle today and so were the Illini clouters, when Illinois won from Chicago, 8 to 2, this being the third straight victory for Coach Lundgren's team. Barnes' control was almost perfect. He allowed only one pass.

Crisler would have looked a lot better with better support behind the bat, but Yardley seemed to have difficulty with the big Maroon's delivery and three passed balls were scored against him, and they all counted heavily in the Illini total.

Illini Score Early.

Hellstrom scored the opening run for Illinois in the second, when he walked, and was sacrificed ahead by Capt. Tom Johnson. He came home on Stewart's short fly to left.

The Maroons had their big chance in the third, when Curtis singled. Crisler also singled. McCurdy, handling Dixon's bunt, threw to second, but the ball hit Crisler and the bags were full, with one out. Fedor smashed a hot liner to Hellstrom and the Illini second baseman doubled Crisler at second.

Six Runs in Two Rounds.

The third and fourth inning were fatal to Chicago, Illinois scoring three runs in each round. Mee singled and went to second on Yardley's passed ball. Yardley then made a bad toss and Mee went to third. He scored on a single by Dougherty. Dougherty scored on another passed ball after R. McCurdy had singled. Vogel's sacrifice advanced McCurdy, who scored on Capt. Johnson's double.

With two outs in the third, Mee singled again, stole second, and took third on a passed ball. Dougherty walked and both runners scored on McCurdy's single. In the seventh, after fanning two batsmen, Crisler passed Hellstrom, who scored when the Maroon outfielders bungled on catching an easy popup, which was muffed by Fedor.

Dixon Drives In Run.

Chicago scored in the eighth, when Crisler walked and scored on Dixon's hit. Dixon scored when the Illini wobbled on a throw to second to nab Fedor, who had also singled. Score:

A COUPLE OF JAMS AT SOX PARK YESTERDAY

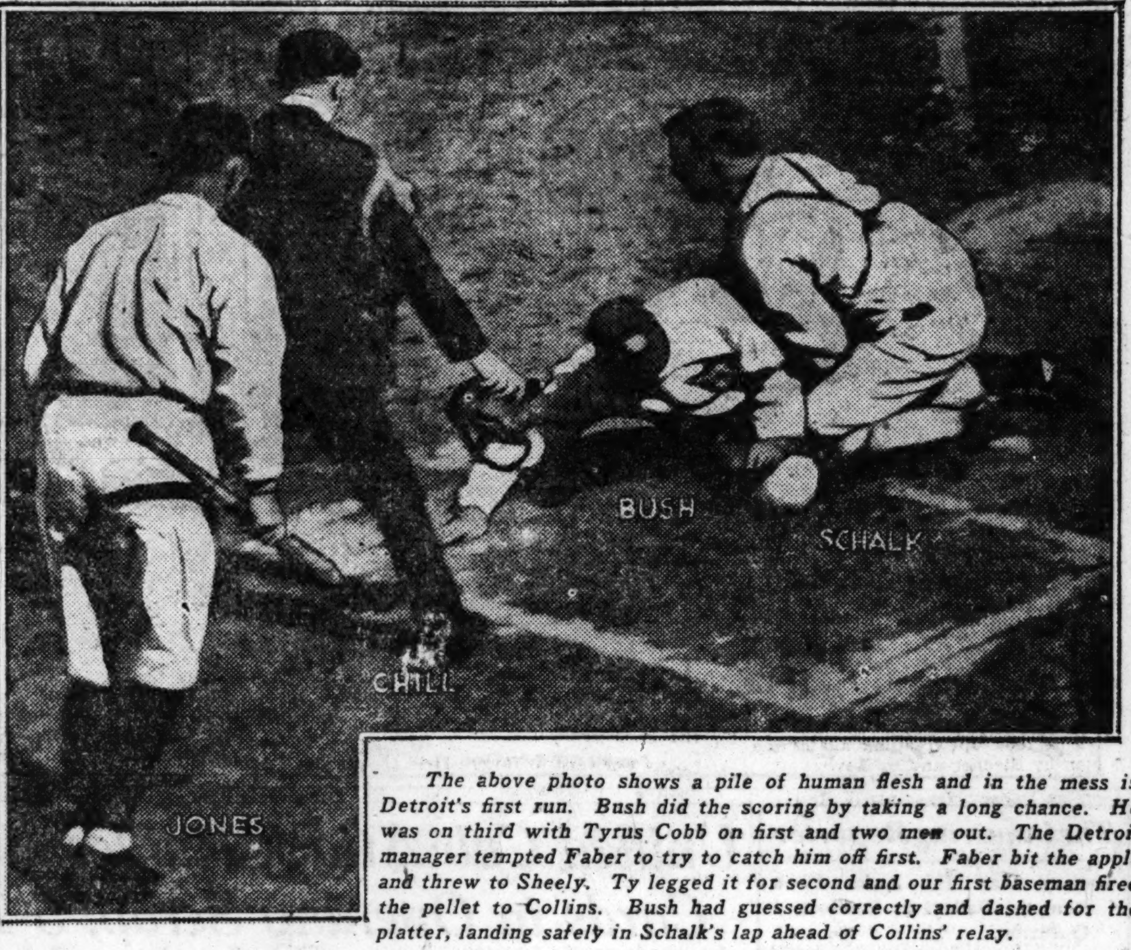
[TRIBUNE Photo Telescopic.]



The above photo shows a pile of human flesh and in the mess is Detroit's first run. Bush did the scoring by taking a long chance. He was on third with Tyrus Cobb on first and two men out. The Detroit manager tempted Faber to try to catch him off first. Faber bit the apple and threw to Sheely. Ty legged it for second and our first baseman fired the pellet to Collins. Bush had guessed correctly and dashed for the platter, landing safely in Schalk's lap ahead of Collins' relay.

BASEBALL NEEDS SOME AWARD FOR INDIVIDUAL STAR

BY I. E. SANBORN.

I. E. (SY) SANBORN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Americans are essentially hero worshipers. They salaam to champions in every branch of sport, and in response to that craving of the public, sporting writers try to select champions when the results of actual contests do not decide the question of supremacy beyond dispute.

Baseball is popular because it does settle all arguments, as a rule, in regard to which is the best major league team each year. The seasons of 1919 and 1920, when the "black eight" of the White Sox double crossed the whole world, are fresh in memory, but that never will happen again if the promoters themselves join hands to prevent it.

In spite of the fact a baseball campaign does decide by actual results the champion team of each league, major or minor, and then crowns one aggregation as world's champions at the finish, the green diamond rooters are not satisfied.

Chalmers Trophy Recalled.

That craving for the recognition of individual stars was satisfied some years ago by an idea that originated in the brain of Hugh Chalmers of Detroit.

The award was made by a jury of eleven baseball writers, serving without remuneration, and voting by a point system, which eliminated all possibility of favoritism.

From several sources I have received recently suggestions for the determination of the "best" player in the major leagues each season. One of them came from Quebec, Canada, which is so far north that a southerner would sneeze even in August.

Tab on Each Day's Star.

This fan suggests that the baseball writers choose every day the "star," of each game and tell the world their choice. Then at the end of the season let the statisticians figure out what player had been named as "star" the greatest number of times, and award him the stellar crown for that year, with lesser honors for the all round star of each team.

This demand can be gratified easily by the promoters of baseball, if they will simply revive the Chalmers trophy idea and expand it a bit.

Plan Would Work Finely.

If the major league club owners will set aside a comparatively small sum to be expended for a token of some simple nature to be given each year to the player who has proven of most value to his team in each league, and then establish a jury of one expert writer in each city to determine the award, the craving of the rooter for individual heroship will be satisfied.

It would cost the club owners nothing except a small appropriation for the token and for stationery and postage. The Baseball Writers' Association of America would do the rest gratis and gladly.

WEAR 'RUTH HAT'? BET ON 'BABE' AND GET ONE

NEW YORK, April 23.—[Special.]—"Ever since Babe Ruth began his home run records our business has picked up over normal each spring and summer," said the proprietor of the hat store.

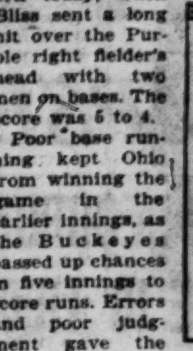
"How's that?"

"Well, you see, so many fans get excited over what Ruth will and won't do with the bat that one hat more or less in their lives means nothing.

"There may be hundreds of hats involved in each home run made by Babe."

PURPLE BEATEN BY OHIO, 5 TO 4; PLAY 12 INNINGS

Columbus, O., April 23.—[Special.]—Ohio State won a twelve inning game from Northwestern today, when Bliss sent a long hit over the Purple right fielder's head with two men on bases. The score was 5 to 4.



Poor base running kept Ohio from winning the game in the earlier innings, as the Buckeyes passed up chances in five innings to score runs. Errors and poor judgment gave the Purple two runs in the seventh, while they had two in the fifth.

Ohio had a big rally in the third, scoring four runs on three hits, passes, a hit batsman and a wild pitch. The winning run was the result of a base on balls, a sacrifice hit, a hit and Bliss' long hit. Score:

R&V Knight

In the R&V Knight is offered the only six-cylinder Knight-motored car in America.

Six-cylinder Knight cars have been built successfully since 1909. For years the famous Daimler of England has been a six. The Minerva, considered generally the finest automobile of continental Europe, is another Knight six.

When the endurance, flexibility and economy of operation and maintenance, which are outstanding characteristics of the Knight-type engine, are combined with the recognized smoothness and power of the six-cylinder unit, the result is a power-plant approaching the ideal.

And most important of all, the distinctive qualities of the R&V Knight engine are lasting. It improves with use.

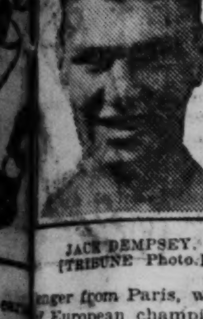
DEMPSEY'S "PEP" TO ROUGHEN BOUT FOR CARPENTIER

BY RAY PEARSON.



JACK DEMPSEY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

This is a story that might be entitled "Keeping the Pep!" It is timely, inasmuch as it concerns Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, who on the afternoon of July 2, in Jersey City, N. J., will go into action to defend his title against Georges Carpentier, the challenger from Paris, who holds the title of European champion.

America has been the home of world's champions as far back as the art of glove fighting. There have been many titleholders in many classes, no less than nine men having held the heavyweight crown in something like thirty years in which fistic arguments have been decided with the "raw 'uns" covered with leather. Jack Dempsey is one of the nine, and his exalted position at present makes him the subject for this yarn.

Looks on Ring Differently.

We have seen champions come and go, and there has been a vast difference in the fighting mentality of many of them. There is a viewpoint in pugilistics just the same as there is in any other business, and all fighting men do not regard their chosen profession in the same light.

For instance, take Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard, the man from whom the Utah mauler won the title nearly two years ago at Toledo. An effort to compare their mental attitude toward the fighting game results in absolute failure. They are as different in this respect as daylight and darkness. Dempsey loves to fight; Willard doesn't.

Perhaps it would be worth while to go back a few years ago up to the time when Dempsey had nothing but touting to recommend him as a world beater. That was when the present champion unpacked his baggage in Chicago to make an "honest-to-goodness" campaign for the crown.

Dempsey's Only Method.

At that time Dempsey made this remark to the writer:

"Honest, I am a regular fighter every minute I am in the ring, and that means from the very first gong I fight just as hard as I know how. I like to fight so well that I knock my opponents over the first chance I get. That's the way I'll always fight, because it is my way."

That was something like four years ago, and Dempsey's succession of one round knockouts and other short distance bouts which followed attest the truth of his remark. But that was four years ago and Dempsey, the "Big Kid," as those who knew him well called him, has since traveled the "big time," which is very likely to change the viewpoint of a glove wielder.

But the other day, when Dempsey passed through Chicago on his way to his training camp in New Jersey to prepare for the battle with Carpentier, I asked in an easy way: "You're not knocking 'em over as quickly as you used to. What are you going to do with this Frenchman?"

Calls Brennan Go His "Off Day."

Dempsey got to the point all right and answered:

"Some people seem to think that because I didn't knock out Brennan in a round or two, I've lost the old ginger. Well, if they think so, they're all wrong. Because I didn't stop Brennan in jigtime isn't any sign that I can't knock out others in the early rounds. The best of the fighting men have a fight in them that isn't up to the standard they have established, and it happened that my last bout with Brennan was that one for me.

"My fight with Carpentier will show my real stuff. That fight will be ended just as quickly as Jack Dempsey can end it."

This remark sounds like the Dempsey of four years ago. We take it the "Pep" hasn't departed.

BRITTON NAMES DEMPSEY VICTOR OVER FRENCHMAN

New York, April 23.—[United Press.] Jack Britton, world's welterweight champion, picks Champion Jack Dempsey to beat Georges Carpentier on July 2.

"Dempsey should win in about eight rounds. Carpentier is a fine boxer and has had a lot of experience, but he was out of the ring all during the war and he will not be the same in a hard fight. I was in Levinsky's corner when Carpentier knocked him out and I know the Frenchman can hit, but he may not be able to get through Dempsey. For some reason American heavyweights always have been better than Europeans."

FRENCH FIGHTER TO TRAIN FOR GO ON LONG ISLAND

New York, April 23.—Georges Carpentier will train for his fight with Jack Dempsey at Manhassett, Long Island, it was announced this afternoon by Capt. Thierry Mallett, American representative of the French fighter. The training place, for which a lease was signed this afternoon, consists of twelve acres of land on an inlet of Long Island sound, on which are a twelve room house and two large barns, which will be converted into gymnasiums.

WHOLE TRAIN FOR FANS TO BIG GO

Doc Krone, who announced the other day that he had made arrangements to get a party of druggists to the Dempsey-Carpentier fight at Jersey City, is now dickering for a special train. More than 100 requests for reservations have been received and Krone believes a complete train will be required for the [illegible]. Krone expects 500 fans will make the trip.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

A FEW years ago it was the fashion to think a man must be a giant to place among champions in any kind of sport. But that all changed about the time Jack Dempsey began hitting giants on the chin, flattening six and a half foot Behemoths of the ring like Fulton, Morris, and Willard, practically "in a punch." Dempsey proved that the small man has a chance anywhere if he "packs the kick." Dempsey is only a relatively small man, compared with the giants he has beaten. There's a place among the champions in some line of sport for any man of any size, if he has brains and energy to do the work a giant can accomplish by sheer strength and bulk.

One of the greatest runners ever known was Alfred Shrubb of England, many of whose records are still on the books. Shrubb weighed about 120 pounds and was only a little over five feet in height.

Joie Ray, Small Man.

Joie Ray, who broke some of Shrubb's records and is our modern champion at middle distance running—one to two miles—is only 5 feet 3 inches and weighs 138 pounds. Ray holds several world's records on indoor and outdoor tracks, and has won a great number of championship races.

Richmond Landon of Yale, who won the Olympic high jumping championship with 6 feet 4¼ inches, is fairly tall, being 5 feet 10 inches, but he weighs only 122 pounds. Being light physically is no disadvantage in the sport he follows, for he has less weight than other jumpers to lift over the bar.

Champion Jumper Once Paralytic.

Raymond C. Ewry, the greatest standing jumper on record, and winner of eleven Olympic championships, was so light when a boy that the doctors thought he'd never grow up. He was also partially paralyzed as the result of an attack of fever. He began jumping to try to get control of his legs, at first being able only to shift his feet ahead a few inches. Within three or four years Ewry was breaking world's records at high and broad jumping, and he became a wonderful athlete. I think Ewry's case the most remarkable cure ever effected by steady athletic training.

The smallest great baseball player is "Rabbit" Maranville, Boston shortstop for four years, traded last winter to the Pittsburgh Nationals to fill the position once filled by the world famous Hans Wagner. Shortest man in baseball, Maranville stands only 5 feet 5½ inches and weighs 144½ pounds.

Classes with Wagner.

Maranville is considered the best shortstop in the National league, his work comparing even with that of the long armed, powerful Hans Wagner of years ago. He has a great throwing arm, and can go into the outfield after hits and throw to first base with a flat trajectory like a rifle bullet. He has a peculiar loping stride when running after a ball, which earned him the nickname "Rabbit." Incidentally he is a fair hitter, batting .275.

Baseball fans remember "Wee Willie" Keeler, famous old-timer, who was so accurate with his infield hits that it was said he could "land the ball in a peach basket." Short stature was no handicap to Keeler.

Tennis Star Wee Gent.

Among champions of the tennis courts William M. Johnston is a comparative midget, standing only 5 feet 5½ inches and weighing from 117 to 122 pounds. In spite of his small size Johnston uses a harder forearm drive than any other player, making up for other disadvantages with terrific speed. He has astonishing accuracy with all his hard hitting. He developed his speed by playing on the asphalt courts in California.

Wiry strength and ability to use a tremendous amount of energy made Johnston a champion. When he won the national championship by beating Tilden in the finals in 1919, Johnston weighed 122 pounds at the beginning of the tournament and 117 at the end of the last game. He first won the national title in 1915.

Tilden Tall Player.

William Tilden, who nosed him out for the title last year, is an inch over six feet tall. They call Tilden "Big Bill" and Johnston "Little Bill."

Among the wrestlers Earl Caddock was a comparatively light man, weighing only 182 pounds, yet he threw the big fellows. He went into the army and saw much fighting in France, being one of the few who preferred active service to a safe job in the naval reserve or some other semi-protected position. He was gassed, and when he took up wrestling again was beaten by Stecher and by Lewis.

Size Doesn't Handicap Wilde.

Small size is no handicap to a boxer. One of the greatest little men known to the ring is the English flyweight, Jimmy Wilde. He has beaten many of the best featherweights in the world, going out of his class to meet them.

Among the little fellows who are rapidly making a fortune in the American ring is Midget Smith, a bantamweight, who has recently taken two referees' decisions over Jack Sharkey in desperate and very even fights.

Among the other little fellows who have shown great skill and fighting ability are Jack Sharkey, a splendidly aggressive bantam, and Joe Lynch, the champion. Lynch is a great fighting man.

Weight Thrower Not Large.

You wouldn't expect a small athlete to invade such a field of athletic sport as weight throwing, yet a few years ago Julian Elliot was one of the greatest shot putters in the world. He won the junior national championship at New Orleans with a 16 pound shot out of 45 feet—an amazing performance for a boy of moderate height and weighing only 145 pounds. Elliot won many events, but was compelled to retire from competition because his wrist couldn't stand the strain of the terrific drive he used.

Looking over the list, it is evident that nerve and grit can accomplish more than mere strength and bulk. No man is too small to become a champion in some branch of sport if he will put his heart into the task of getting to the top.

ALLEGED LEADER IN BALL LOTTERY ARRESTED BY U. S.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 23.—Thomas Martin, alleged to be the leading figure in a baseball pool operating throughout the United States and Canada, was taken into custody here today and charged with violation of the United States lottery laws. Martin, it is alleged, is the head of the Canadian club, limited. The club, according to authorities, sent its pool tickets broadcast every week and last season reaped a rich harvest.

Recently an agent of the club was arrested in Cincinnati and the prisoner is said to have revealed Martin's name and the names of other men who have not yet been arrested.

Slicker Parks to Twirl for Pyott Team Today

Semi-pro baseball fans who have been following the tempestuous career of Vernon [" Slicker "] Parks will have their first chance to see him in action this afternoon as he unbends before the Dodger-Trainings at Pyott's park. Park still is a student at the University of Michigan, which school ruled him ineligible for playing with a Coast league team last summer, but he is going to commute from Ann Arbor until the end of the school year to pitch each week end for the Pyotts.

JACK DEMPSEY BUSY PREPARING SELF FOR FIGHT OF HIS CAREER

'squares' a day and flop to the hay just as soon as darkness approaches."

"I get up early every morning and then with my little pal, Joe Benjamin, start for a short walk on the road. Then for an attack on the breakfast table, where I have never lost a battle. In the afternoon I box a little with Joe and Freddy Welsh, and mix this form of amusement with an occasional game of handball or—if I can get some one who does not play golf any better than I do—I will take him on for a game.

"Of course I know this easy life is not going to last long, but while it is here I propose to make the most of it. In about three weeks the real rough fellows will be here, and then down for the hard grind.

Looks Forward to Rough Drill.

"Kearns is arranging for some of those big boys to step in and help me. I want the heavy set for the rough going. It is a cinch to get the speed from the lighter boys."

At this juncture the big champion hopped into his new car and sped to town to purchase some new tennis balls to prepare for a match with Ripley, the cartoonist.

During the absence of the big fighter, Freddie Welch and his pleasant spouse took occasion to tell about the doings of Jack since he struck the farm.

"That fellow Dempsey is just a big kid," said Welsh. "He's been the life of the house since he came here.

How Welsh "Dopes" Big Mill.

"Of course, the Frenchman is a tough bird, and it would be folly for any one to expect a soft time with any man who can clout like Georges. It will be a great battle, but I think that Jack will come through and win. Don't forget, however, it is going to be a hard battle."

By this time Dempsey had returned with the tennis balls all set for his match. As the champion repaired to the court to start the game he surely looked the picture of health, and gave one the impression that it will not take him very long to whip himself into the regulation pink, prepared to defend his title against the flashy French boxer.

When we bade the big fighter goodby, he expressed confidence in his ability to win, but reiterated that he was not making any predictions as to what round victory would occur in.

T. R. JR. WATCHES FLEET ATHLETES WRESTLE, BATTLE

GUANTANAMO, Cuba, April 23.—More than 10,000 officers and men from the United States Atlantic fleet gathered at the athletic field here last night to witness wrestling and boxing bouts by the champions of the fleet. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., assistant secretary of the navy, was a spectator. Mr. Roosevelt was called upon for an address and responded in a spirited speech, in which he declared: "The navy should be made up of men who are not 'soft' nor 'Little Lord Fauntleroys,' but real men, who desire to be treated as men."

E. M'GOWAN OF SKATING FAME SIGNS AS BOXER

New York, April 23.—Everett McGowan of St. Paul, national speed skating champion and a star all around athlete, is to make his debut as a boxer here next month. He has signed an agreement with Promoter Charles Doesserick to meet any opponent selected. In addition to skating and boxing McGowan is a baseball and football player.

PENN ATHLETES UPSET HARVARD IN TRACK GAMES

Philadelphia, Pa., April 23.—Pennsyl-

Philadelphia, Pa., April 23.—Pennsylvania, the intercollegiate champions, defeated Harvard in a track meet on Franklin field today, 69 1-3 to 47 2-3. Rain swept the oval during the meet and left the field and track boggy and unfit for record time.

Capt. Earl Eby and Everett Smalley of Pennsylvania divided honors, each winning two first places. Eby gave his team ten points in the quarter and half mile, while Smalley did likewise in both hurdles. The Pennsylvanians swept through the track event, losing only one first place, when Ned Gourdin, Harvard, captured the century dash.

Today's victory is the first Pennsylvania has ever scored against Harvard in a dual meet. Harvard won the only two previous meets in 1896 and 1897. Summaries:

Half mile run—Won by Earl Eby, Pennsylvania; George Meredith, Pennsylvania, second; R. F. Colt, Harvard, third. Time, 2:00 4-5.

220 yard low hurdles—Won by E. S. Smalley, Pennsylvania; Ray Jacks, Pennsylvania, second; R. W. Fitts; Harvard, third. Time, :25 4-5.

220 yard dash—Won by R. S. Maxam, Pennsylvania; E. Gourdin, Harvard, second; D. A. McFadden, Pennsylvania, third. Time, :21 4-5.

16 pound shot put—Won by J. Bartels, Pennsylvania, distance, 41 feet 1⅝ inches; J. R. Tolbert, Harvard, 40 feet 7 inches, second; J. C. Thurman, Pennsylvania, 35 feet 8¼ inches, third.

Two mile run—Won by D. S. Head, Pennsylvania; D. J. O'Connell, Harvard, second; H. M. Mahon, Harvard, third. Time, 9:52 4-5.

100 yard dash—Won by Ned Gourdin, Harvard; Bob Maxam, Pennsylvania, second; D. A. McFadden, Pennsylvania, third. Time, :10 1-5.

RELAYS AT PENN TO SET A RECORD IN SIZE OF FIELD

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

HARRY GILL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Featured by the combined entry of a French team, which should attract just as much attention as the appearance of the English runners two years ago, interest in college athletic activity this week will center around the annual University of Pennsylvania relay games to be held on Franklin field, Philadelphia, Friday and Saturday.

From the standpoint of quantity, the games should be the most successful in the history of the event. Individual and team entries have been received from the leading universities and colleges in all sections of the country, as the event generally is recognized as the official opening of the outdoor track and field season.

West Has Record Entry.

Not alone will the eastern institutions be represented in practically every event, but a greater number of middle west universities than ever before will send teams. The distances in the various relays, combined with the medleys, makes it possible for every coach to develop a fast quartet for most any contest.

In the one mile championship, Minnesota, which has drawn the pole, Notre Dame, Chicago, Kansas, Missouri, Kansas Aggies, Nebraska, Ohio State, and Illinois will strive to defeat the best which the east will send to the mark. In addition, a team representing the combined universities of France will start, and has drawn seventh position from the pole. With such a large entry, some teams may be withdrawn at the last minute, and the runners saved for other races in which they might stand better chances.

Stiff Field in Two Mile.

Butler college of Indianapolis, where Pat Page, formerly assistant coach to Stagg at Chicago, is athletic director, has drawn the pole in the two mile relay. The Hoosier quartet will meet stiff competition, as Ned Merriam of Ames and Harry Gill of Illinois have nominated their fleet quartets. Wisconsin and Ohio State are the other middle west teams which will go to the mark along with the best in the east.

In the four mile relay, University of Havana has drawn the pole, but the middle west is expected to make a strong bid for first place. Illinois, which has as fine a squad of distance runners as any university in the country, will be a strong contender, while Wisconsin, Ohio State, Ames, Minnesota, Purdue, and Kansas are the other entries from this section.

Badgers Get Pole in Medley.

Wisconsin is given the pole in the distance medley and Coach Tom Jones' runners should make a strong bid for honors. The Badger mentor has a number of promising distance men, as was shown by indoor meets and they should be better out of doors. Ames, Illinois, Ohio State, and Kansas Aggies are other middle west teams which have been entered.

The middle west will also be well represented in the sprint medley. Ohio State, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas Aggies, Chicago, and Minnesota are among the large entry. This event is among the most interesting of all, as it affords plenty of action during its exciting duration.

CHICAGO RIFLEMEN WILL HOLD TRYOUTS; NEW YORK IN A DEFI

The Chicago Rifle association will this summer conduct rigid tryouts to determine a city championship team, which will meet a similar picked aggregation representing New York City in Chicago next autumn. The challenge from Gotham was received last week.

The second weekly open match of the Chicago Rifle club will be staged today at Fort Sheridan, the shooting being offside and rapid fire, at 200 yards, using any military rifle with sights as issued.

The Irving Park club last week completed the tenth and last round as a contestant in the New England R. A. annual telegraphic tourney. A perfect score for the round landed the local outfit second, six points behind the first place Quinnipiac club of New Haven, Conn. Following are the scores of the Irving Parkers:

Chess Match Deferred; Dr. Lasker Indisposed

HAVANA, Cuba, April 23.—The fifteenth game of the world's championship chess match between Dr. Emanuel Lasker and Jose R. Capablanca, which was to have been held tonight, has been postponed on account of the indisposition of Dr. Lasker.

Culver Athletes Defeat South Bend in Dual Meet

Culver, Ind., April 23.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy track team had an easy victory over South Bend High school this afternoon in the first outdoor meet of the cadet schedule, 89½ to 32½. For the Cadets Stricker and Roberts were the highest point scorers, each with 10½.

MILADY GOLFER PLAYS HER GAME A LA BLOOMERS

BY JOE DAVIS.

Westward the tide of style takes its way. We have heard of members of the blooming, or bloomered fair sex playing on some of the eastern and southern courses, and even have seen pictures of them. Chicago need no longer despair. They are here. Yesterday at Olympia Fields several snappy knickerbocker suits made their appearance. All hail to the pioneers, most of whom belonged in the light and medium weight classes.

L. K. Lunts, mashie shot at the seventh hole, 145 yards, hung on the lip of the cup. This would have been a headliner, but had to take second place to the bloomers.

Low Gross to Petsche.

Nearly 300 members were out and most of them competed in the initial handicap of the season. It was played over the No. 2 course and George Petsche had low gross of 44-41-85. The net prize winners were J. T. Harahan, 96-20-76; C. L. Cockrell, 86-8-78, and Don Hamilton, 90-8-82.

Calumet players opened their season with a first chance event, Lee Thiltges winning. Vernon Foster won the prize for fifteenth place and A. St. Clair the award for twenty-sixth position. Winners in the blind bogey event were W. Hough, F. Koller, J. D. Wild, D. C. Davidson Jr., H. C. Hes, F. King, and E. L. Wilson. The team sweepstakes was postponed until Saturday.

Garfield golfers were prevented from playing by the wet condition of the course. It is expected the course will be fit for play tomorrow.

Kasper Chosen President.

A. J. Kasper was elected president of the Knights of Columbus Golf club at the annual meeting at the Great Northern hotel. He succeeds N. A. Fegen, who has piloted the organization for the last three years. The other officers are:

First vice president, J. H. Branigan, Barry council; second vice president, Timothy E. Dunne, McHale council; secretary-treasurer, T. J. Leonard, Oak Park council. Board of governors: A. J. Kasper Jr., Frank Douglass, Matt Jans, Dr. Bernard A. Duffy, H. J. Bedard, Walter Crowe, Dr. W. D. Mahoney, T. J. Frainey, J. J. McNamara, Matt E. Kelly, Norman F. Faunce, J. M. Kennedy, Steve Ryan, J. A. Mudd Jr., and J. P. Cusack.

Three major events were scheduled in May, June, and July.

Cook County Golf Trophy Team Schedule Arranged

The schedule covering the 1921 interclub matches, in which teams of four members will play under auspices of the Cook County Municipal Golf association has been arranged. The clubs will play for the Robert W. McKinlay trophy, emblematic of the municipal interclub championship. The schedule:

July 10—Garfield vs. Jackson; Marquette vs. Lincoln; Evanston vs. Columbus; Palos vs. Edgebrook.

July 17—Garfield vs. Marquette; Jackson vs. Lincoln; Evanston vs. Palos; Columbus va. Edgebrook.

July 24—Garfield vs. Lincoln; Jackson vs. Marquette; Edgebrook vs. Evanston; Columbus vs. Palos.

July 31—Garfield vs. Evanston; Jackson vs. Columbus; Marquette vs. Palos; Lincoln vs. Edgebrook.

Aug. 7—Garfield vs. Columbus; Jackson vs. Evanston; Marquette vs. Edgebrook; Lincoln vs. Palos.

Aug. 14—Garfield vs. Palos; Jackson vs. Edgebrook; Marquette vs. Evanston; Lincoln vs. Columbus.

Aug. 21—Garfield vs. Edgebrook; Jackson vs. Palos; Marquette vs. Columbus; Lincoln vs. Evanston.

WORMING WHYS AND WHEREFORES.

> HO! FOR THE TROUT STREAMS!
> Open seasons—Colorado, May 25 to Oct. 31; Indiana, March 31 to Aug. 31; Idaho, June 1 to Feb. 28; Michigan, May 1 to Aug. 31; Minnesota, May 1 to Aug. 31; Wisconsin, May 1 to Aug. 31. Fishing laws are being revised in some states and these dates may be changed. Notice of changes will be made in this department.

THE trout is a very much alive and highly efficient citizen and an opportunist, to boot. He is a natural born getter, and you will always find him where, to use the vernacular, the gettin' is good. In other words, the trout is not the high minded, dainty feeder that fly fishermen try to believe.

A mature trout will cut down a swimming mouse or a small snake as readily as will a bass or pickerel, and he undoubtedly eats larvæ and mature insects. But these things are not the corned beef and cabbage and "biled spuds" of the trout streams.

If the fisherman will open the trout he has caught, he generally will find in his stomach, if he finds anything at all, the remains of small fishes, bottom-living larvæ, worms and snails, showing that the trout is less a nibbler of winged dainties than a real, husky eater like the male of the genus homo who demands three square, with a raw hamburger-and-onion on rye and a bottle of nearly near beer before he hits the hay.

I believe that it is conceded by thorough students of trout habits that trout are bottom feeders, that they rise to the surface to feed on flies only at intervals, this habit depending a great deal on prevailing food supply, and that this habit becomes less and less marked as the fish grow in age and size.

My own observations assure me that even when the trout are making the water "boil" when a hatch is on, they are feeding on the rising insects and not on the perfect, winged ones that have reached the surface. The fish pursue them as they rise, and the swirls they make are done with their tails as they turn to go down again.

This explains why one seldom, if ever, catches trout in any quantities on flies during a big hatch.

Fly fishing is the most fascinating form of angling but due to the bottom feeding tendencies of the trout, as outlined above, worm fishing will nearly always get more trout and bigger trout. This statement I make, as the pre-election orators say, without fear of successful contradiction.

One of the beauties of worming is that it permits a great latitude of choice in tackle. It may consist of an alder limb, cotton twine and terminal tackle to match and from this up to the finest fly fishing outfit, plus a few split shot and plain hooks. I mention split shot because it is so generally used, but I prefer the Mackinaw screw sinker.

Pinching split shot onto a leader with ones teeth is my idea of near-beero in occupations. The screw sinker is attached to the leader by screwing the halves together with the fingers, and is as quickly removed or changed.

The more primitive worming tackle does not call for leaders, but a leader is a great help. In very clear water it is almost indispensable and in any but the murkiest of streams it adds heft to the basket. A three foot length of heavy trout calibre silkworm gut makes a good all-around bait fishing leader.

No matter how crude the rest of the outfit, let the hooks be of good quality.

ENGLISH SOCCER TITLE IS WON BY LONDON ELEVEN

LONDON, April 25.—[United Press.]—The Tottenham Hot Spurs, London, won the English association football cup today in the finals of the national matches by defeating the Wolverhampton Wanderers, 1 to 0.

King George, the Duke of York, and Prince Henry saw the game.

The championship battle, equivalent to the America world's baseball series, was fought on the Chelsea grounds, the spacious Crystal palace grounds, the scene of all the pre-war cup finals not being available.

The gates had to be closed two hours before the game and it was estimated that more than 80,000 spectators had pushed, shoved, and fought their way in. Most of the twenty thousand or more who failed to get in settled themselves outside the grounds trying to follow the progress of the game by the cheering and comments of the spectators.

All sporting London was there supporting the Spurs, the first home team to get into the finals in twenty years. Northerners and Midlanders were also represented in large numbers.

WINNIPEG TO PLAY MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 23.—Manager Moll will bring his Winnipeg club here tomorrow for a game with the Brewer Rookies. The Canadians are training at Whitewater, Wis.

SEE GLOAMING AS SPEED RIVAL FOR MAN O' WAR

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—A speed marvel of the turf, which is being heralded as a rival for Man o' War, has been discovered in Australia, according to news that has just reached this country. It is claimed this horse has equaled the half mile record made by Man o' War at Aqueduct when he stepped the distance in 45 seconds. The Australian horse is the middle distance champion, Gloaming. The performance is generally accepted, since the race was timed by a number of horsemen whose watches agreed with that of the official timekeeper.

Centre Grads to Rally as M'Millan's Hosts Tomorrow

"Bo" McMillan, famous quarterback of the Centre college eleven, will be the guest of honor at a dinner at Hotel La Salle tomorrow evening, his hosts being members of the Centre College club of Chicago, of which Henry Bamford is chairman. Among those present will be "Chief" Meyers, athletic director at Centre. Centre men who have not been notified of the dinner may get in touch with Mr. Bamford at Central 2346, or Mr. Meyers at Harrison 7752.

'PRO' GOLF ASSN. ASKED TO REDUCE FIELD IN NATIONAL

BY JOE DAVIS.

ROBERT A. GARDNER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The United States Golf association has asked the Professional Golfers' association for cooperation in reducing the size of the field in the next open championship. Despite the excellent arrangement at Toledo last summer, some of the players had to finish their qualifying round in poor light, the last few pairs ending their play in semi-darkness.

At a recent meeting in Chicago, Robert A. Gardner, vice president of the U. S. G. A., asked the officials of the Professional Golfers' association to suggest a plan which would reduce the entry list to reasonable proportion.

Number of Suggestions.

Among the suggestions made were those of holding a qualifying round on some other course, as is done in the British open event; the admission of all those who qualified at Toledo, without having to compete in the elimination round; sectional qualifying rounds, and dividing the field into sections, each playing eighteen holes, with thirty-two qualifying in each section.

This latter plan would leave a field of sixty-four. It was the concensus that not more than eighty plays could compete comfortably in the two thirty-six hole rounds which constitute the championship proper.

The plan of holding a qualifying round on another course requires additional time, and since many of the contestants come from distant points they hardly can spare the time away from their clubs.

Disadvantages Crop Up.

To admit last year's qualifiers reduces the list considerably, but from the rest of the field it would be fair to qualify not less than sixty-four players, and then from these 128 players reduce the field for the final to about sixty-four men. This again necessitates some scheming, and would mean one round at eighteen holes for the nonqualifiers of last year.

Sectional qualification rounds are not feasible, and admit of players from weaker sections supplanting those from stronger sections in the championship proper. Dividing the field in two appears the best solution. So far, nothing definite has been done.

The officers of the P. G. A. favor some plan that will get all the contestants together in one week, as many go to the tournament to renew old acquaintances and watch the play in the final rounds.

Amateur Already Restricted.

Gardner said the United States Golf association already had limited the amateur entries to those who qualified in the preceding amateur championship.

FLOWERS BLOOM FOR AMERICAN GRAVES OVERSEA

Ample Funds Available for Memorial Day.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 23.—[By Wireless.]—The American Memorial day commitee in France is rapidly completing plans by which it will place a wreath on the grave of every American soldier in France, Belgium, and England on May 30.

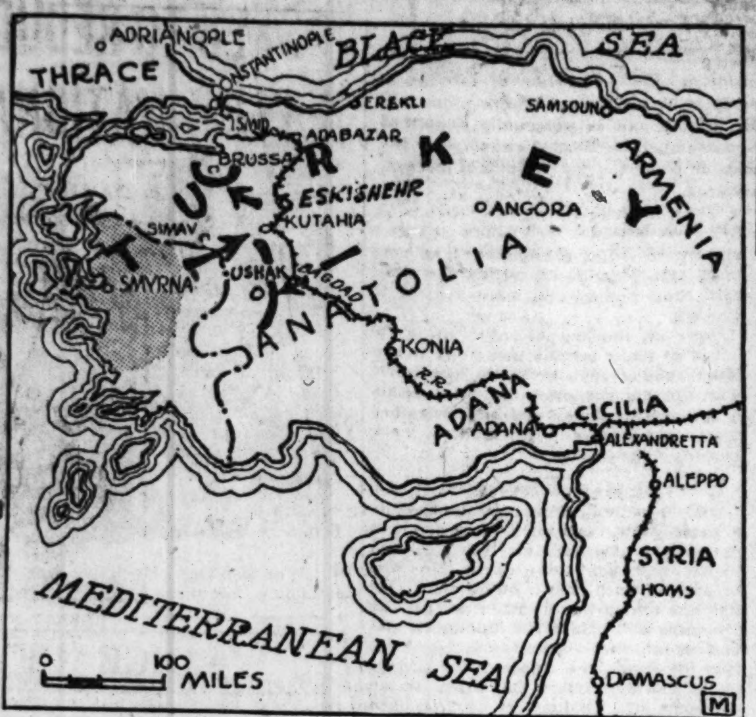
The extensive campaign last year by Americans in Europe netted sufficient funds to leave a balance, which will take care of all the arrangements for this year. For that reason the committee has decided not to appeal for subscriptions again this year.

Col. Francis E. Drake, the department commander of the American Legion in France, said this morning that he was not able yet to give out details of plans for ceremonies beyond the fact that there has been a general promise of coöperation from Americans in Europe.

It is expected that several companies of troops will visit the various cemeteries where American dead lie buried. Delegations, or at least one delegate, will personally attend to the placing of wreaths.

There are at present 45,000 American graves in France, 4,024 in Belgium, and 500 in England. This represents nearly 15,000 fewer than last year, approximately that number of soldiers' bodies being returned to the United States.

THE GREEKS IN TURKEY



The Greeks in Turkey have begun a new offensive aimed at Kutahia to relieve the tremendous pressure the Turks are putting on them at Ushak and Brusa. The Turks appear unable to drive the Greeks out of Asia Minor, but are powerful enough to keep them closely penned up. It is predicted that if the Greek army is driven out of Asia Minor the whole Greek government will fall.

10,000 GOTHAM FAMILIES "BEAT THE LANDLORD"

New York, April 23.—Flat dwellers are massing to give landlords the hardest jolt of the profiteering era.

It will take the form of a huge exodus to the suburbs. Fully 10,000 families have bought or built homes outside of crowded city centers during the last year, and they will move into them this spring. It is costing them an average of $7,500 each, or a total of $75,000,000.

This capital investment is removed forever from the reach of landlord profiteering, and the flats which the buyers leave vacant will add substantially to surplus housings in congested sections where they are most needed.

HEAVY DIVORCE DOCKET BREAKS ALL PRECEDENTS

LONDON, April 23.—Precedents in British court procedure are being broken in an effort to dispose of a list of several hundred divorce cases before the Whitsuntide recess. A few days ago Lord Birkenhead heard more than twenty cases, this being the first time a lord chancelor ever sat as a divorce court judge.

Another unprecedented move to clear the calendar was made today when five judges, including the lord chancelor, disposed of 102 undefended petitions, ignoring the usual Saturday court holiday. The judges worked in relays, the first trying twenty-two cases and the others twenty each.

When this list was finished, there remeained for hearing 1,650 additional cases. To expedite their handling it is intended to continued the Saturday sittings several weeks.

JUMPS FROM CAR; HIT BY AUTO.

James A. Garfield, Negro, 43, of 2942 Vernon avenue, jumped from a Halsted street car between 14th and Maxwell streets, yesterday and was hit by an automobile driven by B. J. Mitrant, 195 West Canalport avenue. He may die.

Recently the Steward of one of Chicago's best Country Clubs approached our manager and said: "I have never been in your kitchens but I know from the taste of your food that you cook nothing but the best and I am convinced that no substitutes of any kind are used in your establishment."

That is real praise from a food expert—a man who knows good things to eat and makes his living serving food of the highest grade to the members of his exclusive club.

Nothing but the purest and finest materials ever come into our kitchens. No substitutes of any kind are ever used. Perhaps we carry this to the extreme, as for instance cooking all eggs in fresh creamery butter. But we want our food to taste better: we will do anything to make it taste better. And the people who dine here tell us it does taste better.

A famous epicure once remarked that a restaurant which could provide a good breakfast could not fail to please with their other meals. Try one breakfast here. For 25 cents we will cook before your eyes a delicious honey waffle and serve it to you with three strips of bacon, butter, and pure maple sap or honey. And good waffles are only one of the many good breakfast things we serve at low prices.

Ask the regular patrons of the North American where they ate before they adopted it as their restaurant and they will name for you the biggest and finest hotels in Chicago. If you question them further you will find that most of them never before served themselves, but that now they prefer our plan—which allows making selections from the food itself—to the old one of ordering from a printed bill of fare.

When you consider that food at the North American does taste better; that every portion is a big generous one; that prices are far below what other good restaurants and hotels charge; and the absence of waiters demanding tips; it is easy to understand why so many of Chicago's best people dine here regularly.

"UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL."

It is intimated in Washington that the disposition of the fleet and the question of uniting it wait the decision not of the navy department alone but of one or two other departments, presumably state and war, and, inferentially, of President Harding.

This makes it all the worse. If Daniels had not divided the fleet no complications requiring the opinion of the state department and the decision of the President could have arisen. Now it is suggested that Mr. Denby, if he wanted to, cannot return to a safe basis until other officials viewing the question from different angles can indorse it.

It is said that one consideration is the fact that there is no base on the Pacific coast which can maintain the fleet for more than two or three weeks. For that reason it is impossible to station the united fleet there. Because of our relations with Japan that is where it ought to be stationed. Part of it is there. That part is what endangers the fleet as a fighting unit. If it were returned to the Atlantic and the fleet were united Japan might think that our withdrawal from the Pacific was a backdown and a sign of weakness.

This reasoning is about as good as the generality of reasoning which we apply to such subjects. It assumes in the first place that the Japanese are as foolish in a military sense as Americans are, which is as violent an assumption as could be indulged.

The Japanese know that the Pacific has no station for the united American fleet—if that is a fact as stated in Washington, and it probably is. They know it as well as any Americans know it. They also know that our divided fleet is our greatest weakness so far as our relation to them is concerned. They know that if we were wise we could and would instantly remove that weakness by putting the fleet together.

If it cannot be maintained as a unit in the Pacific it can be maintained as a unit in the Atlantic, and it is almost an unfriendly act to impute to the Japanese an idea that we were showing signs of weakness by recovering our strength.

They may consider that a deadly insult, a presumption that their military intelligence is on our level. The Japanese have figured every operation which the American fleet might make. Their naval board has maps of every possible maneuver which the United States might reasonably or presumably execute on the seas in case of war.

None of these maps included two fleets until Mr. Daniels presented Japan with two instead of one and we imagine that Japan was too amazed to rebuild a strategy of offense or defense upon this division, thinking that it was an insanity which could not prevail.

If it apparently is going to prevail they will recast their plans and probably their policies. When the United States returns its fleet to a fighting unit Japan will think that we have emerged from a period of insanity into a period of security. It will not think that we are backing down. It will think that we have mobilized. The responsible Japanese think intelligently in military terms. They know that the divided fleet is not ready to fight. They know that the united fleet is ready to fight, whether it is in the Pacific or the Atlantic. They know the united fleet represents greater sea power than they have but that the divided fleet does not.

When any one says that a withdrawal of the fleet to the Atlantic would be construed by the Japanese as a backdown he gives Japanese intelligence an insult. There ought to be bases for the united fleet on the Pacific coast. The fact that there are no such bases is not a reason for keeping the fleet in a dangerous condition, but it is a reason for congressional action.

Just now the fleet ought to be in the Pacific because the danger is in the Pacific, but half of it ought not to be there. All of it ought to be, all of the battle fleet. Congress by appropriations which permit construction can establish a base unless the coast line is impossible.

With regard to the fleet, we seem to have forgotten a cardinal principle of the American union: "United we stand, divided we fall."

A NEW KIND OF TAX DODGER.

Some authority in some fashion will have to meet the city's revenue needs face to face and not dodge them as a bad debtor dodges a creditor by hustling up the alley.

Mayor Thompson does not want to recommend a definite tax rate increase to the legislature. There is a bill for an increase to $2.15, which, it is estimated, will produce $11,000,000 more revenue from taxation. The mayor does not want to support that.

The city council finance committee declines to ask the legislature for a specified tax increase. If the mayor will not, the aldermen do not see why they should. They are willing to send the departmental estimates to Springfield as a basis for legislative action.

The legislators will respond, naturally, that they do not know what departmental estimates mean or what relation they have to economy, waste, indispensable service, etc. They are very likely to add, some of them at least, that when a resolution was introduced to permit the legislature to acquaint itself with Chicago finances by inquiry, Mr. Thompson supporters in the senate got enough votes to kill it.

It can hardly be expected that the legislature will go out of its way to assume responsibility for tax increases when neither the mayor nor the aldermen have the courage to ask for them.

Mr. Thompson is said to have asked the finance committee to cut expenditures and also to have said that a budget equal to the 1920 budget is required. That brought a $6,000,000 deficit and an $8,000,000 bond issue to meet it.

It certainly will make another deficit if there is no more revenue. Does that mean another bond issue? The situation may be unpleasant for everybody, for the city officials who do not like political responsibility, and for the citizens who do not like increased taxes, but the city must either get its expenditures down to the income or its income up to its expenses.

LABOR ABROAD AND AT HOME.

Mr. James of THE TRIBUNE Foreign News Service says that in the Rhineland workers are glad to accept conditions or be content with food which no American or British worker would accept. Mr. James thinks Germany, "unless prevented," will soon dominate the markets of the world because her people have got down to a standard of living and a basis of production which her chief rivals cannot or will not meet. She will, therefore, drive them out of world markets by underselling them.

Prediction as to the economic race the nations are entering upon with their new handicaps is rather hazardous. There are more factors conditioning German success than the subsistence level reached by German labor. Nevertheless America must realize that she cannot afford to ignore it. The standard of living in Europe has been materially lowered, and that will affect directly the competition American foreign commerce must meet. Our standard was higher than the European even before the war, but the discrepancy has been widened.

One of the most difficult of our problems is how to maintain American standards and compete for trade against countries whose organizing powers are at least as great as ours, whose experience in foreign trade is far greater, and whose production costs are much lower. Tariffs can keep their goods out of our home market, but they cannot force our goods into other markets. If American conditions of production are too severe we shall lose in the world race for commerce.

On the other hand, the American standard of living will not be lowered as a matter of policy. That wage reduction must come seems to be generally realized. Resistance to all attempts is threatened as a matter of diplomatic tactics, but a compromise is, we believe, in most cases, obtainable. Labor realizes that it is a very bad time to go on strike when many industries are shut down or are running with greatly reduced forces. In many cases strikes might be welcome, though conscientious employers are not willing to resort to lockouts or shutdowns except in extreme cases.

From the point of view of labor, therefore, to accept reasonable reduction in wages seems the only sensible thing to do, and resistance should be confined to attempts to alter the basis (not the amount) of compensation by increasing hours of work unduly and to lower the conditions of labor generally.

Employers who look beyond the ends of their noses, who look beyond present conditions, will not take advantage of them to attack standards American citizens should maintain, to try to restore excessive hours or to make unnecessarily drastic cuts in pay. They will not attempt to destroy responsible organization.

Employers owe it to their own welfare in the long run and to the welfare of their children and their country to make every effort to meet the present difficult situation so as to protect American standards and to place their relations with their employés on a basis of fair play and consideration. We believe American employers in the main are trying to do this and trying under great difficulties. No sensible business man wants to see low wages, the imposition of low standards and low buying power on American labor. Wage reductions should have relation to actual reduction in the cost of living. But employer and employé are in the same boat and must adjust themselves to meet the conditions which confront their common enterprise.

DRY ONTARIO.

Seemingly for the same reasons which prompted Michigan and other states to go dry before national prohibition and for the same reasons which prompted New York to go drier after national prohibition, Ontario on the Canadian side of the line has gone bone dry.

Whether it is economic or moral—and we think it is moral—the forces which have so clearly registered on this side of the border are registering on the other. There might have been an attraction for Canadian provinces in a moderate acceptance of liquor, regulated to eliminate its worst abuses. Ontario already had a solution of the worst phases in its control of the traffic and under that control there might have been a temptation to profit from the American desire for contact occasionally with the demon rum, which could have been had by a trip across the border.

In spite of these attractions the impulse which has worked to accomplishment in the United States is working to accomplishment in Canada. The province of Quebec may hold out because there are evidences of another culture, of the old culture and habit of the French from whom the English took the dominion. They have a greater sanity in the permitted use of alcoholic beverages and less of a moralistic view, consequently, of them and their effects.

The border line between Canada and the United States is strong nationalistically, but it does not substantially mark moral, cultural, or economic differences. Both nations are uniting in demand for the construction of a great waterway. We here object to bars placed against our purchase of Canadian raw materials, such as lumber. They find our moral idea of control of habit by government acceptable and necessary.

THE UNINSPIRED REPORTER.

"Some of the women kissed him." That is all that the concert reviewers wrote about an incident which made splendid the recent farewell appearance of a favorite orchestra leader. Why this reticence? What is a concert, an orchestra, a brass band, to a kiss? Your modern novelist recharges his pipe, chases the children out of his den, refills the fountain pen, and writes a whole chapter merely leading up to the big kiss, or, as the movie people have it, the clinch. "Some of the women kissed him." How shockingly inadequate!—New York Herald.

LYRIC.

Just now I heard
A merry bird
That seemed (I mused) a pert;
Yet, wide awake,
The old, old ache
Proclaimed it but a verry.

Some other day
In April, May,
Or in some white December,
Shall I recall
Your light footfall,
Or naught of you remember?

Years hence, when life,
Bound up in strife,
Hears notes that stir the fancy,
Shall new hope come?
Or love be dumb
To hints of necromancy?

IF Henry James had written, in his third manner, "THE FORD CAR, ITS MAINTENANCE AND OPERATION," fancy the bliss of the blowout, the fouled sparkplug, the leaky piston ring. To halt by the side of the road and read how to flush the carburetor! One could die of a rose in aromatic pain.

A LETTER TO B. L. T.

Dear Judge. Of the blah-blah of propaganda there seems to be no end. There are those who would ballyhoo for patriotism and at the same moment act as fence for the pickpockets in the crowd. It is to laugh that we so weakly permit such sideshows when the main tent, devoted to Truth, is so slow in filling.

Aries has sung. But where is Padded Hammer, P. S. W., P. D. S., and others? Surely they have not passed through their poetic climacteric? Is it true that Fred Donaghey went to London only to see the noted London busman?

The Literary Digest devoted a page to you under the title, "The Lost Colyumist." An inept heading—you were never lost and always the guide. I appreciated the Digest's critical discussion of your work. You were too modest—so few, even now, know you, or of you. It was necessary, however, for me to go out on my back step and utter a short, sharp curse over the Digest's manner of spelling such words as "possest." There is more than one type of Tobin (praises to him, at that, for starting something!).

Royalty remains in the dumps, but the world becomes less safe for democracy. It is true that Democrats are no longer living under aliases (Wordsman, spare thy quip!) but are now facing the world sturdily and claiming acquaintance with Will Bryan, the only man who ever made a fortune running for offices he never got.

HEALTH HONOR ROLLS.

THE Journal of the American Medical Association recently published its ninth annual report on the prevalence of typhoid fever in the cities with 100,000 inhabitants and over. The report deals with sixty-eight cities in which there live more than one-fourth the total population of the country.

Yonkers leads the honor roll with not one death from typhoid during the year. This was the record of Spokane for 1919. Rochester is second with a record of one death for each 100,000 population and Chicago is third with a rate of 1.1.

In the honor roll, those with a rate of less than two, there are ten cities, among which are found Boston and Seattle. When the journal began this reporting nine years ago there was no city with a death rate of less than two. The journal therefore established a grading in which rates of two to five were classed as cities of the first rank. In that first rank class at the beginning there were but few cities. The list now contains the names of thirty-nine cities and above them there stand the super first rank ten who are on the honor roll.

In the first rank cities are New York, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Albany, Portland, and Denver.

In the second rank cities are those with typhoid rates of five to ten. In this list there are twenty-one cities. In the third rank are found the cities with rates between ten and twenty. All five cities in this list have rates less than fifteen. The tables published show the record of these cities since 1906 and the time is divided into three five year periods.

To see how great the improvement has been we should compare the record for 1900 with that of 1906-'10. In Chicago typhoid was more than fourteen times as prevalent in 1906-'10 as it was in 1920. Buffalo, the lowest city in the 500,000 group in 1920, had a typhoid rate that was one-third as high as that of the best city in 1906-'10. Paterson, N. J., had the worst record of the entire list for 1920, 14.7, yet in 1906-'10 only ten American cities had a better typhoid rate than Paterson had in 1920. Cambridge, Mass., with the lowest rate in 1906-'10, 9.8, was better than the 1920 of only six cities—San Antonio, New Bedford, Atlanta, Dallas, Birmingham, and Paterson.

Cities especially mentioned as deserving praise for great gains in 1920 are Detroit, New Orleans, Milwaukee, Columbus, Louisville, Grand Rapids, Scranton, Norfolk, Nashville, Memphis, and Birmingham.

There is so little typhoid fever in the larger cities now that a trivial outbreak may drop a city from the honor roll to a second rank city. A small group of infections at a summer resort was enough to drop Spokane from the head of the honor roll to rather a low position in the second rank, and New Bedford on the honor roll in 1919 experienced a single infection outbreak in 1920 and fell to the third rank.

So great may be the influence of a single death or two or three on the rank of a city when the rates are so low that the journal suggests that hereafter we compare on the basis of five year periods only. I offer the suggestion to the journal that it consider the fight against typhoid as having been won so far as the large cities are concerned and that it concentrate for a period of years on the cities with 10,000 to 100,000 inhabitants. There is the present stronghold of typhoid.

Women are so much healthier than men, have so much lower death rates and live to a riper old age that I, as mere man, take pleasure in setting down the fact that women are more subject to typhoid.

However, the journal says this is because so many million men were inoculated against typhoid during the world war. If this conclusion is correct within a few years women will have regained their supremacy and my sex will have nothing to brag about.

ONE BABY'S HISTORY.

Mrs. H. C. O. writes: "My baby is 9 months old. At birth he weighed 8 pounds and at present 22. He is of good height and has two teeth. He was breast fed until four months ago. He has had orange juice daily since he was 2 months old. He began taking cereals at 5 months and vegetables at 6 months. Now he gets three meals a day, cereal in the morning, baked potato and bacon (or something similar) at noon, cooked vegetables, graham or white crackers at supper, and as much milk at each meal as he will drink from a glass. He drinks pretty well. At 10 p. m. I give him a bottle of milk. I plan to discontinue the bottle at 10 months. He has no trouble with his bowels—two good movements daily.

At 3 weeks he caught whooping cough from his older brother. Being in July and August and being a breast-fed baby he had a mild case. At 6 months he had a bad case of gastro-enteritis, lost two and a half pounds in three days. Took it from his older brother (it was epidemic at the time). At 7 months he took a cold, also from his older brother (he has been an outdoor baby from the start). Both children came down with pneumonia (bronchial) within a day of each other. The older boy had a light case and was up in ten days. The baby had double pneumonia. He was in bed three weeks. Then we brought him downstairs. He never has been without a temperature from the day he came down with it. It runs about 100.5 to 101.5 most of the time. Five times it has been under 100 for a couple of hours at a time. I have given him ammonium carbonate twice a day. He coughs once in a while, a dry, harsh cough. Some days he does not cough. He cut two teeth last week. He has a good appetite. He is pale, with a touch of red in the right cheek. His eyes are listless, yet he is active. What do you suppose is the matter? Is it tuberculosis? What shall I do for him?"

REPLY.

You should have the baby examined for tuberculosis. Consumption is fairly prevalent among babies. The probability is that you will find that pulmonary tuberculosis is not the cause of his trouble. Babies and other young children run a little fever on very slight provocation. An infected gland which is not dangerous and which will get well without much treatment could easily explain your baby's symptoms. I doubt the advantage of giving ammonium carbonate or any other cough mixture. I note your reference to a cold caught from an older brother. Likewise the epidemic diarrhea. I wish more people understood that both colds and diarrheas are catching.

THE BUSY FOOD FADDIST.

F. F. B. writes: "A recent book on diet, written by a physician, forbids the eating of fruit, cooked or uncooked, at mealtime. It is not easy to eat all the fruit which one needs between meals, and the custom of taking it at breakfast is both convenient and agreeable. Will you kindly give your opinion on the subject?"

REPLY.

There are many kinds of food faddists. Do not listen to any of them. If you develop the habit of following the food faddists you will be jumping around worse than a pursued flea. There are all sorts of doctors and some of them are food faddists. Unfortunately the food faddists will write books.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WOMEN WORKERS.

Chicago, April 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is a disgrace that so many men who are willing and able to work cannot find employment. Youth is the time to fortify against the time of inability, but how can a man when the powers that be have no sense of their responsibility and are forcing ambitious men to waste their time, precious time! I am employed in one of the largest banks, and women (a great many married, some working beside their husbands) have jobs men always filled prior to the war; in some instances they are tellers, a place not formerly attained by a man until after many years of service. They, of course, work for much less than a man, and no doubt do it satisfactorily, but what of the home life husband and wife are deprived of. It seems to me the few dollars saved by the avaricious employer is at the expense of the welfare of our country and is leading to an age of intolerance, and they should be made ashamed. One cannot blame the woman so much; we were born with a desire for the luxuries, and an easy job where we can wear fine clothes is more attractive than kitchen work, but if not willing to make a home for a man on what he is earning, why marry him. A happy home and nourishing plain food will give a man "pep," and he will soon earn as much alone as both before, and, as fine clothes will not be needed in such quantity as for an office, there ought to be a nest egg, to say nothing of a kiddie or two to make life worth while. C. C.

THE BONUS TO THE DISABLED.

Chicago, April 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In following the news here of late, taking into consideration also your splendid work for the American Legion and disabled war veterans, and in view of the fact that the state of Illinois has recently passed the bonus act, I believe that all ex-service men entitled to this bonus, who are able bodied and capable of getting a position, should turn over the bonus which is due them for the benefit of the disabled "buddies," if it could be placed in the hands of a man like Mr. Dawes for distribution.

I will come under the head of the men entitled to a bonus and will be more than glad to contribute my bonus to disabled war veterans if others could be brought to the same viewpoint.

Thanking you for your hearty support for the ex-service men,
EX-U. S. MARINE.

IT'S DONE NOW.

Chicago, April 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial under caption, "Bouquets with Bricks in Them," was evidently composed by one who either knows nothing about the Colombian treaty and our activities in promoting revolution which precipitated the secession of the province of Panama from Colombia, or due to political jealousies.

American interests in the Latin countries have exploited and fomented so much trouble that an American representative selling made in America merchandise has a very rough time of it due to the actions in the past of various enterprises, mostly shady, that have been pulled on these small republics.

Carvajal (former president of Santo Domingo) was one boat ahead of Colby when he was on his way to South America, and to mention of what American interests have done in Haiti and Santo Domingo would take too much space, but get La Nacion of B. A. and other papers where Colby landed and translate their editorials and you might change your attitude about it being unfair to pay Colombia what we justly owe her, as well as an apology. J. M. C.

MR. BARRINGTON STARTED SOMETHING.

Divernon, Ill., April 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In answer to Mr. Barrington's item in your paper of April 18 inst. dated at Knowlton, Wis., April 15 inst., entitled "What's a Train Without a Conductor," will answer his note by saying that I can tell this man knows nothing about the conductor's work or anything about any one that is in train service.

In the first place, Mr. Barrington, the same conductor that you are speaking about has without a doubt put in twenty-five or thirty years in freight service before he occupies this position as passenger conductor, out in all kinds of weather, all hours of the night, away from home a good part of the time in order to get this "soft" job, as you call it. As far as just taking up tickets and punching you a hat check, that is the easiest part of his work.

Mr. Barrington, do you realize that this "high paid conductor" is responsible for all the passengers in his train and responsible for the engineer's actions and responsible so as not to overlook meeting points and meeting trains and running order boards?

You could use this subject as "What is a country without a president?" Talking about the way the English handle their passengers, yes, they handle them like cattle and hogs, and you must remember you are not in England now but the United States, and, therefore, will have to do as they do.

A CHICAGOAN AND PROUD OF IT.

Chicago, April 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—When we read such letters from "Chicago knockers" as you have printed recently from folks who probably call themselves Chicago citizens, one's pride compels one to register disgust. It is such people that probably do all they can to hinder public improvements Chicago attempts, and they seem to delight in picking out the flaws of our city instead of praising its many virtues. Of course Chicago has its shortcomings. What city has not?

I am a traveling man and have visited several large cities, and from every angle I do not hesitate to say that Chicago has them all beat.

As for our rich folks, mentioned in one of the letters, they are far more generous in giving for civic improvements than any other city. Compare a list of such improvements in New York or Philadelphia or any city, and then compare them with our own list and if one does not say that Chicago leads they are hopelessly prejudiced. Our transportation system is far from being an abomination. Look around at other cities and note the old, dilapidated cars, the rotten roadbeds, the length of time it takes to go a short distance, and compare it all with Chicago's big "Pullman" street cars and elevated railroad service that has been proven by figures to be faster than New York's.

Chicago is outgrowing itself. Yes, it is rather inconvenient in some ways sometimes, but it is better to let her grow rather than attempt to stop her and wait for time to catch up.

Why is Chicago growing so fast? Because it is the most progressive and most popular city in the world.

I am not a "city father" or a member of our mayor's boosting club, but one of the millions of proud Chicago citizens and a booster in my own way. A. J. C. Jr.

OUR UPSETTING TIME.

Chicago, April 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I see Joseph Delahanty is in again. He says our time is insane and seems to think our politicians and most of the voters are insane, and hints at obtaining an injunction to stop the change of time in Chicago.

The daylight saving law of Chicago was passed by the city council of Chicago for Chicago and approved by the voters of Chicago. The people of Chicago care very little for Joseph Delahanty's opinion of it. We don't believe Illinois is all "upset" over this law, but perhaps Mr. Delahanty is. He has, however, been "upset" before and it is no new experience to him. He was "upset" last fall over the personnel of the Republican state ticket, and he will be "upset" again over the outcome of the election. G. B. SWARTHOUT.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE POMPADOUR'S FAN.

By Austin Dobson.

Chicken-skin, delicate, white,
Painted by Carlo Vanloo,
Loves in a riot of light,
Roses and vaporous blue;
Hark to the dainty frou-frou!
Picture above, if you can,
Eyes that could melt as the dew—
This was the Pompadour's fan!

See how they rise at the sight,
Thronging the Oeil de Boeuf through;
Courtiers as butterflies bright,
Beauties that Fragonard drew,
Talon-rouge, falbala, queue,
Cardinal, Duke—to a man
Eager to sigh or to sue—
This was the Pompadour's fan!

Ah, but things more than polite
Hung on this toy, voyez-vous!
Matters of state and of might,
Things that great ministers do;
Things that, maybe, overthrew
Those in whose brains they began;
Here was the sign and the cue—
This was the Pompadour's fan!

ENVOY.

Where are the secrets it knew?
Weavings of plot and of plan?
But where is the Pompadour, too?
This was the Pompadour's fan!

"MYSTIC ISLES IN THE SOUTH SEAS," the new Frederick O'Brien book, was a beautiful compensation for last Saturday's hurricane. While the front window was pulsating with eagerness to get free of its boundaries, while man and beast were like paper boats on a rippling pond, while sleet etched faces with crimson streaks, the mystic isles offered their warm welcome, their rich gifts of tropical wine, tropical women, tropical song. One of the most sensuous books that was ever written is "Mystic Isles" (as it will surely be called, in the same way that "White Shadows" soon lost the geographical part of its title).

It is full of color, of fragrance, of luscious fruits, of the soft lure of the Tahitian atmosphere, of the motive beauty of the women of Tahiti and their luxuriant love. It is saturated with Tahitian sunshine and the caressing coolness of Tahitian pools, with a famous absinthe tinted drink called after its creator, "Doctor Funk," with Pol Roger and the milk of cocoanuts. It is lyric with popular songs soon so translated in words and music by the Tahitians as to be unrecognizable, with native hymns and wild, passionate music. It quivers with the hula.

In it are recorded deeds of blind passion, of primitive cruelty, and of tender gentleness. Native kindliness, steeped in European sloth and greed, bursts forth into violence now and then. But always the soothing fragrance of the [illegible] buries everything. And all of that potency Frederick O'Brien has put into his book. It is completely fascinating.

Mr. O'Brien has done what every one thought was impossible. He has written another book as full of allurement as "White Shadows" was. He details incidents, sketches a life history now and then that rivals most of the fiction that takes one away from care these days. The characters in this book are as "unreal"—in the sense that they are creatures of an artist's keener sight—as any fancied heroes or heroines of fiction. You can't forget Lovaina's opulent language, or the fearsome gutturals of Vava, her mute giant. The [illegible] of the dancing girls, firing her companions with her own almost religious [illegible], remains in your mind side by side with the little leprous girl who set her doll on her doorstep and listened as visitors spoke of its beauty, who lived her own passion for beauty in the vicarious spell of the French doll. Nor do you forget the sturdy and fiery Llewellyn who sent each year to Paris for a new doll for her and had a speaking box put into it to say "Bon jour," and her flicker of life when—almost dead—she was carried to the door to see it.

And through it all there is an undercurrent of sadness, unspoken until the end when a letter to Mr. O'Brien tells of the ravages of the flu, of the sickening and death of these men and women who made Tahiti a paradise for a little while to him. You feel that this mystic isle is indeed a mystic thing; that it no longer exists; that a fine, free, beautiful people have slowly, through the power of the Europeans, become "civilized." In point of time, this book antedates "White Shadows." It was written before his first book, but entirely rewritten last year.

One chapter tells of Rupert Brooke and his days on the island, of his morning plunge with Frederick O'Brien, of their long talks about the natives, of Rupert Brooke's complete joy in the surroundings. It was there that he wrote that poem which has always been one of my favorites, "The Great Lover." In another chapter Mr. O'Brien tells of his life with the old chief who adopted Stevenson. In another he tells of a visit to the wondrous falls of Fautaua, where Loti was taken by his Rarahu. All through the book are reminiscences of the slight but beautiful literature of the South seas, of Capt. Cook, of Melville, of Stoddard, of Loti.

"Mystic Isles" is a book that every man will want to have and to hold. As for women, with the comforting thought that Tahiti is more or less 4,000 miles away and that the beautiful Tahitiennes aren't imminent rivals, they, too, will find it wholly fascinating.

Beg Your Pahdon! Last Sunday there was a tragedy in the Tabloid. Tacked jauntily on to a piece about Clare Sheridan's Diary was a paragraph about another diary, Sir Henry Lucy's. It made perfect sense to any one who hadn't read Clare Sheridan. But those who had knew that there is no scandal—Dilke or otherwise—in Clare Sheridan's most scrupulous memoirs. The Dilke scandal—which inspired my friend to the pleasant comment about "Jenny Linden," and the phrase "English life can always be depended upon to disgust English fiction," appears in Sir Henry Lucy's "Diary of a Journalist." Sorry.

"The Man Who Did the Right Thing" is the too-revelatory title of Sir Harry Johnston's new novel. Label a man with the assurance that he always does the right thing and—such is the perversity of a moral world—he loses the charm of the children of the earth who are not but ever to be blest. There's nothing of the good sturdy fight in him whose battle cry is "Yield not to temptation, for yielding is sin." I hasten to add that Roger Brentham did not always do the right thing, but he did so little yielding and repented so thoroughly of it that he almost deserves his label.

Myself, I liked "The Gay-Dombeys" and "Mrs. Warren's Daughter" much better than I do this book, probably because of the bizarre effect of his mixture of literary reality and actual famous characters in them. His method was a brand new plaything, and he had a gorgeous time with it, and so did his readers. There may be just as much reality in this book, but it is strictly English political reality of the nineties when I, for one, wasn't glib in my conversation or especially international in my interests.

"The Man Who Did the Right Thing" is a good story, though, a very good one of the nineties in British East Africa when such men as Sir Harry Johnston himself were burning with the passion of pioneering; when Stanley was the talk of London, Sauk Center, Minnesota, and Unguja; when diplomats were gazed upon with a little more awe from the outside while they were being skillfully manipulated by beautiful peeresses. It isn't so much fun as his two earlier novels, but it is a more important book, probably. It contains some brilliant—and I suspect, indiscreet—diplomatic revelations, and a picture of British East Africa which has all of the advantages of an atlas and none of the tediousness. The author says that in this book he has been able "to live over again a very happy and interesting past life." He was, you know, a famous African pioneer, explorer, diplomat, et al, before he took to writing novels.

"Husbands and Wives," by Arthur Belleville McCoid, is a compilation of common sense on the subject of marriage. Mr. McCoid is a Chicago lawyer, and he has had many years' experience with unsuccessful as well as successful alliances. His advice to his readers is sound, sane, sympathetic, and salubrious. He believes that mutual admiration and respect are better cornerstones for happiness than a mad attraction; that all problems are soluble in mutual understanding; that children are the link between one's own youth and the fulfillment of future dreams, and that it's perfectly possible to be happy though married.

"Most of the germs and many of the determinants of our modern institutions and civilization can be recognized in the habits, customs, and life of the Neolithic period," says John M. Tyler in his introduction to "The New Stone Age in Northern Europe." And then he writes a book about 'em—fascinating at times, always interesting, and, in the light of modern civilization, at times [illegible].

"The Big Year," by Meade Mennigerode, is a story of Yale, with all of the [illegible] plainly spelled out, all the fraternities properly labeled, and a lot of college spirit in it. It sounds terribly callow to me. Compare it to "This Side of Paradise" and you—even you scoffers—can see the yeastlessness of the ordinary college story and the vivid life of F. Scott Fitzgerald's.

Incidentally, have you ever noticed that no one in writing a story of Yale speaks of the really ravishingly beautiful building that is Yale's and no other college's in the country? They always mention the beauty of all of the ivy-covered spots which have sentimental associations for them. But no one ever speaks of that majestic old middle church—I don't remember its name. I have never been so moved by a building in America. It stands there, the sheer perfection of the dreams of old New England, the embodiment of all the suppressed longings for beauty which were aceticized in their daily life and which were released in brick and wood. It isn't only its age that makes New England architecture impressive. It is that quality of beauty passionately, almost religiously, restrained.

That is a theory of my own, worth nothing, probably, but I like to feel that that majestic old church watching over New Haven, seeing college generation after generation clutching after dreams, is saying to itself, "I, too, was once a dream, and I became a reality. No really fine longing can be killed by environment, by religion, by atheism, by passion, by aceticism. The longings for beauty must out. It lives."

AT the SIGN of the WORLD'S END

by G. K. Chesterton

ON MAKING FRIENDS FOR ENGLAND.

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

NINE times out of ten a man's broad mindedness is necessarily the narrowest thing about him. This is not particularly paradoxical; it is, when we come to think of it, quite inevitable. His vision of his own village may really be full of varieties; and even his vision of his own nation may have a rough resemblance to the reality. But his vision of the world is probably smaller than the world. His vision of the universe is certainly much smaller than the universe. Hence he is never so inadequate as when he is universal; he is never so limited as when he generalizes.

This is the fallacy in the many modern attempts at a creedless creed, at something variously described as essential Christianity, or undenominational religion, or a world faith to embrace all the faiths in the world. It is that every sectarian is more sectarian in his unsectarianism than he is in his sect. The emancipation of a Baptist is a very Baptist emancipation. The charity of a Buddhist is a very Buddhist charity, and very different from Christian charity. When a philosophy embraces everything it generally squeezes everything, and squeezes it out of shape; when it digests it necessarily assimilates. When a Theosophist absorbs Christianity it is rather as a cannibal absorbs Christian missionaries. In this sense it is even possible for the larger thing to be swallowed by the smaller, and for men to move about not only in a Clapham sect but in a Clapham cosmos under Clapham moon and stars.

But if this danger exists for all men, it exists especially for the Englishman. The Englishman is never so insular as when he is imperial; except, indeed, when he is international. In private life he is a good friend and in practical politics often even a good ally. But theoretical politics are more practical than practical politics. And in theoretical politics the Englishman is the worst ally the world ever saw. This is all the more curious because he has passed so much of his historical life in the character of an ally. He has been in twenty great alliances and never understood one of them. He has never been farther away from European politics than when he was fighting heroically in the thick of them.

I myself think that this splendid isolation is sometimes really splendid; so long as it is isolation and does not imagine itself to be imperialism or internationalism. With the idea of being international, with the idea of being imperial, comes the frantic and farcical idea of being impartial.

To Secure Anglo-American Friendship.

GENERALLY speaking, men are never so mean and false and hypocritical as when they are occupied in being impartial. They are performing the first and most typical of all the actions of the devil; they are claiming the throne of God. Even when it is not hypocrisy but only mental confusion, it is always a confusion worse and worse confounded.

We see it in the impartial historians of the Victorian age, who now seem far more Victorian than the partial historians. Hallam wrote about the middle ages, but Hallam was far less medieval than Macaulay, for Macaulay was at least a fighter. Huxley had more medieval sympathies than Herbert Spencer for the same reason: that Huxley was a fighter. They both fought in many ways for the limitations of their own rationalistic epoch, but they were nearer the truth than the men who simply assumed those limitations as rational.

The war of the controversionalists was a wider thing than the peace of the arbiters. And in the same way the Englishman never cuts a less convincing figure before other nations than when he tries to arbitrate between them.

I have by this time heard a great deal about the necessity of saving Anglo-American friendship, a necessity which I myself feel rather too strongly to be satisfied with the ambassadorial and editorial style of achieving it. The very worst way of securing Anglo-American friendship is to be Anglo-American; or (as the more illiterate would express it) to be Anglo-Saxon. I am more and more convinced that the way for the Englishman to do it is to be English, but to know that he is English and not everything else as well. Thus the only sincere answer to Irish nationalism is English nationalism, which is a reality; and not English imperialism, which is a reactionary fiction, or English internationalism, which is a revolutionary one.

For the English are reviled for their imperialism because they are not imperialistic. They dislike it, which is the real reason why they do it badly; and they do it badly, which is the real reason why they are disliked when they do it. Nobody calls France imperialistic because she has absorbed Brittany. But everybody calls England imperialistic because she has not absorbed Ireland.

The Englishman is fixed and frozen forever in the attitude of a ruthless conqueror; not because he has conquered such people but because he has not conquered them, but is always trying to conquer them with a heroism worthy of a better cause. For the really native and vigorous part of what is unfortunately called the British empire is not an empire at all and does not consist of these conquered provinces at all. It is not an empire but an adventure, which is probably a much finer thing. It was not the power of making strange countries similar to our own but simply the pleasure of seeing strange countries because they were different from our own.

The adventurer did, indeed, like the third son, set out to seek his fortune, but not primarily to alter other people's fortunes; he wished to trade with people rather than to rule them. But as the other people remained different from him, so did he remain different from them. The adventurer saw a thousand strange things and remained a stranger. He was the Robinson Crusoe on a hundred desert islands, and on each he remained as insular as on his own island.

To Make the Englishman Interesting.

WHAT is wanted for the cause of England today is an Englishman with enough imagination to love his country from the outside as well as the inside. That is, we need somebody who will do for the English what has never been done for them, but what is done for any outlandish peasantry or even any savage tribe. We want people who can make England attractive, quite apart from disputes about whether England is strong or weak. We want somebody to explain not that England is everywhere but what England is anywhere; not that England is or is not really dying but why we do not want her to die.

For this purpose the official and conventional compliments or claims can never get any further than pompous abstractions about Law and Justice and Truth, the ideals which England accepts as every civilized state accepts them and violates as every civilized state violates them. That is not the way in which the picture of any people has ever been painted on the sympathetic imagination of the world.

Enthusiasts for old Japan did not tell us that the Japs recognized the existence of abstract morality but that they lived in paper houses or wrote letters with paint brushes. Men who wished to interest us in Arabs did not confine themselves to saying that they are monotheists or moralists; they filled our romances with the rush of Arab steeds or the colors of strange tents or carpets.

What we want is somebody who will do for the Englishman with his front garden what was done for the Jap and his paper house; who shall understand the Englishman with his dog as well as the Arab with his horse. In a word, what nobody has really tried to do is the one thing that really wants doing. It is to make England attractive as a nationality, and even as a small nationality.

For it is a wild folly to suppose that nations will love each other because they are alike. They will never really do that unless they are really alike, and then they will not be nations. Nations can love each other as men and women love each other, not because they are alike but because they are different.

It can easily be shown, I fancy, that in every case where a real public sympathy was aroused for some unfortunate foreign people it has always been accompanied with a particular and positive interest in their most foreign customs and their most foreign externals. The man who made a romance of the Scotch Highlander made a romance of his kilt and even of his dirk; the friend of the Red Indians was interested in picture writing and had some tendency to be interested in scalping.

To take a more serious example, such nations as Serbia had been largely commended to international consideration by the study of Serbian epics or Serbian songs. The epoch of Negro emancipation was also the epoch of Negro melodies. Those who wept over Uncle Tom also laughed over Uncle Remus. And just as the admiration for the redskin almost became an apology for scalping, the mysterious fascination of the African has sometimes almost led us into the fringes of the black forest of Voodoo. But the sort of interest that is felt even in the scalp hunter and the cannibal, the torturer and the devil worshiper, that sort of interest has never been felt in the Englishman.

To Explain the Individual.

AND this is the more extraordinary because the Englishman is really very interesting. He is interesting in a special degree in this special manner: he is interesting because he is individual.

No man in the world is more misrepresented by everything official or even in the ordinary sense national. A description of English life must be a description of private life. In that sense there is no public life. In that sense there is no public opinion. There have never been those prairie fires of public opinion in England which often sweep over America. At any rate, there have never been any such popular revolution since the popular revolutions of the middle ages.

The English are a nation of amateurs; they are even a nation of eccentrics. An Englishman is never more English than when he is considered an eccentric by the other Englishman. This can be clearly seen in a figure like Dr. Johnson, who has become national not by being normal but by being extraordinary.

To express this mysterious people, to explain or suggest why they like tall hedges and heavy breakfasts and crooked roads and small gardens with large fences, and why they alone among Christians have kept quite consistently the great Christian glory of the open fireplace, here would be a strange and stimulating opportunity for any of the artists in words who study the souls of strange peoples. That would be the true way to create a friendship between England and America or between England and anything else; yes, even between England and Ireland. For this justice at least has already been done to Ireland. And as an indignant patriot I demand a more equal treatment for the two nations.

Next week Mr. Chesterton will write on "Diplomacy and Dixie."

YANK HEROES OF POLE AIR FORCE DUE HOME SOON

Kosciusko Squadron to Be Demobilized.

BY L. C. WALTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WARSAW, April 23.—[By Wireless.]—With peace definitely replacing war between Poland and soviet Russia, the ten American officer pilots who are still members of the Kosciusko flying squadron will shortly leave for home.

LIEUT. COL. C. E. FAUNTLEROY.

Lieut. Col. Cedric E. Fauntleroy of Chicago, who originated the famous air squadron in September, 1919, when he brought twelve American army pilots to Poland from France, in a letter to the Polish war minister, Gen. John Sohnowski, has asked that the Americans be demobilized, "as there seems to be no further opportunity for active service."

Expect to Be Home in May.

By the end of April it is hoped the pilots will be on their way to America.

Capt. Merion C. Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla., who has been held a war prisoner in Moscow since last summer, also is included in the list of those to be demobilized and will soon be released by the Moscow authorities, it is announced.

Before leaving Poland the Americans will place a wreath at the head of Kosciusko's tomb outside Cracow. Chief of State Joseph Pilsudski will bid them farewell in the name of the Polish nation which they helped liberate from soviet Russia.

To Honor Dead Comrades.

Plans are on foot to erect a monument in the cemetery where lie buried Capt. A. H. Kelly, Capt. S. McCallum, and Lieut. E. P. Graves, the three Americans of the squadron who were killed in the war with the Reds. Another memorial to the squadron's devotion to Poland's cause will be a plaque in the Polish diet chamber at Warsaw.

Col. Fauntleroy, who, after personally directing the Kosciusko squadron, was appointed the commander of the Polish 3d flying group, has recommended the following former and present officers for the Polish war cross: Capt. M. C. Cooper [prisoner], with two bars; G. M. Crawford, at present the squadron commander, two bars; E. C. Corsi, one bar; Edwin Noble, one bar; H. C. Herron [demobilized], three bars.

A. H. Kelly (killed), Lieut. E. P. Graves (killed), Lieut. K. C. Shrewsbury (demobilized), and Lieut. Elliot Chesses.

Capt. S. McCallum (killed) and Lieuts. J. C. Speaks, J. I. Maitland, K. M. Murray, T. H. Garlick, and Earl Evans will be awarded the Polish-American service medal.

Among other distinctions to be granted by the Polish government in recognition of services rendered by the Kosciusko squadron is a war cross to Lou Pierson, chairman of the board of directors of the Irving National bank, New York City.

Canadian of Lost Identity Not Missing A. J. Small

Montreal, Que., April 23.—"George Cox" of Verona, Ont., sufferer from aphasia, is not the missing theater man of Toronto, Ambrose J. Small, according to Mr. Small's sister, who saw Cox today. Constable Eotallon of Verona brought Cox to Toronto for the purpose of identificatin and to claim the $50,000 reward if his man proved to be Small. Even after the denial of Small's sister, he still claimed that Cox was Small.

GOLFERS' RUSH TO FOREST COURSES STARTS ON MAY 1

Board Prepares for 4,000,000 Visitors.

Foresters of the Cook county forest preserve district, which approximates 20,000 acres, will be ready May 1 for the rush of picnickers to the picturesque woods, streams, lakelets, and golf courses. This was announced yesterday.

Work on the Palos and Edgebrook golf courses is nearing completion. The Palos course will be extended to eighteen holes. Nine will be ready at Edgebrook, with locker accommodations for 100 players. Annual locker tickets will cost $10. The fees at Edgebrook will be 50 cents on Sundays and 25 cents on week days. The Palos course will be free.

Four Million Visitors Expected.

Last year about 3,000,000 visitors entered the big preserve. It is expected the coming season will witness the attendance of at least an additional million persons.

With this in view, President Daniel Ryan of the county board summoned all of the district foresters to the county building yesterday and addressed them on the subject of the care of the county's great recreational estate. He laid especial stress on instructions to caretakers and the policing of the district.

"Let your slogan be 'courtesy to all,'" President Ryan said.

Many Permits for Campers.

Permits already have been issued to a large number of campers, who will be allowed a stay of thirty days each. All comers of good character will be admitted. Caretakers will have supervision over their camps, enforcing cleanliness. Automobile travelers, carrying tent equipment, will be accorded privileges and, as was the case last year, they are expected to come from many parts of the country.

Picnic parties will be accommodated in large numbers. Large industrial concerns by the score have procured permits, as have fraternal organizations, churches, and Sunday schools.

TIDES OF GOLD BRING $12,000,000 MORE TO GOTHAM

New York, April 23.—The flood of gold that recently poured in was augmented today by nearly $12,000,000 from Colombia, India, Sweden, and other points. The Drottningholm, from Sweden, brought $7,400,000; the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam, $4,000,000, while $500,000 worth of gold bars arrived from Calcutta on the Trafford. Smaller amounts came on steamers from Colombian ports. All the gold was consigned to New York banks.

Take your old straw hats out of the closet

How you can make them look like new

Colorite will give you a new hat at trifling cost.

YOU doubtless have several straw hats in your closet that you have discarded because their surface has become soiled and faded. Perhaps you will find the old favorite whose lines you know suit you so well. It is easy to make it just like new with a coat of Colorite Straw Hat Colors. If you prefer, color your hat to match your gown.

Colorite is a liquid sold in a bottle with a brush for applying. It is waterproof and durable. Easily applied by anyone. Dries in thirty minutes. Be sure of satisfactory results by insisting upon Colorite. Don't accept imitations. Jet Black is fine for refinishing suit cases and traveling bags.

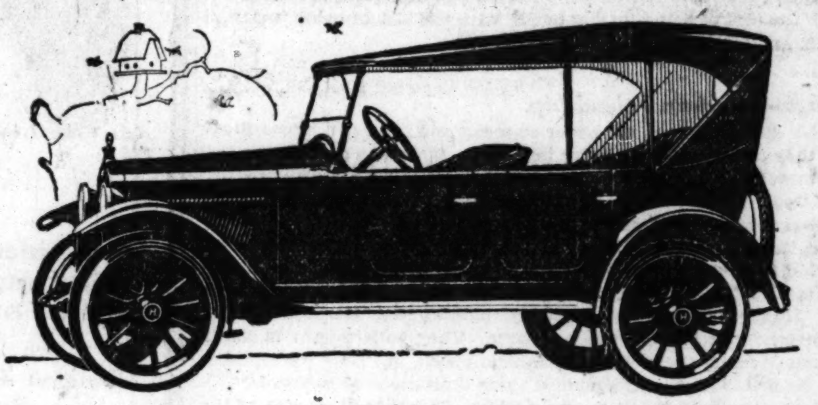
FREIGHT STEAMER IN DISTRESS.

New York, April 23.—The Ward line freight steamer Farnam was reported by wireless today in distress four miles southeast of Sombrero light on the southern Florida coast. The radio message stated that the steamer had boiler trouble. A tug from Key West went to its assistance.



Hupmobile

There are four real questions when you buy a car—What will it cost to run? Will repairs be heavy? How long will it last? What will it bring when sold?

If you get the same answers as the man who buys a Hupmobile, you can be sure you have not paid too much.

Hupmobile running economy is known to be truly exceptional.

Owners will tell you their repair bills are unusually light.

It is a fact that many Hupmobiles serve three or four long-time owners before they wear out.

Used car dealers all know the car commands a price above the average.

These things are true of the Hupmobile because it is built to last and to keep going on the minimum of outlay; and because they are true, the car is worth what it costs.

REO

For Professional Men—This Reo Six Coupe

¶ In using the term "professional men" we have in mind not only physicians, lawyers, civil engineers and architects, but all men whose vocation is of an highly specialized nature and takes them many places in a day.

¶ Three qualities are absolutely essential in a car for the use of such men.

¶ First, absolute dependability—for the time of professional men is valuable—and the conservation of their time vital.

¶ Bodily comfort is next in importance—for men who spend several hours a day in their car, soon feel the effects of faulty springs or cushions, or imperfect balance.

¶ An enclosed car is the only car for men who must be out in all kinds of weather at all seasons.

¶ And finally, low upkeep—for here again is an item that soon shows up in a car that covers an average of say 1500 to 2000 miles per month—as many Reo Coupes do.

¶ Is there another car built that so ideally fulfills the demands of the professional man?

¶ We do not know of one at less than twice the price of this Reo.

¶ "Reo" and "Reliability"—the very words are synonyms. So are "Reo" and "Quality"—in body build as well as in chassis construction.

¶ And the Longevity and Low Upkeep of Reos is proverbial.

The Gold Standard of Values

FOR SALE

Lake Cora Hotel, Annex, Cottages, and 120 acres of property situated on Lake Cora, Michigan, 120 miles from Chicago.

The greatest bargain of its kind ever offered in the Middle West.

No [illegible] site could be found for a welfare camp; [illegible] l concern; for a private school wishi[illegible] a summer camp; for a private club [illegible] a golf course or a game preserve, o[illegible] estate.

The buildings, which have modern improvements, are in excellent condition and 18 acres immediately surrounding them have been improved. The remaining acreage is suitable for almost any purpose. Its utility becomes more apparent when it is known that the property is in the heart of Michigan's fruit belt and a few hours by rail from Chicago and Detroit.

Lake Cora itself is a sandy-bottomed, spring-fed body of clear water which can be utilized for aquatic sports in the summer and for ice-boating and skating in winter. It is now well stocked with fish and, since it empties into no appreciable stream, it is possible always to keep the lake well stocked with game fish.

Also, of course, it presents an admirable opportunity for a hotel that could be utilized all the year—should a progressive proprietor desire to make it attractive from a winter sports point of view for his guests. Summer takes care of itself, for the property is swept by cooling breezes and has all the advantages that can be offered by any Michigan resort.

MEN, UNCLE SAM HAS A SPOT FOR YOUR VACATION

Uncle Sam will open up a couple of summer resorts beginning July 15 and 21, one at Fort Sheridan, the other at Camp Grant in Rockford, Ill.

At Fort Sheridan 10,000 ex-service men taking vocational training in Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin have been invited to be Uncle Sam's guests for two weeks.

At Camp Grant a call has been sent out for 1,200 men between the ages of 16 and 35 in Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin to attend the citizens' military training camp. July 21 is the date for this camp.

Army Drill at Camp Grant.

At Fort Sheridan the vacation will be all play and no work, while at Camp Grant the course has been planned especially for men who have had little or no previous military training, to qualify them for enrollment in the organized reserve and to encourage them to enlist in the national guard.

Business and professional men are invited to the Camp Grant training camp. This course is not to be confused, it is explained, with the reserve officers' training camp. College students only are eligible to the latter.

Application blanks for admission to Camp Grant will be obtainable soon at the Military Training Camps association, 5 South Wabash avenue. Charles B. Pike is chairman of the governing committee. The course is for four weeks.

All Play at Fort Sheridan.

Letters have already been sent to 6,000 ex-service men inviting them to the Fort Sheridan camp. The camp will close Sept. 15. Plans are being made to care for the men in groups of 400 or 500, and the total capacity of the camp at one time will be about 5,000. Each ex-soldier will have to pay a nominal sum of $15.

The best caterers in the country have been engaged to arrange the menus. No mess call, the vacationist reporting for his meal when he wishes it. Baseball diamonds, tennis courts, and golf links have been arranged for the ex-soldiers.

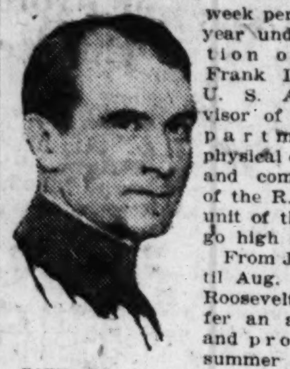
Charles W. Sylvester, district vocational officer for the 6th army corps area, is in charge of the work.

BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw a Check on It for the Unfortunate.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

Camp Roosevelt, at Muskegon, Mich., will open on July 3 for the first two week period of its year under direction of Capt. Frank L. Beals, U. S. A., supervisor of the department of physical education and commandant of the R. O. T. C. unit of the Chicago high schools.



CAPT. FRANK L. BEALS, U. S. A.

From July 3 until Aug. 27 Camp Roosevelt will offer an attractive and profitable summer to boys, wholesome pleasure with proper associations, and a healthful moral atmosphere.

The cost of sending a boy to Camp Roosevelt for two weeks is $16, plus a registration fee of $2, besides the round trip boat fare of $4.50. Among those who have pledged themselves to send boys this summer are John F. Gilchrist, Col. Frank R. Schwengel, Capt. Edward A. Evers, A. J. Benson, J. R. Kline, Earl L. Thornton, B. E. Sunny and C. W. Gillett. Summer high school courses at a tuition charge of $12 are maintained at the camp during the mornings.

HE KEEPS $350 2 MINUTES, THEN ROBBERS GET IT

At 7:45 o'clock yesterday morning William Walasicz, 1616 Wabansia avenue, received $350 from Stanislaw Ginske in payment for his share of the saloon which they had owned together at 4346 South Ashland avenue.

At 7:47 o'clock two armed men walked into the saloon and took the $350 from Walasicz and $30 from Ginske.

The police are investigating, in the belief that the bandits may have known of the proposed sale by Walasicz.

Circus Will Give Its Last Performance Here Tonight

After tonight's performance the Sells-Floto circus will fold its tents like the Arabs—but the departure won't be silent. With forty-five railway cars to be loaded with equipage and animal cages and 1,060 persons to be accounted for, there is bound to be quite a little noise. The circus will open in St. Louis on Tuesday.

BOYS ARE CITY'S GREATEST ASSET, JUDGE DECLARES

Boys are the greatest "undeveloped resource in the world," according to Judge Victor P. Arnold, chairman of all the committees for Boys' week, which will be held in Chicago May 6 to 13. Judge Arnold spoke yesterday at the Hotel Sherman before a conference on the boy problem and its relation to crime.

"The most priceless asset of our community is its boys," he said. "Yet it will astound people to know that we are making criminals out of a good percentage of them. Much of this can be traced to the parents, who do not seem to care where the youngsters spend their evenings. Parents should take more interest in their children's whereabouts.

"An investment of time, interest, care, and sympathy in boys is one of the best investments in the world."

74; ENDS LIFE BY HANGING.

After throwing a rope over the top of a door and tying it to the knob on the other side, Michael Dobrosielski, 74 years old, put a noose around his neck and stepping off a chair, committed suicide by hanging in his home, 210 West 113th street, yesterday.

LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS

I do not want to appear over-enthusiastic but it is a hard matter to put into words the real pleasure this car has given me. I thought I knew everything about it but I must confess that on almost every trip, I discover some nice thing of which I was not previously aware.

H. L. WINTERS
Chicago
March 26, 1921

THE REASON that Lincoln owners are continually enjoying new pleasures and new sensations in riding and in driving, is because of the numerous, diversified, and well-worked-out betterments in the car; and because many of these betterments have opportunity to reveal themselves only as various conditions of travel are met from time to time.

And Lincoln owners will tell you, that no matter what the call may be, whether for speed, for power, or for rapid getaway; whether to overcome the handicaps and discomforts of inferior highways, or to master the mountain range, the Lincoln has a way of doing things that is peculiar to itself, and more pleasing than the way to which motorists have hitherto been accustomed.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

WINNETKA HAS NO MOVIE HOUSE, IT'S TRUE, BUT—

How About All Its Other Attractions?

Winnetka is the seventh suburb in this Sunday series of comments on what the suburbs have to offer the Chicagoan who wants to live in a house, with a garden, and trees, and shrubs and other outdoor things which no flat, Gold Coast or otherwise, can offer. The home owning opportunities of another outlying town will be given in this department shortly.

BY AL CHASE.

[Real Estate Editor of The Tribune.]

In a good many ways Winnetka is about as enterprising and wideawake as well as scenically attractive, as any of Chicago's suburbs. It has a long list of strong points in its favor when the homeseeker, pondering over the question, "where'll I buy or build my house?" begins to think about Winnetka as a possibility.

One of the features which may not be called to the attention of the prospective Winnetkan is its civic pride and its civic pep. The town has grown from 3,168 in 1910 to 6,694 in 1920. It has a comprehensive city plan devised by Edward H. Bennett, city planning advisor of the Chicago Plan commission, to meet the needs of a future maximum growth to a town of 13,000.

What This Civic Pep Means.

A description of this plan was given in this department Dec. 21, 1919. It calls for depression of the Northwestern tracks, zoning, a community center, more parks, and many other important improvements. All this means that if you settle in Winnetka you can figure on living in a town that is looking ahead to continual civic improvement and that your property should continually increase in value.

Winnetka has three grade schools and the New Trier Township High school, also used by Glencoe, Kenilworth, and Wilmette. In addition work is now under way on a new $350,000 grade school, funds for which were raised by private subscription. It will be ready by fall. Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr. and L. B. Kuppenheimer gave liberal amounts to it. It stands on a twelve acre tract.

The town has what it claims no other community of its size can boast, an eighteen hole municipal golf course on eighty acres of park overlooking the Skokie. At the southern part of town is the Indian Hill Golf club. There are two municipal beaches.

Boasts vs. Shudders.

And in telling of Winnetka's amusement facilities we mustn't overlook something which some residents boast of and others shudder over. Winnetka has no movie! If you're a film fan and can't live without seeing Mrs. Mary Pickford Fairbanks or Mr. Chaplin occasionally, you'll have to visit neighboring towns to keep alive.

According to Village Manager H. L. Woolhiser there have been fifty-three building permits taken out so far this month, twenty-eight of which were for residences. He estimates there are fifty houses now being built with many more contemplated.

Most of the building is scattered and by individuals, in some cases for sale, but in a majority for own use. Frederick A. Cooper & Co. of Chicago is the only firm apparently which is building a group of houses. They are erecting seven residences at the southwest corner of Willow street and Sheridan road, to sell at from $25,000 to $30,000.

Lots Scarce.

W. J. Moir, Winnetka specialist for McGuire & Orr, realtors, says that in one section of Winnetka, bounded by Lincoln avenue, Sheridan road, North avenue, and Elm street, there's only one lot for sale, and that is held at $100 a front foot. In other parts of town lots are more plentiful, but are selling fast. He says more houses are for sale in the west Hubbard Woods section than in any other part of town. The prices range from $15,000 to $25,000.

According to Hill & Stone, there are quite a few medium sized new houses for sale at prices between $12,000 and $15,000, with other modern houses not absolutely new at $8,000 to $12,000.

Another firm, Frederick B. Thomas & Co., reports nothing under $10,000 and most of the houses for sale at prices betwen $12,000 and $40,000.

All realtors agree that there's practically nothing in Winnetka for rent, and what few houses are for rent are at almost prohibitive prices.

News of the Architects

Samuel N. Crowen will move his architectural offices on May 1 from the Stock Exchange building to suite 416 in the new Wrigley building. His new phone will be Randolph 3526. Mr. Crowen, who designed the Hotel Somerset and is the owner of it, also has offices in that building.

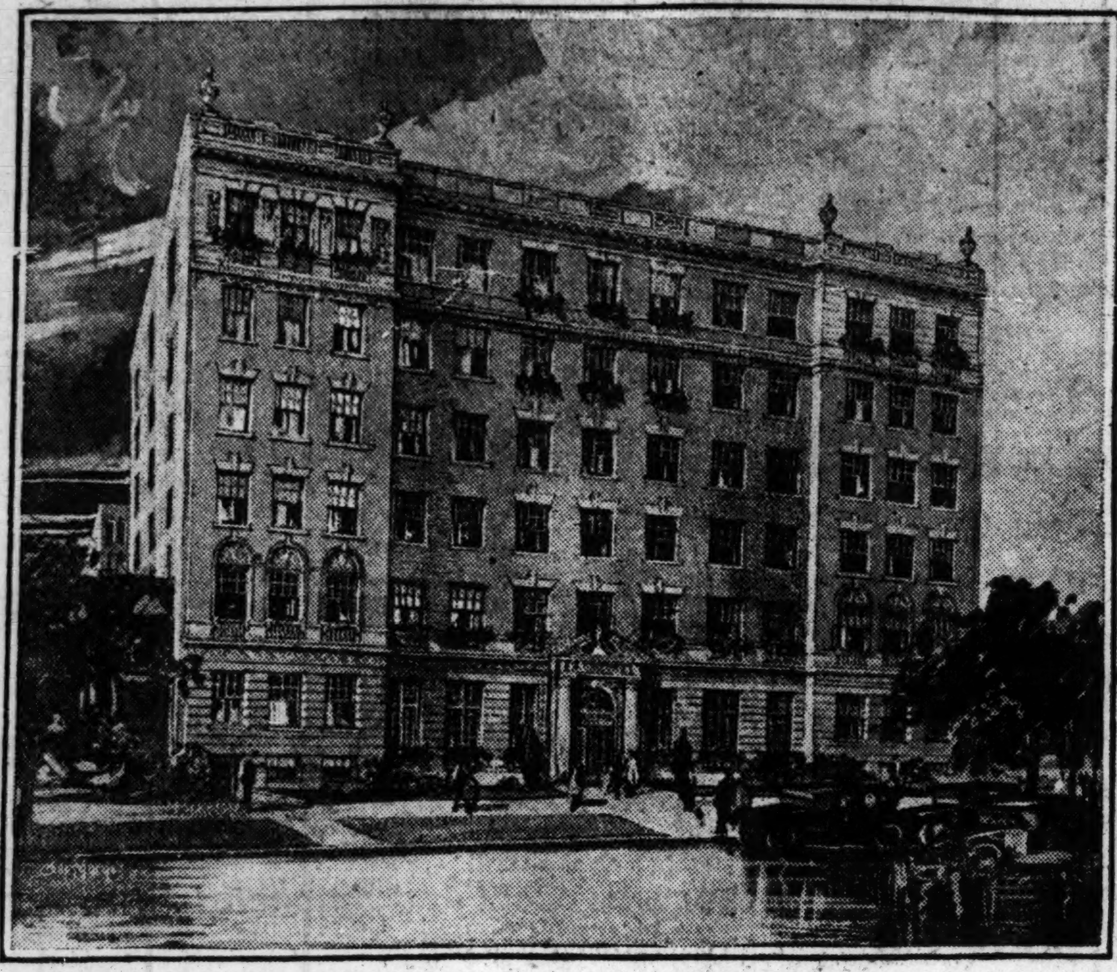
William C. Jones, church architect, has moved from the Stock Exchange building to larger quarters in suite 1521 Association building, 19 South La Salle street.

Architect Paul V. Hyland has moved his offices from 29 South La Salle street to 159 East Ontario street.

Another addition to the Upper Michigan avenue art colony will be Architect Andrew Sandegren, now at 25 North Dearborn street. He will move about May 15 to 116 East Oak street. The three story residence, 20x40, is being remodeled for his offices and in addition there probably will be studios.

A. F. Hussander, formerly architect for the board of education, who resigned recently to resume prviate practice, has opened offices in the Union Bank building, 25 North Dearborn street. His phone is Randolph 2897.

Ralph H. Oliver has again resumed the practice of architecture, with offices at 116 South Dearborn street.



WORK will start May 10 on another million dollar north side residential hotel. Architect John A. Nyden has drawn plans for a six and seven story fireproof structure to be built at 451 Melrose street, just west of Sheridan road, to be called the Melrose Apartment hotel.

There will be sixty apartments of two, three, and four rooms and bath each and a large roof garden for guests. Each suite will have a kitchenette. The hotel will front 87 feet on Melrose street, with a depth of 127 feet. According to Comlossy & Co., who have underwritten a first mortgage bond issue, the property will be valued at completion at $1,080,000. The Melrose Apartment Hotel company, of which F. D. Hayes is president, is the owner. It is expected to be ready about Jan. 1.

NEW NATIONAL BANK IN WOODLAWN TO HAVE $100,000 BUILDING

Plans have been drawn by Architect Thomas R. Bishop for a $100,000 structure at 1328-30 East 63d street, just west of Kenwood avenue, to house the new national bank now being formed in Woodlawn. Officers and directors will be chosen at a stockholders' meeting to be held probably this week. It is expected that Howard H. Wanzer of Sidney Wanzer & Sons will be president.

Fred L. Lorish, manager for the last fifteen years of the Woodlawn office of W. K. Young & Bro., and a long list of other Woodlawn business and professional men are back of the project. The total amount of stock at present subscribed is said to be $100,000 in excess of the total capitalization of $300,000.

National Bank Buys Its Own Home in Ravenswood

Walter D. Rathje, president of the Ravenswood National bank, has purchased from John W. Stewart, treasurer of the Atwood Stewart Vacuum Machine company, for a reported $72,500 subject to $45,000, the property Mr. Stewart bought last week from William W. Pollock for a reported $72,500 subject to $40,000. It is at the northwest corner of Ravenswood and Wilson avenues, and is occupied by the bank. Plans are being made for the remodeling of the building, including part of the former postoffice space, into a modern banking floor, to be the permanent home of the bank. The E. E. Stults Realty company represented all parties.

BUILDING $50,000 FACTORY.

The Automatic Screw Machine Products company is building a $50,000 one story factory, with 17,500 square feet floor space, on a strip of vacant in Homan avenue, extending to St. Louis avenue, between the Illinois Northern tracks and Thirty-first street, purchased from Oscar Baur for $12,000. It will be completed in June.

PLANS BUILDING 1870 BUNGALOWS IN THREE YEARS

Co-operative Idea to Be Used for Homes.

Work is to start at once on the first of a house building program which calls for a minimum of 1,870 five room brick bungalows within three years, with a possibility in case the venture proves the success predicted for it by its backers, to reach several times that total.

Wallace T. Miller is president and organizer of the Mutual Home Building corporation. Its capital is $50,000. Davidson & Weiss are its architects. The Nash-Dowdle company are the contractors.

Here's the Plan.

Here is the plan as outlined by Mr. Miller. Substantial, attractive bungalows, with face brick on all sides— an unusual feature and a praiseworthy one—with oak floors, a fireplace, asbestos shingles, etc., will be built to cost the buyer $6,500. One must join a unit of 110 members. Each member will pay $10 a week to the corporation for 330 consecutive weeks. There will be no interest on deferred payments. In addition there will be a $3,000 mortgage on which the buyer will pay 6½ per cent. It is claimed the market calue of the house will be considerably over $6,300.

It is planned to build a new home every three weeks for one of the unit members. The first home will be built for that member who has the largest amount of money to his credit at the time assignment is made. Members, of course, can pay more than $10 if they choose.

Got to Own a Lot.

The only capital one needs is to own a lot. It makes no difference in what part of the city it is. This means that there will be no long rows of houses in any one block. Architects Davidson & Weiss have drawn plans of houses for six different exteriors but with the ame interiors. The buyer may select his own brick and choose his own roof color. The lots will be sodded and cement walks put in.

The Madison and Kedzie State bank is guaranteeing both contractor and the tenant that the plan will be carried out as specified. The offices of the Mutual Home Building corporation are in the Standard Oil building, 910 South Michigan avenue.

MERCHANT QUARTET TRIES CO-OPERATIVE PLAN IN HYDE PARK

Four Hyde Park merchants after paying rent for shops at the southeast corner of 53d and Harper for ten years have become their own landlord. A. F. Gardner, who operates one of the best known candy stores on the south side; Michael Kramp, a tailor; Mary F. Delahunty, a milliner, and Ben Hoffman, cigars, comprise the quartet.

They bought the two story building, erected ten years ago, fronting 125 feet on 53d street, from the Hyde Park State bank for a reported $135,000. There are six stores, ten offices and several flats. Charles E. Fox of John A. Carroll & Bro. was broker.

The Hyde Park State bank bought the entire 53d street frontage from Harper to Lake Park avenue, 300 feet, over a year ago from the Phipps estate. It has retained 175 feet for its own use and intends ultimately to erect a monumental bank structure.

Realtor Note

George M. Forman & Co., farm mortgage bankers, have leased the third floor banking space in the Standard Trust and Savings bank building, Monroe and Clark, from May 1 at an annual rental of $18,500. They will spend $15,000 in rearranging the 5,000 square feet of floor space. Fred McGuire was broker in making the lease. The Forman company has been in business in Chicago for thirty-six years and has offices in Boston and Milwaukee.

$100,000 IS PAID FOR ROOSEVELT ROAD DYNES FARM

One of the most attractive farm properties on Roosevelt road, in Du Page county, the country home of Owen W. Dynes, counsel for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, has been sold to Wright Barr of Louisville, Ky., for a reported $100,000 through George G. Newbury & Co. The 272 acre farm is a quarter of a mile west of Du Page county's first forest preserve in South Elmhurst and is on Salt creek. It is on the north side of Roosevelt road. There is a fifteen room brick residence. Mr. Barr will operate it as a dairy and stock farm.

DE LUXE FLATS FOR HYDE PARK

Work has started on what is claimed will be one of the most luxurious apartment houses in the Hyde Park district, at 5122-24 Hyde Park boulevard, overlooking East End park and the lake. It will cost $200,000 and have six flats, of ten rooms and three baths each. Architect Samuel N. Crowen has designed a four story, fireproof building, with apartments on the second, third, and fourth floors and with lobby, reception rooms, etc. on the first floor. The rentals will be $500 monthly. The building will be completed Oct. 1. Walter G. Zoller of the Zoller Coal company is the owner.

Masons Pay $30,000 for Windsor Park Landmark

One of the landmarks of the Windsor Park district, the Jones building at the northeast corner of Coles avenue and 75th street, has been bought by the Windsor Park Masonic lodge No. 836 for $30,000 cash from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, through Frank W. McCabe.

The Masons intend to spend $15,000 in modernizing the building with a new front, remodeled stores and an enlarged lodge hall. The Windsor Park lodge has used this building as its home since it was built years ago when Windsor Park was a suburban town miles outside the city limits. The property is 50x110. Charles Gunnarson represented the lodge in the deal and Harry Harmon was attorney for the Masons.

INDUSTRY SLUMP GIVES FARMERS PLENTY OF HELP

Wages Drop as Young Men Take Rural Jobs.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

A transfusion of hired labor to the farm has been brought about by the unemployment in the industrial centers. For every 100 jobs offered by farmers in the United States for steady experienced help there are now about 100 seekers. Last year the shoe was on the other foot—for every 100 jobs available there were only sixty-nine men in the market.

The agricultural labor situation is easier than it has been in the last three years; last season's shortage has been supplanted by a labor abundance. The figures are those of government bureaus.

Wages on Farm Deflated.

Wages have been deflated. Where the farmer paid $50 to $80 a month last year for hired men, everything, food, shelter, laundry, "found," the rates offered now range from $35 to $50 a month. The figures are those of employment agencies.

Requests Below "Normal."

In volume the requests for men are still below "normal" for this period of year, but the number is growing. In view of the great drop in prices of farm products some experts say the demand is larger than they looked for, particularly as hired men with good jobs have snuggled down into them during the labor slump and the turnover of monthly farm labor the country over is smaller than usual.

It's all regarded as an encouraging sign—business has its eyes turned toward the farming regions. In four or five weeks the call for migratory labor for the harvest fields will begin to diminish unemployment.

N. U. SENIORS ELECT LEADERS TO DIRECT GRADUATING PLANS

MISS DOROTHY KNIGHT.
[J. D. Toloff Photo.]

Northwestern university seniors on Wednesday held an election to pick members of the class who are to take prominent parts in the forthcoming graduating exercises. Miss Mary Clayton was chosen as class statistician and Miss Dorothy Knight as "giver of class gifts."

Dean Roy C. Flickinger also named those entitled to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, the senior honorary society, for excellence in scholarship. The list includes Edna Aiken, Vema Arundale, Helen Bennison, Dorothy Bruniga, Ella Clark, Rowland Hagen, Edna Hansen, Dorothy Harrige, Mrs. Adeline Justice, Paul Miller, Carolyn Nethercot, Edith Sternfield, Stella Thompson, Dorothy Watt, Mary Williamson, Marion McKay, John T. Stark, and Lester L. Templin.

MISS MARY CLAYTON.
[J. D. Toloff Photo.]

Tapping for Deru, the junior honor society, also took place. Among those tapped were Gray Penfield, captain of the 1920 football team; Jess Brown, manager of the junior play, and Bob Pershall, boss of class politics.

WOMAN AUTOIST DRAWS HEAVY FINE.

Mrs. Laura Meyer, 2915 South Vernon avenue, was fined $5 and costs on a charge of disorderly conduct and $100 and costs on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated. On a promise that she wouldn't drive the car again in six months, Judge Morgan suspended the $100 fine.

NEW OBSTACLES DELAY SPEEDWAY ARMY HOSPITAL

Unfinished Work Prevents Opening Till Aug. 1.

Speedway hospital, referred to from time to time in months past as "nearing completion," will open—when a sewage system has been installed, when a substantial roof has been substituted on the main building for the paper covering that now serves, when much plumbing work has been done, when electric current has been provided, and, finally, when the institution has been turned over to the United States public health service.

These obstacles will make it impossible for the hospital to receive patients before July 20, and the opening date probably will be even later, Dr. Mark J. White, United States public health service surgeon, said last night. Dr. White, it has been announced, will be superintendent of the hospital, when the public health service takes it over.

Must Put In Sewers.

"I am not familiar with all the details," said Dr. White, "but I understand the village of Maywood has refused to allow us to connect with its sewage system. This means sewers must be installed here, which will require about two months after ground is broken for the work. And we must have a roof on the main building, which now has a two-ply paper covering, and which leaks. But you had better call the Shank company, builders, for information."

Shank company, 30 North La Salle street, was called. A man who did not disclose his name, but who said he is in charge of sewer problems at Speedway, answered the phone.

Gets No Information.

"The government man representing the supervising architect of the United States treasury department will be here in ten minutes," he said. "I'd like to have you talk with him. He can tell you all about it. I'll ask him to call you."

No call came.

The Speedway hospital, according to Dr. White, will accommodate about 1,000 disabled veterans. There will be a staff of fifty doctors and 160 nurses, he said. More than $5,000,000 already has been spent in the construction of the hospital. The Union League club recently sent a committee to Washington to ask congress to appropriate $250,000 to improve and beautify the desolate surroundings of the Maywood site. This committee received encouragement.

Error in Vote Delays Daylight Time for Aurora

Errors discovered in the count of the vote on the daylight saving proposition at the recent election in Aurora led to the revocation yesterday of the proclamation, which established daylight saving there today. The final decision on the vote will not be made until tomorrow night's meeting of the city council.

WHO WILL GIVE QUART OF BLOOD TO SAVE A LIFE?

Dr. Frank Wright, 5 South Wabash avenue, is seeking a volunteer who will give a quart of blood to save the life of A. C. Plummer of Mexico.

Plummer came here without friends or funds, a victim of stomach ailment. An operation is necessary, but because of his weakened condition it is declared it would be almost fatal to attempt one now.

Plummer formally lived in Texas, but after his wife died he went to Mexico and opened a store. In one of the raids during the revolution his place was burned down. He fled to the hills and there contracted his present illness.

A friend told Dr. Wright of the case. Plummer worked his way here and is now in the Michael Reese hospital. The physician will perform the operation without cost if the necessary blood can be obtained for a transfusion.

From the Man Who Puts His Name on the Tire to the Man Who Puts the Tire on the Car

In the fall and winter just past, the strength and soundness of American business institutions were put to unprecedented test.

Concerns that rode safely and steadily forward, as the commercial barometer dropped, earned a new respect and confidence.

Of these, Firestone is a notable example. It would be hypocritical to deprecate our own pride in Firestone's record or to minimize our gratification in Firestone's present position in the industry.

Such honest satisfaction is only natural. We see today the fulfilling of what Firestone men have worked for.

Firestone's position stands clearly defined in the mind of the tire-using public.

Most Miles per Dollar—the established Firestone standard—is understood and accepted now as never before.

The future is bright for the Firestone dealer because he has earned the car owner's trust.

He has a product of exceptional quality. Back of him is an organization solidly built, possessing adequate resources, long experience and an enviable record for fair dealing.

From the man who puts his name on the tire to the man who puts the tire on your car the whole Firestone organization is equipped and ready to serve the fast multiplying army of Firestone users.

Ten Proven Units

Demand that each and every unit be proven quality in the car you purchase. Don't accept merely one or two, because you can have a car that is of proven quality throughout.

Take the principal units, item by item—Continental Red Seal Motor; Delco Starter and Ignition; Timken Axles; Spicer Universal Joints; Brown-Lipe Transmission; Borg & Beck Clutch; Rayfield Carburetor; Exide Battery; Fedders Radiator—Nickel-Silver; Warner Steering Gear. Check them up side by side with those in any automobile.

The result will establish your supreme confidence in the intrinsic value of this car and make its ownership a lasting pleasure.

The reason:—Not one or two, but every feature, has been created, tested and proved by specialists of wide experience and exact knowledge. The skill of the world has been selected and scientifically combined in this car by Moon engineers. They have infused it with the same proven quality which for sixteen years has marked the record of Moon cars.

Top-Most Value

Doubtless nothing could have been done to assure the Dort a firmer grip upon the preference of Chicago people than the introduction of the beautiful new body styles.

It can be said in all truth that no car of like price is of finer mechanical quality.

And now, with these charming bodies, the family of Dort cars provides a fitting union of mechanical excellence and delightfully graceful appearance.

The chassis is, as you know, the same fine Dort chassis whose staunch worth has been so undeniably demonstrated in the daily service of 100,000 users.

All those sound practical virtues that have so brilliantly distinguished the Dort are now combined with an equally distinguished body style.

It is just a plain statement of fact when we say that today the Dort is the top-most motor car value at the price.

THE NEWS OF WARS and politics and world events is not greater in importance than the NEWS OF MERCHANDISE printed by THE TRIBUNE in its advertising columns every morning.

U. S. SHADES BILL OF ST. PAUL ROAD OVER $7,740,000

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad received $7,740,642 less than it anticipated from the government for use of its property during the period of federal operation, according to the annual report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1920. To set its accounts straight, the company was obliged to charge this sum off its accumulated surplus, inasmuch as the income anticipated, but not received, had previously been included in the balance sheet.

After allowing for the net income for 1920, the charge against surplus, owing to disappointing payment from the government and other adjustments, the company had a total profit and loss surplus of $38,376,166 on Dec. 31 last, compared with $42,380,242 on Dec. 31, 1919.

Earns 3¾% on Preferred.

The joint report of the company's own operations and receipts from the government shows a surplus of $4,366,070, which is equal to 3.76 per cent on its $116,474,900 preferred stock. For 1919 the company reported net income equal to 6.7 per cent on its preferred stock, but this included anticipated payments from the government that were not received. On the basis of its own operations, unaided by the government, the road reports a deficit of $8,451,167.

As part of the agreement, with the federal administration, the cost of all additions and betterments made to the road by the government, exclusive of equipment purchased, was funded by the government accepting from the company its note for $20,000,000, due March 1, 1930, at 6 per cent interest per annum.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The week-end reports of the mercantile agencies are more cheerful and recognition is given to increasing steadiness in prices and better business. Dun's review says after long liquidation more stability has developed in some markets, with a definite gain in business, but improvement is not general, although basic conditions are gradually strengthening. Bradstreet's says jobbing and wholesale trade in the north and west is slightly improved, that the mail order trade seems to be better than in recent months, but the poorest trade reports come from the south and parts of the southwest.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending April 20 by 208 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh Federal Reserve district aggregate $943,106,000, compared with $871,505,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by twenty-three clearing houses amounted to $940,895,000, compared with $1,230,370,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Revival in the automobile industry continues. The Haynes Automobile company is producing one-third more cars than ever before and is employing 16 per cent more men, operating day and night shifts in some departments. The Willys-Overland company plans to increase its working force about 30 per cent and its output about 50 per cent.

The United States Steel corporation directors will meet after the market closes Tuesday for dividend purposes and to approve the report for the quarter ended March 31. Net earnings in the three months are estimated at approximately $29,500,000, or sufficient to cover the regular dividends.

The National Conduit and Cable company's special stockholders' meeting has been adjourned for lack of quorum to May 10. Stockholders were asked to take action on a plan for the purchase and retirement of the company's bonds, and, failing this, to approve liquidation of assets.

Increases in prices for two grades of crude oil in the gulf coast field were announced yesterday. The Graysburg Oil company has advanced the price in the Somerset [Texas] region from $1.60 to $1.75 a barrel. The Caroline Oil and Refining company has raised the price for crude in the Nacogdoches district from $2.50 to $3.50 a barrel at the plant. The latter oil is nearly a natural lubricant.

The Tobacco Products company has declared the usual quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent on the common stock, payable in scrip on May 16 to stock of record May 2.

The Calumet-Arizona Mining company has suspended production and the furnaces are idle. Work is now limited to development, with the force reduced to 550 men. Ore from development, 15,000 tons monthly, will be stored. The New Cornelia company's output has been reduced to 1,200,000 pounds monthly, the lowest possible operating basis, and the force cut to 350 men.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Cotton goods markets were quiet, but prices generally remained firm. The woolen goods future has chiefly the clothing wage situation with which to deal. Raw silk was easier, due to arrival of large shipments. Silk fabrics were strong. Burlaps remained quiet.

SUGAR MARKETS.

NEW YORK, April 23.—SUGAR—Raw Porto Ricos, 5.02c for centrifugal, a decline of ¼c. Cubans were unchanged at 4⅝c cost and freight, equal to 5.64c for centrifugal. Refined, unchanged at 7.20@7.50c for fine granulated. Futures closed unchanged to 1 point net lower. May closed at 3.96c; July, 4.06c, and September, 4.08c.

BOARD MEMBERSHIPS LOWER.

Board of Trade memberships are off $550 of late. One sold yesterday at $6,500 and one at $6,450 net to the buyer.

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, April 23.—Cotton advanced and closed well toward the high point, with gains of 3@17 points, nearby deliveries leading. A good trade was on, with Wall street shorts the best buyers. Foreign interests were also taking hold and the news from abroad was more encouraging. Prices follow:

Money-Making Investments

Do you wish to invest your money in enterprises whose records give them a position of proven leadership? Such securities are most dependable because the country depends upon them to furnish those necessities essential to the standards of civilized life. Their successful continuance is vital to the life of the nation.

Your money so invested enables you to participate directly in the profits of those giant companies which are directed by the choicest brains and have the strongest capital backing. You as a stockholder are virtually a partner with the commercial and financial genius of the nation. The advantages to be gained consist in the stability as to earning power, certainty as to income yield and possibilities for profit.

While wages and materials are rapidly declining in price, prime investments can still be made so as to give you a return of thirty to fifty per cent more than procurable at normal market values. Authorities are agreed that this condition will not exist for long. Invest today, therefore, and enjoy the profits to be made as market values advance over present low levels.

Value of Statistical Information

Facts gathered from the most authoritative sources, analyzed carefully by one of the country's foremost statisticians, describing in fullest detail the following named corporations, have been collected by our Statistical Department in the preparation of a new booklet of unusual interest. These facts include such important items as earnings statements, financial status, analysis of assets, personnel of management, outlook for the future, etc., etc. Get this booklet, analyze these facts, and then decide which security has for you the greatest appeal, or more closely fits your requirements. GRAIN MARKETS UNEVEN, HIGHER; TONE IS BETTER

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain markets had a better tone and prices moved iregularly higher, although in the evening up of trade at the last recessions were made from the top prices, due to profit taking after the short interest had been well reduced. At the close wheat was practically the same as on Friday; corn was ¼@⅝c higher, with May showing the most strength; oats were ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower; rye was ¾c higher to ½c lower; barley unchanged to ½c higher.

The provision trade was unusually active for Saturday, with the finish 2½c higher on lard, while ribs led with gains of 15@17½c and pork with 25c advance for the day.

Irregularity, with a firming up tendency, featured the grain markets during the week, with the finish 3c higher on May wheat and July 1¼c lower. Gains in corn were 2@3⅛c and oats ½@2⅛c, May leading in both grains. May rye gained 1⅝c and the distanct futures lost ⅛@¼c. Barley is up 1½c, pork 25@35c higher, lard 32½@35c lower, and short ribs 7½c higher to 2½c lower, the latter on July, as compared with a week ago.

Tariff Delay Big Wheat Factor.

The most important factor in the wheat trade was the news from Washington reporting a delay in the senate's action on the emergency tariff bill. As traders were mostly long at Chicago and short in Winnipeg, there was buying in the latter market to cover advanced prices at one time, while the trading here made a good break.

With present market conditions enactment of the tariff bill would be without effect, as No. 1 northern wheat in Winnipeg is 55c more than Chicago May and 63c more than Minneapolis May. Under such conditions there would be no profit in bringing in the Canadian grain. There were light offerings of cash wheat in all markets, with a fair milling demand and a little export buying.

Selling of May wheat and buying of July was an important feature, the largest holders selling May on the bulge at 2@2¼c over July. Local traders were active on both sides and at the last longs were anxious sellers.

Details of the Kansas crop report show losses of 15 to 51 per cent in acreage in half a dozen of the largest counties, where the acreage ranges from 110,000 to 217,000. There were reports of receding spring wheat in the northwest. Australia shipped 4,528,000 bu for the week and India 112,000 bu.

Corn Trading Is Active.

A considerable part of the trading in corn was in buying May and selling July and in buying May and July by several of the large commission houses, while selling was largely local. Cash corn is relatively 10c higher as compared with May than a week ago, as discounts have narrowed, and the May worked nearer to July.

It was largely a changing market in oats, elevator people buying the May and selling July at 1⅛c to 1¼c difference. Receipts are running larger, but below the average for this season.

Spreaders and shorts were active in rye, the latter taking May, and there was buying of May and selling of July at 25c difference.

Short ribs were actively traded in and made the best advance, offerings being light and cash trade better. The close was around the top. Packers and shorts were active buyers. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 841,000 hogs, or 148,000 more than last year. Shipments of lard and meats for the week showed a good increase. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

While there were intimations of export sales of wheat at the seaboard only 64,000 bu could be confirmed as sold. Foreign demand on the whole was quiet.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 10,000 bu wheat, 25,000 bu corn and 75,000 bu oats. Sales of 400,000 bu oats were made to go to store.

Chicago handlers sold 270,000 bu corn to seaboard exporters and charters were for 200,000 bu at 2c to Buffalo.

Premiums on hard winter wheat at Chicago were 1½@2c lower with No. 1 hard sold at 15c over the May. Offerings were not large, but demand was rather slow. Receipts 34 cars. Outside markets were unsettled with St. Louis unchanged, Kansas City unchanged to 1c lower and Omaha 3c higher, the latter as compared with Thursday.

Offerings of cash corn were readily absorbed with prices ½c higher. No. 2 yellow sold at 1c over; No. 3 yellow ½@1½c and No. 3 white at 1@1½c under May. Receipts 115 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 2½c higher.

Demand for cash oats was fair with prices unchanged. No. 2 white sold at 1@1¼c over May. Receipts 81 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Grain traders believe that, should prices hold around the present level for a short time, it will create a better feeling throughout the country, and bring farmers and others into a different state of mind. All that is needed is more confidence. Values are regarded as low enough, and it would be better for all if they were somewhat higher. Local traders who loaded up earlier in the day, and did not sell out on the bulge, were the principal sellers at the close, creating weakness in all grains.

Those inclined to be bearish on grains regard the delay in the senate's action on the emergency bill as a point in their favor. There has been active covering by the short interest, with the larges ttraders reducing their lines.

It is understood there are not more than 20,000 bu of contract wheat in store here in public houses, against 43,000 bu a week ago. A good reduction is expected in stocks of corn should the boats that load it Saturday get away. There were shipments of 553,000 bu corn to Buffalo and 110,000 bu to Canadian ports last week; also 297,000 bu oats, 100,000 bu wheat, and 30,000 bu rye by lake from Chicago.

"Low temperatures have set back the new crop for wheat so that it will not be available for another ninety days," said Thomson McKinnon. "During this period we might easily develop a particularly tight situation to cash wheat. The market is beginning to recognize this condition and it is not likely to show maintained weakness at any time."

"It does not look as though a tariff were needed to keep Canadian wheat out of this country now," wired E. F. Leland & Co.'s Minneapolis office. "No. 1 Northern at Winnipeg sold today at 55½c over Chicago May and 63c over Minneapolis May. Any one who sells May on account of the tariff bill not going through is apt to get in a tight place."

Reseeding of oats is progressing rapidly in parts of Iowa, but reports from central Illinois indicate many farmers probably will not reseed on account of the low price of the grain.

Two cargoes of Argentine corn sold at Buenos Aires for May orders at equal to $1.01½ per bu, with July and August loadings at 81¾c.

The French April 1 crop report made the condition of winter wheat 72, against 76 last year and 66 in 1919. The rye condition was 73 against 77 last year, and oats were 72 against 78 last year.

New York said there was no evidence of the Greek government doing business in grain Saturday.

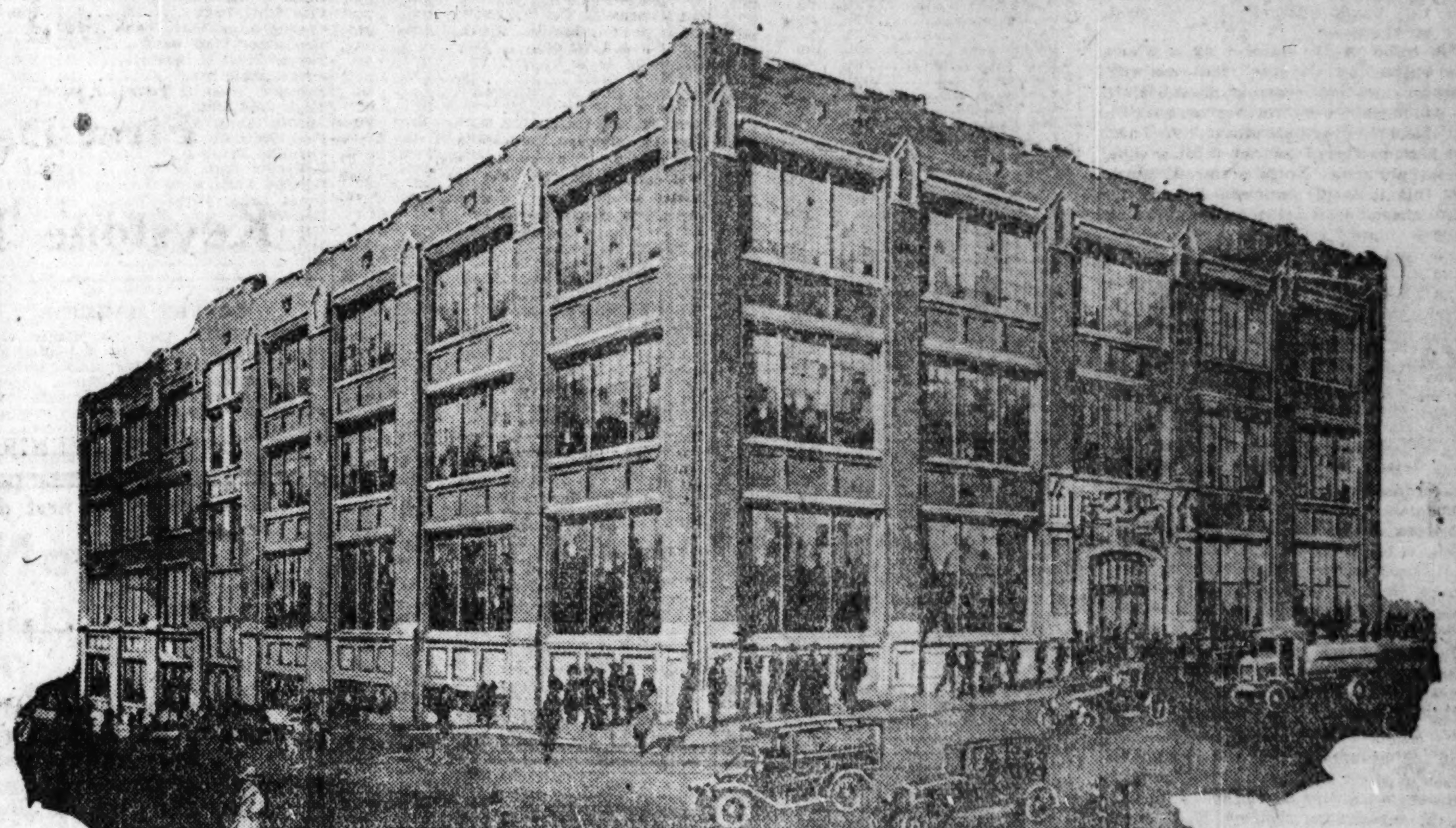
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT POSTOFFICE



INCOME ASSURED THROUGH TWENTY-YEAR LEASE TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

THE building has been leased to the United States Government for twenty years at a yearly rental of $120,775, or $2,415,500 for the term. The lease does not contain a cancellation clause—hence the earnings, which for the term are sufficient to pay the entire bond issue over three times, are assured for twenty years.

Largest in St. Paul

THIS will be the largest postoffice station in St. Paul, and will be three stories and basement in height. It will be constructed of steel, terra cotta and brick. Total value of security is over $1,000,000, and as the bonds are retired rapidly each year, the margin of security will be constantly increased.

Exceptional Location

THE building will be located on the southwest corner of Third and Sibley Streets, just across the street from St. Paul's new $12,000,000 Union Depot, with which it will be connected by a tunnel. This is in the heart of the city, surrounded by all the business activities, and is unquestionably one of the choicest locations in the city.

Denominations, $100, $500 and $1,000. Maturities, two to ten years.
Normal Federal Income Tax of 4% on income of bonds paid by mortgagors.

TO THOSE WHO WERE DISAPPOINTED by not obtaining bonds of similar issues offered by us, NOW is your opportunity to obtain an equally attractive investment. The demand for these bonds, as in previous issues, will undoubtedly be more than we can supply. So let us have your order or reservation at once. Call direct at the Bank, or, if this is not convenient, telephone, write or wire.

A Testimonial to the High Character of the American Bond & Mortgage Building

The character of a building may be principally determined by the service it renders its tenants, resulting in 100 per cent occupancy.

There could be no higher recommendation of the character and superior service of any office building than has been paid this building by virtue of the fact that there are but two offices which are not under lease for the coming year.

Located in the heart of the loop district, readily accessible to railroad stations, elevated and surface lines and affording every convenience, the American Bond & Mortgage Building offers location, service and convenience of appointments unsurpassed by any building in the loop district.

Splendid Opportunity for a Young Executive

THE responsibility is the complete executive control of the administrative offices of an old, established manufacturing concern—progressive, however—in fact, recently much discussed for unprecedented achievements in its field.

The man desired is from twenty-seven to thirty-five years old—capable, energetic, with initiative and constructive ideas. He must be ready to invest from twenty-five to one hundred thousand dollars in the business—for it is a policy of this highly successful organization to require its members to be financially interested in proportion to the responsibilities of their respective offices.

The position now open offers incalculable opportunities to one capable of administering its duties successfully.

The position discussed above is with a client of the Victor C. Breytspraak Co., Advertising Agency. Particulars may be secured by correspondence with that company's offices at 109 North Dearborn St.

NEWS OF MERCHANDISE is vitally important to every woman. It enables her to save money and live better. Chicago women insist on THE TRIBUNE because it has so much exclusive News of Merchandise — advertisements that other papers do not carry.

The New York Times.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—The rise in prices which began on Friday and the active business which accompanied it were continued today on the stock exchange. During the two hour trading advances ranging from 1 to 4 points occurred in a fairly long list of shares. Transactions were larger than any full day's business in the first half of the week.

The trend of the market as a whole was shown by the fact that railway shares, which had scarcely moved while the industrials were recovering on Friday, made noteworthy gains today. Great Northern preferred advanced 3⅛ points, Northern Pacific, Norfolk and Western, and Union Pacific between 2 and 2½, while a number of other issues gained a point or more.

Industrials Also Advance.

Among the industrials advances of 3 points or more in American Woolen, American Linseed, and Baldwin Locomotive were noteworthy. Mexican Petroleum advanced 2¾, while U. S. Steel and Pan-American gained over a point. Prices showed considerable fluctuation and some irregularity, as profit taking was interspersed with further short covering. Oils continued to be leaders. Numerous small lot orders were in evidence.

Compared with the lowest prices of the week, a considerable number of stocks had scored recovery of 6 points or more at the close of the week, the gain, as compared with the preceding week's close running from 2 to 9 points in active industrial shares. The bond market's changes for the week were extremely irregular, with declines perhaps outnumbering advances.

Sterling Hits Year's High.

On the assumption that the advance in Friday's stock market had to do with Germany's showing of her desire to settle the reparations problem, that day's inactivity in European exchange had been puzzling. Today, however, the sterling market became exceptionally strong, rising 2⅛c to $3.94½. The highest previous rate this year was $3.92¾. Today's rate is above that of any day since the 12th of last July.

The strength of sterling was repeated in French and Italian exchange. The course of these markets would be highly interesting if, as is probable, the English coal strike is quickly settled and if Germany should yield the essential requisitions of the indemnity.

REAL ESTATE SERIAL GOLD BONDS

Normal Federal Income Tax up to 4% Paid by Borrower

We summarize herewith the principal features of this unparalleled investment, from a letter from Mr. Marcus Loew, President of the borrowing corporation:

Security The bonds will be secured by an absolute closed first mortgage on the above two theatres now under construction, and by the land at Broadway and 83rd St., New York City, owned in fee simple and the land at Broad and New Sts., Newark, part of which is owned in fee and the balance covered by a highly favorable sixty-three year lease. All theatre seats, drapes, carpets and theatre equipment of both properties are also pledged as security.

In addition prompt payment of both principal and interest is unconditionally guaranteed by with gross assets of over $40,000,000, net assets of over $27,000,000 and net earnings of over 200% of entire bond issue.

Buildings Each building will be fireproof and thoroughly modern in every respect, will include a theatre seating about 2700 people—and in addition will contain four stores and two floors of offices.

Valuation and Income The combined properties are valued at $3,175,000, or nearly twice the amount of the bond issue. The net income is estimated at $532,000, or about three and one-half times the greatest annual interest charge on the entire bond issue.

Borrower Loew's Incorporated owns all the stock of the New-Broad Company, which in turn owns the Broadway and Eighty-Third Street Theatre in New York City; and the Broad and New Street Theatre, Newark, N. J. Loew's Incorporated owns and controls over a hundred theatres, including those now in course of construction, throughout the United States and Canada, having a total daily average attendance of about 300,000 people, or an annual attendance of approximately 100,000,000 persons.

COUNTRY'S BANKS CONTINUE TO GAIN STRENGTH

BY O. A. MATHER.

Further substantial improvement in the banking condition of the country is shown by the weekly statements of the federal reserve system. The reserve position now is the strongest since the first week in September, 1918. The recent steady improvement of the reserve system as a whole, and no reason now is apparent why it should not continue, is good ground for the expectation that by summer such a strong position will be reached that the question of reducing rediscount rates again will be a proper subject of discussion.

The current improvement is the result of a further gain in gold and another decline in federal reserve note circulation. The gold reserve of the system now is $220,000,000 greater than at the end of 1919, while note circulation is $548,231,000 below the high level of Dec. 23, 1920. Between Dec. 23, 1919, and April 22, 1920, such circulation increased $10,-061,000.

Twelve Banks Show Gains.

The consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks shows an increase in gold reserves of $11,192,000, while total reserves increased $7,727,000. Federal reserve note circulation receded $11,627,000. Loans expanded $9,302,000, those on government obligations increasing $13,479,000, but those on commercial paper declining $4,177,000. Bills purchased receded $15,130,000, so that total bills on hand declined $5,828,000. Treasury certificates declined $6,997,000, so that total earning assets receded $13,048,000. The member banks reduced their reserve account $36,645,000. Total deposits declined $5,592,000, although government deposits increased $36,366,000.

The ratio of total reserves to net deposits and federal reserve note liabilities combined rose to 54.1 from 53.7 per cent the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, rose to 65.8 from 65.2 per cent.

New York Gold Increases.

The statement of the New York federal reserve bank also shows improvement. Gold reserves increased $8,721,000, largely as the result of foreign imports. Loans declined $8,425,000, those on government obligations increasing $8,117,000, but those on commercial paper declining $16,542,000. Bills bought receded $8,764,-000, so that total bills declined $17,188,000. Total earning assets receded $11,513,000. The member banks reduced their reserve account $22,300,000. Total deposits receded $9,631,000 and federal reserve note circulation declined $6,102,000.

The ratio of total reserves to net deposits and federal reserve note liabilities combined rose to 53.9 from 53.2 per cent in the preceding week. With the exception of April 1, when the ratio was 54.7, the present percentage is the highest since June, 1919.

Chicago Less Favorable.

The statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank shows a slightly less favorable reserve position. Gold reserves receded $4,286,000, and total reserves declined $3,854,000. Loans expanded $4,-499,000, those on government obligations and those on commercial paper increasing $3,017,000 and $1,482,000 respectively. Bills bought declined $960,000, so that total bills increased $3,539,000. Total earning assets expanded $3,602,000. The member banks reduced their reserve account $4,710,000.

Total deposits expanded $2,403,000, due entirely to an increase in government deposits of $6,327,000. Federal reserve note circulation increased $254,000. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined declined to 48 from 48.7 per cent in the preceding week.

Clearing Reserve Declines.

The statement of the New York clearing house banks makes rather an indifferent showing. The excess reserve declined $6,847,860, now standing at $9,590,-320. This recession was due to the fact that the member banks reduced their reserve account at the federal reserve bank by $12,769,000, while loans declined more than did deposits. The aggregate reserve receded $12,247,000. Loans declined $68,630,000. Net demand deposits receded $42,558,000, while time deposits increased $2,964,000. Government deposits declined $43,473,000. The figures follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

The condition of winter wheat is "excellent" in most states, according to the weekly domestic crop review of the bureau of crop estimates. Some damage from recent cold weather was reported in the Atlantic states from New Jersey to Virginia and some fields in eastern Kansas were said to be showing yellow. Spring wheat seeding was said to be practically completed in South Dakota and parts of Utah and Wisconsin. Some hay land in Idaho is being seeded to spring wheat. Harvesting of fall sown oats has begun in the far south and the condition of the crop was reported generally favorable. Planting of corn was said to have made progress as far up the Atlantic coast as North Carolina and in Oklahoma, southern Missouri, southern Illinois, and southeastern Kansas.

Additional market and financial news will be found on page 26, part 10.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The weekly review of F. M. Zeiler & Co. says:

"Local unlisted securities market continues irregular, price changes being within a narrow range. Butler Brothers declined fractionally to 33⅝ bid, 34 asked, ex dividend; while the demand for Kellogg Switchboard and Supply improved somewhat, stock being wanted at 37 with offerings at 38. Northwestern Yeast continued in demand at 290 bid. Creamery Package was steady at 24½ to 26½. Gossard Corset was in supply at 36, while Wahl preferred was steady at 86 to 88. Consumers preferred was stronger, bid price improving to 77 and offerings at 79. Moline Plow preferred was less active at 29 to 32.

"Motor stocks were a trifle more active, with little change in prices. Reo was steady at 21¼ to 21⅝ and Packard slightly lower at 10 to 10½. Paige-Detroit was traded in around 22. Continental at 6⅛ to 6⅜ was unchanged. McCord common lost a fraction, being offered at 10½, with bids of 10. Rubber stocks were generally higher. Firestone common being in demand at 82, with offerings at 86, while the preferred was wanted at 76. Portage, after selling at 21, was wanted at this figure, with offerings at 28. Victor also continued in demand at 20, with offerings at 25. Goodyear issues were an exception, the common losing a point, closing at 11¼ and the preferred at 36¼ to 36⅝.

"In the local bond market the traction issues continued to lead in volume of trade, all issues holding their substantial advances of the previous week, Chicago Railway 5s being very active at 66 to 66½ and the Chicago City Railway 5s at 66⅝ to 67½. The Chicago Railway Series "A" advanced another two points to 47 bid, 49 asked, while the "B's" improved to 33 to 35. Commonwealth Edison 5s were more active, improving fractionally to 84⅞ bid, with offerings at 85¼. Chicago Telephone 5s, however, were unchanged at 93½ to 94½. A good inquiry existed for Peoples Gas 5s at 71½, with offerings at 72¼. Local elevated bonds were unchanged, with the exception of Metropolitan Extension 4s, which were up to 44 to 46.

"There was little change in the Packing house issues, although Armour 7s were slightly better at 96½ to 96⅝. Swift 7s were unchanged at 96¼ to 96⅝, while Cudahy 7s declined fractionally to 98⅝ to 99. Wilson Convertible 6s were affected by the new additional offering of the first 6s, declining to 82½ to 84. The new offering of Goodyear Tire and Rubber 8s of 1941 was well received and a good market developed at 98⅝ bid, 99⅝ asked. Of the miscellaneous issues Sinclair Consolidated Oil 7½s declined to low sales of 91⅝, but regained its loss in closing at 92¼ to 92⅝."

The Unprovided Widow—Slaving for the Essentials of Existence

Safe Bonds—an Invaluable Help to the Mother—the Greatest Comfort of the Widow

Bonds Make Every Woman Happier, More Fortunate

EVERY WOMAN would be a bond buyer—every woman would insist on her husband buying bonds for her protection—if she could only realize what it means to a woman to have a dependable income from safe and sound first mortgage gold bonds.

When untimely disability, long illness or death cuts her main source of income, deprives her of support and brings her and her children face to face with the cold world, the sure and regular income from bonds is an inexpressible comfort, a blessing beyond words or measure. It is often life itself to her and hers.

The unmarried woman—the business woman—finds the extra income from bonds a source of independence, pleasure and delightful little luxuries. This income tides her over periods of unemployment, gives her a safe footing, enables her to avail herself of opportunities for profitable study, recreation and travel, and creates that sense of freedom from irksome necessity and fear of the future which goes a long way toward making her happy. Her bond income is dependable.

You—Every Woman—Should Buy Bonds

Never imagine that bonds are only for the wealthy. Too many women do this. Teachers, stenographers, bookkeepers, nurses, and clerks, professional women and every woman who handles money can buy bonds on the H. O. STONE & CO. plan.

Let us show you how every dollar you save will be doubled and tripled in a few years through our Bond Purchase Plan. Investing $10 a month for 10 years will give you $1,640; $25 a month, $4,101; $100 a month, $16,404. We suggest that you call at our office and let us recommend a special plan for you, based on thirty-four years' experience in advising investments for men and women in all stations of life. If you cannot do this, mail this coupon, phone or write for Circular T-424.

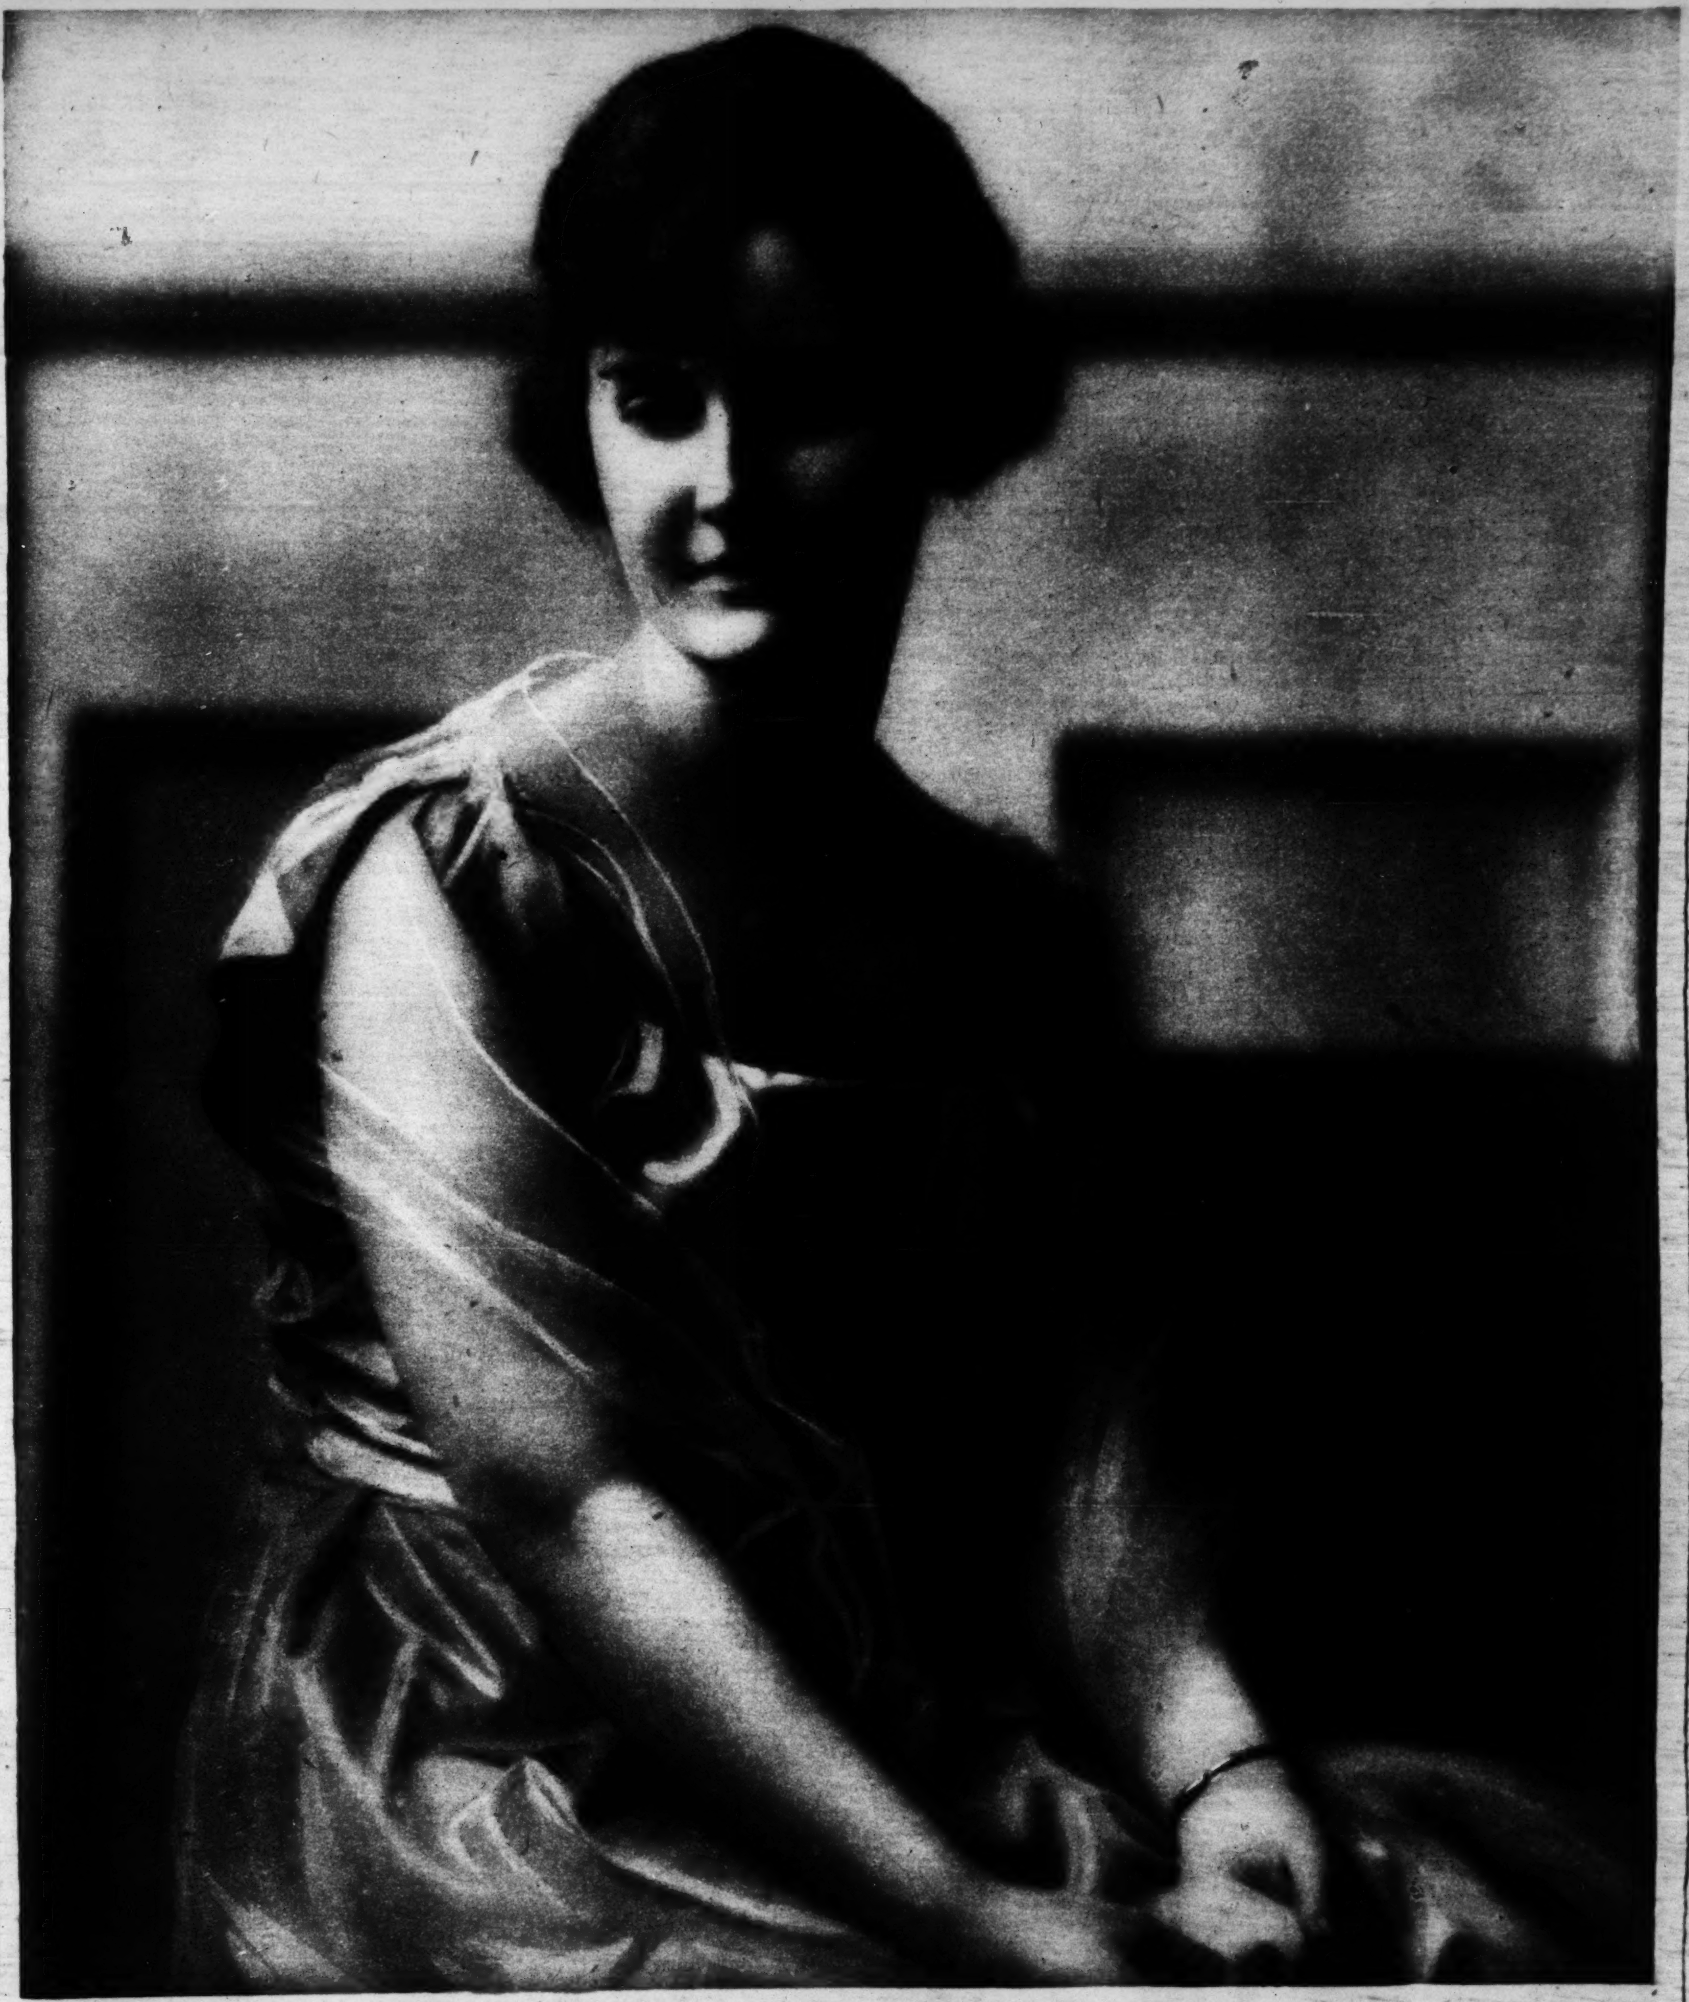
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 24, 1921

MICHIGAN'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRL



SHE WINS $1,000 IN THE TRIBUNE'S $20,200 BEAUTY CONTEST—Miss Alice L. Albaugh of 612 E. Mansion street, Marshall, Mich., awarded the first prize for her state in the competition to determine who are the loveliest girls in the central west. Miss Albaugh is a stenographer. The judges, Pauline Palmer, J. Wellington Reynolds, and Albin Polasek, three widely known artists, describe the qualities in her photograph which influenced their decision as a graceful, distinguished style, poise, symmetry, carriage, pure feminine personality, a certain Madonna-like dignity, sweetness of expression, and a general modesty. In addition to receiving the $1,000 award Miss Albaugh will be a candidate for the $10,000 prize to be given the most beautiful of the sixty prize winners. Pictures of the beauties to whom the other nine Michigan prizes are awarded will be found on page 3.

A Finer Typewriter at a Fair Price

Free Trial—Send No Money!

No money in advance. Not a cent! Simply make your request via the coupon below if you want this brand new Oliver Typewriter for five days free trial in your own home or office. Use this Oliver for five days as if it were your own. Type all your letters or any other work with it. Put it to every conceivable test. Compare it with any $100 typewriter on the market. Compare it for simplicity of construction. For beauty of finish. For ease of operation. For speed. For neatness of work. Then if after 5 days free trial you do not wish to keep the typewriter for any reason whatsoever, simply send it back to us and you won't be out one cent for the free trial. If, on the other hand, you decide that it is the finest typewriter, and you wish to keep it, then pay us at the easy rate of only $4 a month. This is the open free trial offer we make to you on the Oliver to let you see for yourself that if any typewriter is worth $100 it is this splendid, speedy Oliver No. 9, our latest model and the finest we ever built. Who could make such an offer of free trial and ship without money unless they had absolute confidence in the quality of their product proved by years of experience?

Direct From Factory

For $64 you can now obtain the identical Oliver Typewriter formerly priced at $100. We are able to save you nearly half because of our radically new and economical method of distribution. During the war we learned many lessons. We found that it was unnecessary to have such a vast number of traveling salesmen and so many expensive branch houses throughout the country. We were able to discontinue many other superfluous sales methods. The result is that we can afford to sell at $64 the very same Oliver formerly priced at $100.

Easy Payments

Remember you need not send any money with the coupon. Check the coupon to get the Oliver for five days free trial in your own home. If you decide to keep the typewriter you can pay for it on terms so easy that you won't miss the money—only $4 a month. If you prefer to have further information before ordering, fill in the coupon for our free catalog. By the coupon you may order the Oliver or the catalog just as you wish. Avoid disappointment—order now to secure immediate delivery.

What a "snap" in

WILSNAPS!

WILSNAPS! You notice, first, the smooth finish. That's Wilsnap quality! Then you hear the brisk "snap" as the Wilsnap clicks into place. See! It's the Wilsnap spring that puts the "snap" in Wilsnap!

And this same spring makes Wilsnaps stay snapped—till you wish to unfasten your gown or blouse. Then you notice how smoothly and quickly this same Wilsnap spring releases.

Wilsnaps always will snap, wherever snap fasteners are used.

Liquid Silmerine

Keeps the Hair Wavy Glossy and Beautiful

"I often find Liquid Silmerine valuable in my work, especially when I am in a hurry to arrange my coiffure, and particularly for scenes where I must look my prettiest. It imparts that lovely sheen or lustre which shows to such advantage under changing lights." May Allison.

Many other popular screen stars praise the virtues of this unique product.

A great many women now consider Liquid Silmerine a real necessity. Splendid as a dressing, as well as for keeping the hair curly and wavy. Pleasant to use. Is neither sticky nor greasy. Perfectly harmless. Have you tried it?

The Truly Beautiful

are those whose charms convey the impression of having been naturally acquired, exhibiting no evidence of artificiality. Hair and skin look as though they retained their attractiveness and youthfulness as a result of hygienic care and cleanliness. The preparations here described are appreciated particularly by those who prefer "natural beauty" to that which is obviously otherwise.

Every Woman Prefers A Natural Complexion

Shedding worn-out skin is Nature's way of renewing the complexion. When this process lags, a bad complexion results. Then Mercolized Wax comes to the rescue. Actually absorbs the aged, faded or soiled top skin, in tiny particles, day by day, causing no inconvenience. The fresh, bright, health-tinted skin which has been covered up soon is revealed in all its beauty, and the face looks much younger. One ounce of Mercolized Wax usually suffices.

Removing Wrinkles, Age Marks and Flabbiness

Dissolve one ounce of Powdered Saxolite in one-half pint of witch hazel, and you have an effective and harmless wrinkle remover. Bathing the face in this quickly tightens and tones up the skin, erasing every line. Remarkably effective for flabby skin, and double chin. Reduces enlarged pores. Gives a tired, careworn face a freshened feeling and appearance.

Actually Removes Roots of Superfluous Hair

A boon to women disfigured with superfluous hair or fuzz is Phelactine—because it actually removes the roots! Easily, quickly, harmlessly. Not a caustic, to merely burn off the surface hair. Not a depilatory. Not electrical. It is "different," and truly wonderful. No odor, no irritation, no scar—skin is left clean, white and smooth. Get a stick of Phelactine today, try it, and you will be surprised and delighted.

NOW you can use a face powder that cannot spill. The powder is in cake form, covered with porous cloth. You can drop it on the floor and the compact will be just as perfect for use. You wipe the puff on the cloth covering the compact and the powder comes through as needed. You could powder your nose in the dark and you would not get too much powder, and you are sure not to spray your clothes with powder. This new, perfect way to use face powder was invented by the specialist who perfected the famous, harmless La-may Powder. There are two qualities of packages. Both are very flat and convenient to carry. One box with compact and puff sells for fifty cents. The other, a German Silver Gold Plated Vanity Box with hinged cover and two-inch mirror, containing compact and flat lamb's wool puff, sells for one dollar and fifty cents. This beautiful La-may Vanity Box looks like solid gold and will not tarnish. It will last a lifetime. The La-may compact in the La-may Vanity Box contains enough pure La-may Powder to last for generous use for about two months. When La-may Vanity Box is empty you refill it by asking your dealer for a fifty-cent La-may compact. The compact and puff from the fifty-cent package is made to fit the La-may Vanity Box. Ask your face powder dealer to show you this splendid new idea. Remember, here, at last, is an entirely new idea in face powder. The powder cannot spill and it comes out so evenly you could powder your face in the dark. La-may Face Powder is also sold in the loose form for thirty-five cents and sixty cents. La-may is guaranteed absolutely pure and harmless. Because it is pure, and because it stays on so well, it is now used by over a million American women. If your dealer refuses to get you a La-may Vanity Box, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., New York City. There is also a delightful La-may Talcum that sells in a beautiful large package for only thirty cents.

E. Lawrence & Co. Chicago

On the SERVING of BREAKFASTS

TO insure the tempting fragrance and exquisite flavor that their guests will remember, many of the best known hostesses of New York serve Yuban.

The strength and richness, the full flavor of Yuban—its rare fragrance—fill the coffee-lover with delight.

It is the most popular breakfast coffee as well as the most popular after-dinner coffee in both Chicago and New York.

And Yuban is always the same. It is an added charm to know that tomorrow's coffee will be just as clear, just as fragrant, just as flavorous as today's.

The "English" breakfast

THE English manner of serving breakfast is growing more and more popular in this country—the long sideboard with its row of hot-water dishes flanking the vast coffee-urn which puffs out little angry jets of steam, of the most inviting fragrance. The leisurely breakfaster peeps beneath each silver cover, chooses and serves himself. It is a confidential and unceremonious hour and servants are dispensed with.

Fruit, porridge, scones, jam or marmalade, and the bubbling coffee—in America it is invariably Yuban—these are the essentials and seldom vary. For the rest—kedgeree or haddock may be served, kept at the proper temperature in hot-water dishes, and a cold pigeon pie invariably finds favor.

The breakfast tray

THERE'S the tray for the lady who breakfasts in bed. It is a miracle of fresh and delicate appointments. China and dewy flowers match the hangings of the room and the tiny coffee service is designed for just this purpose.

If strawberries are served the hulls should be left on and the berries carefully selected for size and color. White grapes, peeled and chilled, may be substituted, or iced orange juice with fresh mint. Dry toast with unsalted butter, strained honey and fragrant Yuban—these complete the tray, though the modern appetite sometimes demands a three-minute egg or a slice of broiled bacon.

The "American" breakfast

NOW the rod, the crop and the shot-gun bring guests and hostess together at hours that used to be declared "impossible." Many a week-end party that, a few years ago, would not have assembled before noon, meets cheerfully at eight-thirty, eager for this earnest business of sport, and more than willing to be fortified by a second cup of fragrant, steaming coffee.

The American breakfast is a hearty affair. Grapefruit or melon is followed by cereal. And then the hostess has an unlimited supply of breakfast dishes—such as eggs in a great variety of forms, grilled sweet-breads or shad-roe with bacon. Toast and popovers or corn muffins and fragrant, steaming Yuban complete a satisfying breakfast.

CHENEY SILKS

Cheney Twill, navy blue with softly-toned flower garlands and here and there touches of white like falling petals, fashions a charming day frock. The dainty collar and vest as well as the picot-edged ruffles that trim the skirt are of Crêpe Chenette.

THE HALL-MARK OF SMART DISTINCTION

THE preference of Fashion is for Silk; the call of Youth and Springtime is for beauty in texture and design, for vivacity of colour; the unvarying demand of smartness and good taste is for quality. And, because Cheney Silks—Crêpes, Satins, Taffetas and Twills, each in a myriad of delightful variations of texture and colour—represent the consummate achievement of artistic and mechanical excellence of weaving, loveliness of colour, and distinction of design, Milady recognizes in them the hall-mark of smartness for day and evening frocks and wraps, blouses, sportswear, négligées and lingerie.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

Half a man on a whole man's job

Thousands of men and women, we now know, are cheated of full vigor for lack of a single vital element in food

"WE know now definitely," writes one of our greatest authorities on food, "that the regular diet of a large portion of the people of the United States is falling short of maintaining satisfactory nutrition."

That is the way a famous scientist gives in simple words the significance of the new, startling discovery about food.

One single mysterious element—vitamine—has been newly found in food.

Its importance is now known to be tremendous. Unless we have enough of this health-maintaining vitamine in our daily meals we cannot get the energy we need for our daily work.

Primitive man secured an abundance of vitamine from his raw, uncooked foods and green, leafy vegetables. But modern diet—constantly refined and modified—is too often badly deficient in this vital element.

It is this discovery that is making thousands of housewives anxiously consider the meals they provide. When a man, though apparently well-fed, is clearly worn out by his work, can he be getting enough of the vigor-making vitamine in his food? Are women making sure they get enough of it to give them the bounding energy, the vitality they should have? Scientists say that the ill effects of getting too little of this vitamine are simply those of slowly starving the vital tissues.

The richest source of this vigor-making vitamine

The food which has been found to be richest in this particular vigor-making vitamine is yeast. Physicians and food specialists have obtained almost magic results simply by adding yeast to diets.

Thousands are now making Fleischmann's Yeast—just the familiar tin-foil wrapped cake of yeast which you get at the grocer's—as much a part of their daily meals as bread, potatoes or meat.

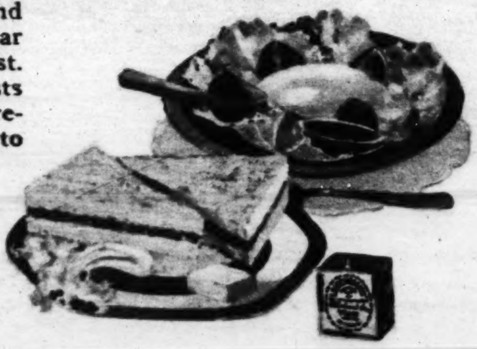
Increased appetite—good digestion—a system kept free of waste matter

Fleischmann's Yeast is a food assimilated in the body just like any other food. It is highly digestible—is in fact an aid to digestion. And it increases appetite. In leading hospitals it has been proved valuable not only for these results, but for aiding intestines in their normal functions in ridding the body of waste matter. It gradually takes the place of laxatives, and many are taking it for this purpose alone.

Yeast may be eaten at any time with or between meals. One precaution: People who are troubled with gas would do well to dissolve the yeast in boiling water.

Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast. It is made under conditions of scrupulous cleanliness and is delivered fresh daily, uniform in purity and strength. Get not more than two or three days' supply at a time, because yeast, like milk, should be fresh to be palatable.

Spread in a thin sandwich yeast is delicious, especially with salad. It is good mixed with butter and mustard or with jams. Many prefer to eat yeast plain from the cake. Others like it dissolved in fruit juices or milk. It is also very good combined with various familiar foods, such as soups, gravies, potatoes.



A delicious new sandwich—mix 1 cake of yeast with ⅓ cup of apple butter and spread on bread and butter sandwiches.

Keep the vigor that puts work through

Plenty of the vitamine in which yeast is supremely rich helps all the body processes and is necessary for surplus energy and vigorous health.

In scientific tests of the therapeutic value of Fleischmann's Yeast for pimples (acne), boils and constipation the doctors say that in many of the cases which came under their observation the yeast treatment improved the general physical condition of the patient quite aside from helping the particular disease.

Eat one to three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily to maintain vigor and zest.

Minor ailments corrected

It has been found from actual clinical tests that yeast yielded "surprisingly satisfactory results" in the treatment of boils and acne (pimples)—complaints which often come with lowered vitality. Yeast is recognized today as a "conditioner"—a vitamine-rich food which corrects the basic causes of these ailments.

To correct pimples and boils and to build up resistance to them in the future eat regularly 1 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily.

Help the system eliminate waste matter

Science says if the body could be kept entirely free of poisonous waste matter and perfectly nourished it ought to live forever in perfect health. That's a theory. But it's a fact that Fleischmann's Yeast helps the body get rid of waste matter, stimulates the appetite and helps digest the increased food we eat.

To help keep your body clean of poisons eat one to three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day. Eat it over a period of time—a month or longer—and notice the difference.

To learn many interesting facts about the health-giving properties of Fleischmann's Yeast—what it has done for others and what it can do for you—fill out and mail the coupon below for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." Martha Learns How to Travel Light

The company was going on the road, and Anne viewed Martha's trunks with dismay.

"My dear, you can't take all those trunks," she said, "what's in them, anyway?"

Martha raised a trunk lid and displayed neat piles of muslin underthings.

"No wonder," said Anne, "why, I wouldn't dream of taking underwear which must be laundered. I take nothing but a small quantity of Vanity Fair glove-silk—then I can wash it out in the hotel, myself, and wear it without pressing. When you've been on the stage a while, you'll learn the cost and loss of laundries, and know why we call Vanity Fair our life-saver."

Poise a Part of Dress

Madeleine twitched and twisted until Lois, who was driving, lost her patience.

"What is the matter? You act as though you had St. Vitus' dance."

"I have something worse," replied the exasperated Madeleine, "I have on a union suit which won't stay closed. I'm sure," she continued, whimsically, "nothing noble or heroic was ever done in ill-fitting underwear. I'll wager Joan of Arc would never have led the French in this union suit."

"Why not use some care in selecting your underwear?" Lois asked her. "Vanity Fair has a union suit with a patented closing called the 'sure-lap.' I always wear them and you never see me twitching about."

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

CLAIRE WINDSOR is exploited as the "latest discovery" of Lois Weber, the woman producer.

Miss Windsor, they say, is a Seattle society girl who decided she could act and set about proving it to the world. You have seen her in "To Please One Woman," "What's Worth While," and "What Do Men Want?"

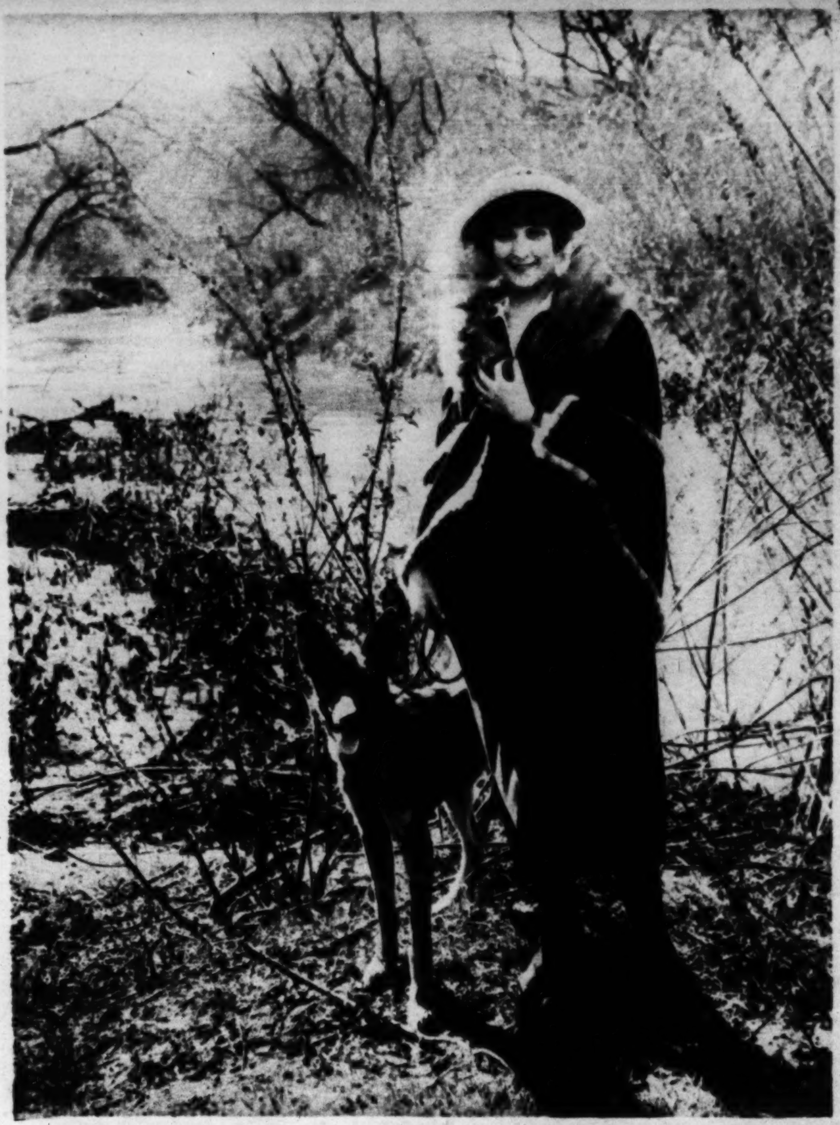
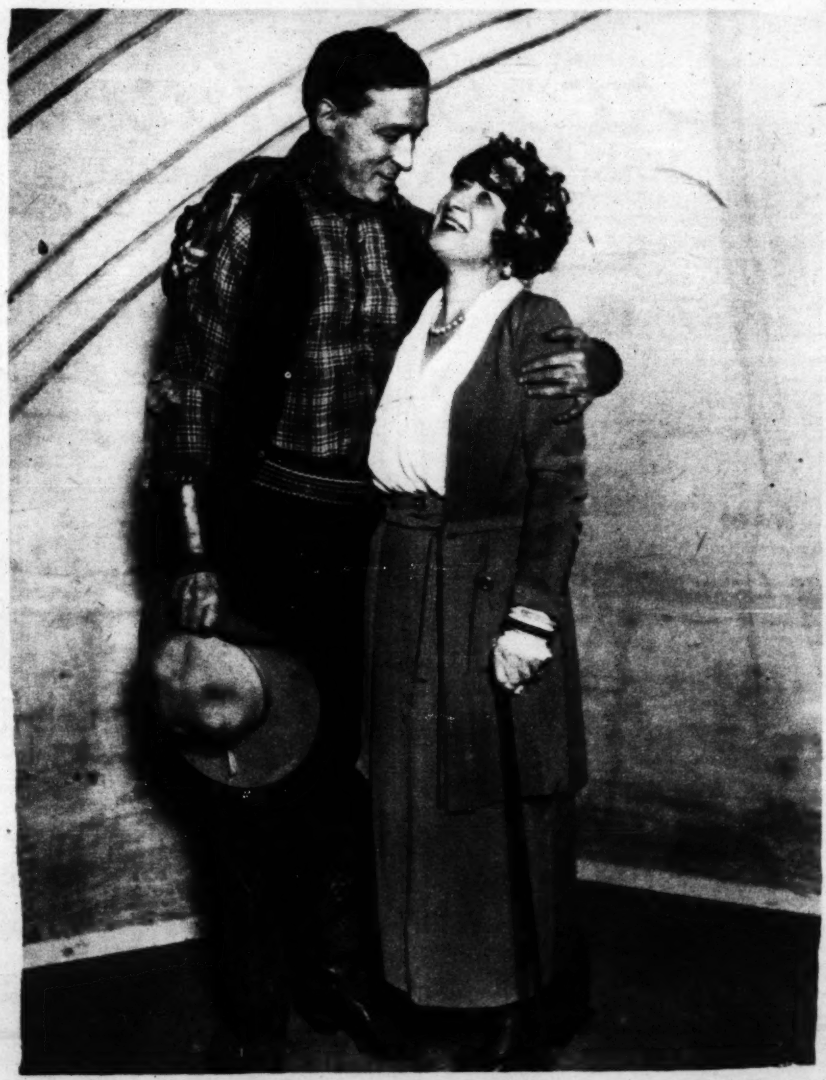
Mae Tinee.



PRISCILLA DEAN is no stranger to your album's pages. But, we ask you, ask you, have you met Stamboul before?

Stamboul is Miss Dean's prize winning police dog. One day she and he went a-walking through the park and a photographer met them. The picture is the result of the meeting.

Mae Tinee.



MARY GARDEN broke into print the other day by saying she was "awfully sorry" to hear of Bill Hart's engagement—which was afterwards denied.

So when she went west the press agent saw his opportunity to fix up a picture of Bill and Mary, and here it is.

TOM MOORE looks so perfectly happy in this that we thought maybe you'd like it for to cheer up your album. Reason? Why, you don't suppose Rene Adoree, his brand new wife, could have had anything to do with this beaming countenance, do you?

(Nothing—excepting that she had probably just finished saying "Yes." Then the smile broke.)

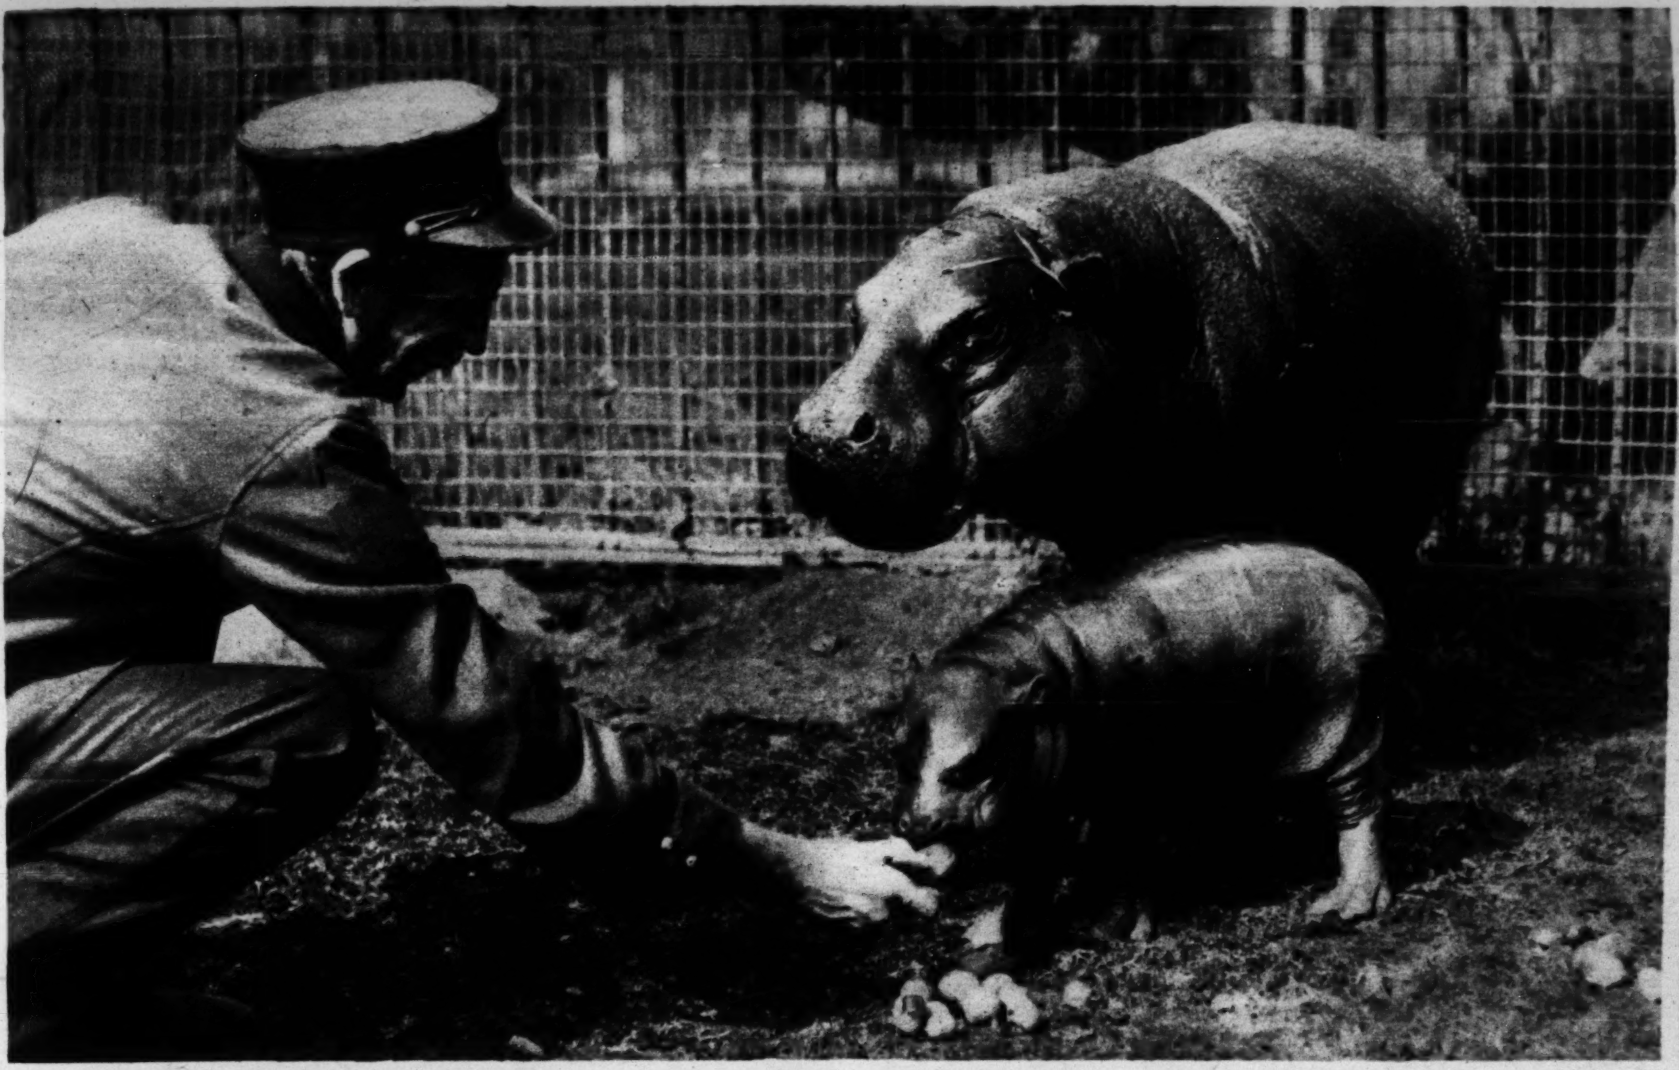
AIN'T NATURE WONDERFUL?



THIS IS A PERFECTLY GOOD HIPPOPOTAMUS, though a bit smaller, perhaps, than you have been accustomed to. Like her mother, Tootsie, also shown in the picture, the young person is of the Liberian pygmy variety, and is the only one of her kind to be born in captivity. She has been tentatively christened Little Blue Sunday, having appeared on one of them recently at the Bronx zoological gardens in New York. She weighed eight pounds at birth and twenty-five when the photograph was taken.

AND HERE'S SOMETHING NEW, illustrating as it does not only one of the perplexities of being an elephant and keeping one's dignity but also a novel development in our foreign trade. For the first time we are exporting elephants to Europe. Queenie, to be observed going aboard the New Rochelle in New York, is off for the Hagenbeck zoo in Hamburg, to be used for breeding purposes. With her went three others, all from the herd of the Ringling Brothers' circus. Since the war there has been a shortage of breeding elephants abroad, and the United States has been asked to help relieve it.

The Cracked Rug

THE time came 'round again to have the rugs beaten, and I sent for John Joblots, the handy-man. After finishing the parlor rug he folded it wrong-side-out and laid it one side, where the boys found it after school. Here was a fine place to play!

"Heavens!" I cried, when John brought it in. "It's split clear across!"

The boys, together with three years of beatings, had finished it.

Of course it was quite a loss; to replace it now meant double the outlay. For the first time Tom and I figured out the expense of such crude ways of cleaning.

"John costs us about sixteen dollars a year," said Tom, "and the woman who sweeps and dusts gets around a hundred and seventy-five."

Then we estimated the dust damage to hangings, curtains and walls; and allowed something for wear-and-tear to lace and sash curtains through frequent washing. Altogether, the cost was around $240 a year.

"And on top of that our best rug is ruined!" I said.

The sequel is simple. We bought a Premier, primarily because we had heard such a lot about it; secondly because of the demonstration of what its marvelous revolving rubber-fingered brush could accomplish. Now we save its cost every year several times over.

The Premier Vacuum Cleaner is the one with the revolving rubber-fingered brush, which is famous for its enormous appetite for threads, hair, paper, pins and litter. Dusty, dirty rugs especially appeal to it. The damage to rugs by constant beating far offsets the cost of the Premier and it keeps the rugs, furniture and hangings clean all the time.

There is a great difference in cleaners. Before buying any cleaner you owe it to yourself to have a TEN POINT DEMONSTRATION of the Premier—First Among Cleaners—in your own home. 'Phone the distributor named below to have your nearest Premier dealer make this demonstration tomorrow.

The window of every Premier dealer contains a poster of this or a similar advertisement.

Learn the advantages of the Premier's specially designed bag, self-balancing handle, notched nozzle, rubber brush and direct-connected attachments. Test its light weight, powerful suction and efficient attachments. Have this Ten Point Demonstration first thing tomorrow morning. Find out from the Premier dealer what you can do with $5. It will surprise you.

Blackheads indicate your cleansing method is wrong

BLACKHEADS indicate that the method you are using is not the right method of cleansing for your type of skin:

A skin specialist would tell you that blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of your skin.

To do away with the cause of blackheads and free your skin from this disfiguring trouble, use the following simple treatment:

APPLY hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully. To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in this treatment. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin this treatment tonight. You will be astonished to see how quickly your skin will improve in clearness.

Special treatments for all the commoner skin troubles—for an oily skin, blemishes, pale, sallow skin, conspicuous nose pores, etc.—are given in the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch." This booklet is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's will last for a month or six weeks of any treatment, and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

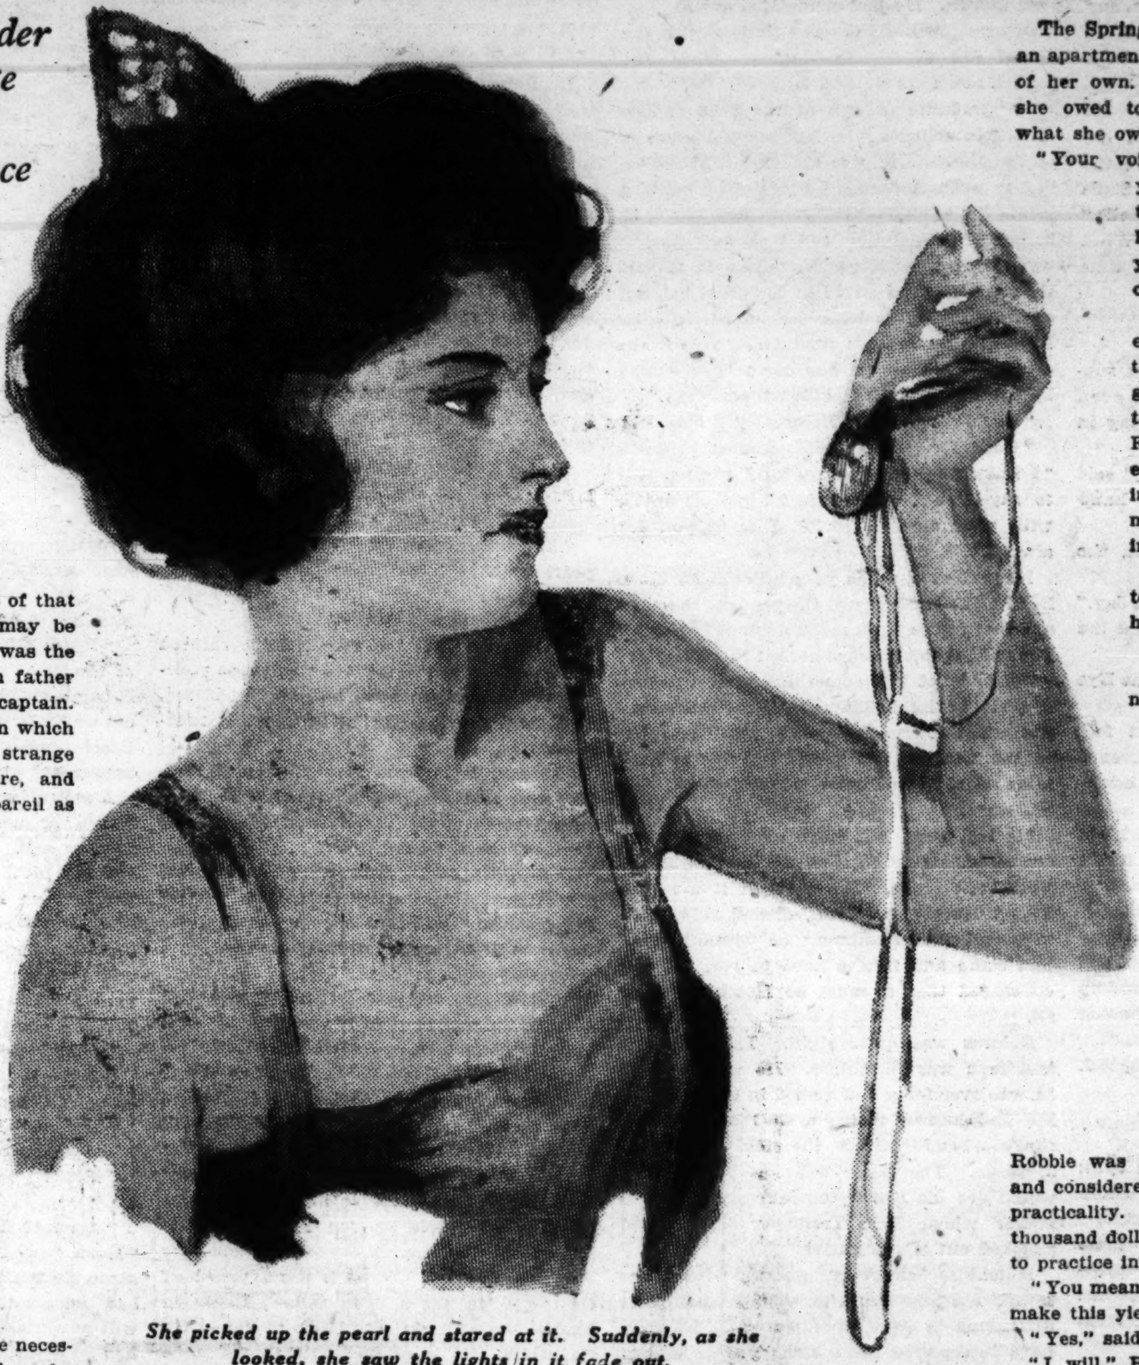
THE EYE OF CLEOPATRA

by Richard Washburn Child —

PAINTING BY MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS



She picked up the pearl and stared at it. Suddenly, as she looked, she saw the lights in it fade out.

The Story of a Wonder Pearl and Its Strange Trail of Adventure, Tragedy, and Romance

ENDLESS are the legends, rumors and stories of famous jewels that bring the possessor ghastly misfortunes. Among them all none but the record of one notorious pearl yields the true solution of the mysterious influence that lies behind the flash of come priceless diamond, the glow of a world-renowned ruby, the glittering lights of an emerald which has passed from owner to owner leaving its trail of terror. Perhaps the story of the great Eye is the key to them all.

Dolores Taraffa, whose beauty was of that warmth, brilliance and light that may be found in a flower of a tropic jungle, was the sole offspring of a pure-blood Cuban father and the daughter of a Scotch sea captain. A convent had given her an education which contributed to her character that strange calm and poise that now is so rare, and nature gave her the voice of a nonpareil as clear as crystal and as full of warmth as a Carribbean sunrise reflected in the beryl green shallows and dark purple depths of the Gulf.

From her mother she had inherited eyes that were the color of those green waters, clear, holding out the same invitingness, fit to reflect the sunlight of her hair; from her father she had inherited a skin and contour as smooth and delicate as carved ivory, but of that tropic tint that is only produced by marble white transparency through which glows the olive and pink of swiftly coursing blood.

Were it not for the strange fate that put into this little body a size of soul that might have been found in a Viking's daughter, it would not be necessary to know anything of Dolores before she came to New York. A mere accident of chance furnishes that brief picture of her early life; one Thomas Safford, a sugar speculator of Havana, who happened to be the employer of Taraffa at the time Taraffa died, says this:

"I had her father as superintendent of the Los Banos Plantation. His health was bad enough, heaven knows. It may have accounted for their poverty. As I understood it he was an outcast son of some family in Madrid. His wife had been named McLeod. What a mixture! Everybody frowned on them. I never knew why. They produced this miracle of a child. But squalor! Always behind; always broke. Then he died and the girl came back to her mother.

"She was beautiful and silent! That bodes no good. If one is to be beautiful let them be talkative. Her beauty was a positive load to carry. You know how it is? But her voice! Naturally enough such a voice—such a singing voice—such a contralto——! Her mother took her to Havana. Then the mother died. God knows how Dolores got to New York. Probably some theatrical man. No doubt he tried love-making. That would account for the girl fleeing from him—being adrift."

She was adrift. The first time any of our particular set heard of her was when Mrs. Tremayer Collier picked her up in that very imitation Bohemian place called The Belfry.

The Belfry is a coffee house of a sort—a smoky tobacco-fogged, candle-lit, atmospheric little bird house over a plumber's shop. They make a great to-do over the cobwebs that hang down from the beams there. A gray-haired poetess keeps the place; she makes ten thousand a year selling coffee and rice cakes to a mixed group of young and penniless graduates of Western coeducational institutions who are in New York to write or play or dance interpretatively and to grand people from the land of social prominence uptown, who try to hide, when in The Belfry, their white shirt fronts and white shoulders, under coats and wraps.

The poetess, who gave up verse for victuals, apparently made a great gesture of being kind to the down-and-outs. She was generous enough to furnish a few fried eggs from time to time to Dolores Taraffa; the reason may have been that Dolores was a picturesque little figure in her raggedy attire, her penniless respectability and her beauty. The girl could talk English, of course, and above all when the mood struck her she could croon Spanish gypsy songs in a way to make the riff-raff guests float off into dreamland.

Mrs. Tremayer Collier was there one night with Bobby Durant and two of her other well-iced admirers. Dolores had a cigar box banjo—literally made of a cigar box and a few strings on pegs and lolling back in a corner she heard the lull in the chatter and struck a note. She struck a note with her fingers across the strings and with her voice across the world. It might have been, said pretty Mrs. Collier, the keynote of all human reminiscence and all human aspiration.

It was only the beginning of a soft, low, almost whispered melody that took the eyes of those who were there far out into space. It was a magic. It was a spell. When the lady from uptown had recovered the consciousness of herself as a rich patron of the arts she said:

"Suppose that she could let that voice out into power. Great Scott, Bobby Durant, I intend to capture her and put her in musical circles!"

"Musical circles!" said Durant, who is an amateur composer as well as a scientist, "musical circles. That girl can cut figure eights all over our musical circles!"

That was the way, in brief, that Dolores was "taken from the gutter" as the widow of Tremayer Collier put it before she went off to Europe.

She knew perfectly well that Miss Taraffa had an education equal to her own and that her voice had begun already its training in the convent at Vedado, but she was a little vexed that Dolores, the silent and restrained, had not poured forth a lapful of gushing gratitude for the musicale at which Mrs. Collier had giver her a "debut," for the lessons from Paranelli, for a launching toward that one season in which the girl, whirled away on the brilliant chariot of New York success, had advanced so far toward fame and fortune.

The Spring of that year found Dolores in an apartment of her own, paid for by money of her own. She knew what thankfulness she owed to Mrs. Collier; she knew also what she owed to God and to herself.

"Your voice came from Heaven," said young Robinson Slade. "But the character to live the life you have led and go on working as you have is chalked up to your credit, dear one."

Slade was twenty then and she eighteen, although there was that untouched youth in her deep green eyes that made her appear to be a child and made the old French woman whom she had engaged treat her like a child—in absurd contrast to several musical managers who competed in treating her like a queen.

It was ridiculous that she said to the son of the largest export house in America:

"Robbie, you are so young!"

Robbie, as she called him, was not so young in the soul. He was a strange product, particularly if one considered his father, who was a case-hardened, steel jacketed, metallic man of great ability. The boy did not look unlike him—a little too short, a little too well knit for grace or even for dignity, but with a vital forcefulness of figure, face and movement. But the younger Slade, as Durant once remarked in his smart way, was a sheep in wolf's clothing. His father was said to be wholly practical; Robbie was philosophical and had thought and considered and meditated himself out of practicality. When his father gave him ten thousand dollars on his twenty-first birthday to practice investments the boy said this:

"You mean you want to see whether I can make this yield a great return?"

"Yes," said the elder Slade.

"I will," Robbie answered, knowing the extraordinary thing he would do.

Perhaps the reason that he had never told his father about his visits to Dolores or of his excursions with her, that knew no sense other than propriety, and often ended up in such absurdities as sitting together on a park bench at the Battery waiting for a fog to lift so that they could see the Statue of Liberty, or of his increasing love for her, was that sense of sacredness of relationship which shrinks from discussion with third persons, particularly if they are unsympathetic and lacking in understanding. Certainly it was not because he had fear.

He was fearless enough—inexperienced and fearless, and with an exaggerated notion of the value of honor and knightly behaviour and gallantry as abstract ideals that he had never had the opportunity to apply to life.

If there were anything secretive about his attentions to this beautiful young singer, whose convent-bred poise and calm and silent moods and aloofness from that brilliant and lively world into which she had climbed so swiftly, that secretiveness came not from a sense of impending scandal, though he may have recognized its possibility, but rather from his joy in the world apart which he was creating with her and which might be smashed by the vulgarity of gossip.

Perhaps it was because of the absence of any critic of their high and finely felt relationship of youth that, with the fruitless disapproval of Annette, the French factotum, he came and went, in and out of that luxurious little apartment that Dolores' increasing earnings had made possible.

A few weeks before his father had made him the gift of money Robbie was stretched out in the window seat of the little blue and gold living room when Annette brought to little Miss Taraffa a card. The effect of this card

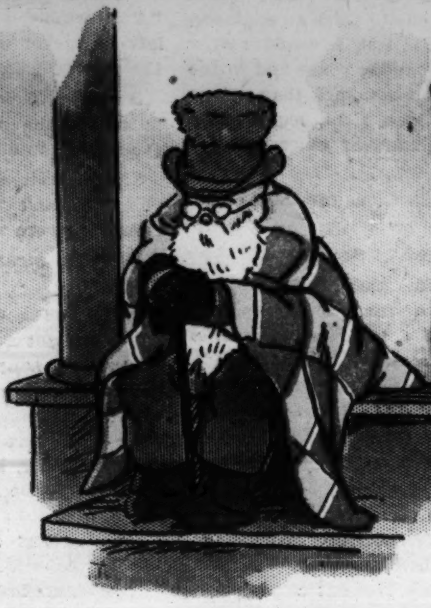
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

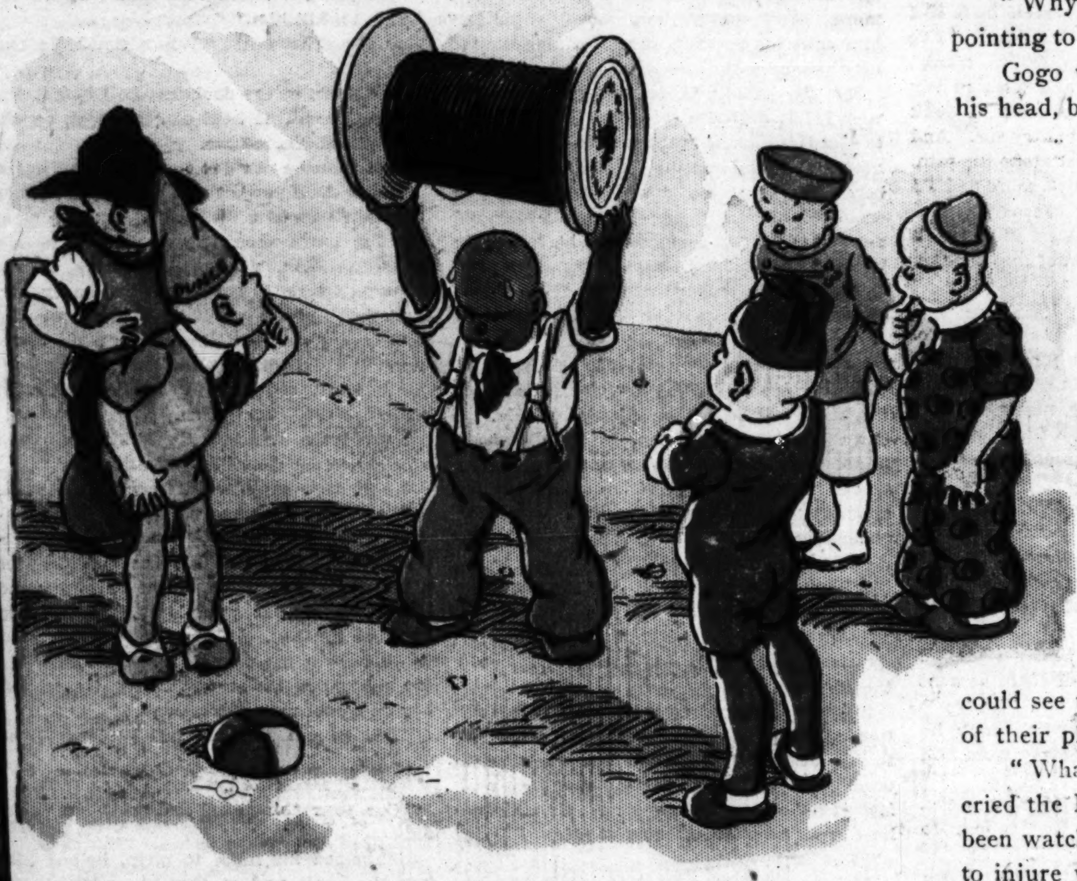
A TEST OF STRENGTH.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



SIGNS of spring were in the air. Boys played marbles, rolled hoops, and little girls skipped ropes. Mothers talked to one another over back fences, and from the distance came the music of a hurdy-gurdy. Birds flew through the air with bits of straw and paper in their bills, and into the darkest shadows the sunshine seemed to find its way.

The Teenie Weenies, too, seemed to feel that spring was here, for under the rose bush was the surest sign of all that spring had come.



On the tiny porch of the shoe house, wrapped in a warm comforter, sat Grandpa, and beside him stood, in its hazel nut pot, a Teenie Weenie rubber plant.

This was their first appearance since last October, and all the Teenie Weenies knew that spring was here.

It was one of those warm, lazy days, and most of the little people lay on the soft moss where the sunshine fell.

"I don't see why you folks are so lazy today," cried the Turk, grinning around at his companions sprawled out on the ground. "This warm spring weather makes me feel as strong as a bullfrog. Why, I'll bet a cherry seed I could muscle out a ten penny nail."

"I'll betcha Gogo's stronger than you," cried the Dunce, hoping to start an argument.

"Maybe he is," answered the Turk. "But he'll have to show me."

"Gogo rolled a potato out of the cellar once. Didn't you, Gogo?" said the Dunce.

"Yes, I did, but I done strained my back doin' it," answered the little colored chap.

"Can you lift a spool of thread over your head?" asked the Turk.

"Speck I could," grinned Gogo.

"All right, come on over to the tool house and we'll get a spool of thread out and see whether you can or not," cried the Turk.

The lazy Teenie Weenies were now thoroughly awake, and they followed the Turk and Gogo to the tool house, for they often had wondered which of the two Teenie Weenies was the stronger, and here was a chance to decide the matter.

A spool of black thread was rolled out of the tool house, and the little men made ready for the test of strength.

Gogo caught the spool around the middle, lifted it to his shoulder, and raised it above his head just as easily as he would have lifted a match.

The Turk then lifted the spool above his head with as much ease as Gogo had done.

"Why don't you try liftin' that spoon over there?" said the Dunce, pointing to a teaspoon which lay near by. "That's heavier than the spool."

Gogo walked over to the spoon and, picking it up, he lifted it over his head, but it was quite a task, for it was much heavier than the spool.

The Turk lifted the spoon when Gogo was through, and the task was so great that the little fellow grew red in the face.

"Well, let's see who can lift that iron bolt back of the tool house," said the Turk, mopping his head with his tiny handkerchief.

The little folks walked around to the back of the tool house, where the bolt lay.

"I'll bet you can't lift that," said the Clown. "It took three of us to bring it over from the dump."

"Looks pretty heavy," said Gogo as he took off his vest. "Bu I'll try."

The little colored fellow caught one end of the bolt and raised it off the ground, but when he tried to lift the whole thing he found it was heavier than it looked.

He secured a better grip on the bolt and slowly lifted it about an inch from the ground, but all the Teenie Weenies could see that it was too heavy for the little fellow, as his eyes stuck out of their place and the tiny veins swelled all over his neck.

"What in the name of common sense are you fellows trying to do?" cried the Doctor, who had joined the group of Teenie Weenies and had been watching them unnoticed by the little folks. "Do you fellows want to injure yourselves? Put that bolt down, Gogo. You fellows ought to know better than to strain yourselves like that."

"We all was just tryin' to see who was the strongest," gasped Gogo as he dropped the heavy bolt to the ground.

"Well, it looks to me like you were trying to find out which was the biggest fool," answered the Doctor. "You should never try lifting such heavy weights, for you might hurt yourselves so you would be crippled for the rest of your life."

"Yes, sir, that's right," cried Grandpa, who had shuffled out to find out what all the disturbance was about. "I knew a Teenie Weenie back in forty-nine that burst a blood vessel liftin' an apple core and he——" But all the Teenie Weenies walked away, and the old fellow muttered the story to himself as he tottered back to his place beside the rubber plant.

was quite miraculous and alarming. Dolores gazing at it lost color, dropped it onto the table and with her small hands clenched stared at nothing, her pink lips twisting as sometimes her Spanish blood made them twist with emotion.

"Who?" asked young Slade.

"Stuart Hotchkiss."

"And who is Stuart Hotchkiss?" he asked.

"The man who brought me to New York," said Dolores.

Robbie had never asked who the man was who brought her from Cuba. He knew that he was a mongrel soul who had supposed too much.

"He has been here often in the month," she said, wearily. "He says I owe him my success and that the least I can do is to reimburse him for his investment in me."

"Does he?" asked Robbie, climbing down from the window seat. He whistled. He looked at the card and strolled out to the hallway. Dolores heard voices and then the closing of the apartment door. When Slade returned, rather flushed, she said, "Well?"

"I thrashed him," he answered. "What else? We had rather something of a time out there on the tiled floor."

He looked troubled.

"Why?" she asked.

"He knew who I was. How do you suppose he knew? He threatened to get even with me. But let us forget it. Nothing in the world——"

"Nothing in the world can harm us," said Dolores, pressing the back of his hand against her cheek.

"Some day I want to kiss you—on the lips," said Robbie.

"Some day—of course, Robbie—some day."

They were young and neither realized the significance to them of this incident.

Within a month he brought to her the Eye of Cleopatra.

She had been singing—three short folk songs of Andalusia—at some Fifth Avenue evening affair. The place is of no consequence to this account. He found her sometime after ten in an evening gown of black relaxed against the vivid orange silk lining of her wrap in her favorite wicker chair.

"You will think I am a fool," he said.

"Of course," replied Dolores, "of course, Robbie. It is because you are so sweet and clean, and so far from these dressed-up males who are always out of breath chasing the nasty little dollars, that I love you."

"You never said that before," he replied.

"What?"

"That you love me."

"It went without saying," said she.

No doubt he felt a brimming in his eyes; it would be quite like him. He is a whole package of assorted and fine sentiment.

"Well, if you can understand how little I ever trust my ability to express myself—my real feelings—you will understand this. Something in the beauty and rarity of this will tell you," he said.

"And what is the thing you call this?" she asked.

Robbie, taking from his pocket a handkerchief of heavy Habutai silk, spread it upon the black of Dolores lap. In the center of it reposed that extraordinary jewel which pearl experts have known for half a century as Cleopatra's Eye.

"Robbie!" exclaimed Dolores.

"It is for you. It is set into a pendant for you. If you can understand that it comes as a materialization of things I can't ever say myself! If you can understand that its beauty is a message from me!"

"I can, Robbie," replied Dolores with something like a whisper of reverence.

"May I kiss you?" he asked.

"I never forbade you, Robbie. I never forbade you from the first time we sat on the stairs at Mrs. Collier's dance. I love you, Robbie, and I think I will never love anyone else. But it is so strong now when all the rest of the world are worldly figures who would never miss me if I ceased to sing or ceased to be pretty!"

He kissed her.

"Wasn't it terribly costly, Robbie?"

He dismissed the question with a gesture.

Together, cheek to cheek, they looked down at this marvelous pearl whose reputation and value comes from the fact that it wears upon its surface the going and coming tints of a Mediterranean blue through which the rose of a Spring dawn thrusts its lights.

"Cleopatra's Eye," said he. "That's its name. You know, of course, that Cleopatra was of Greek blood. Her eyes——"

They were silent as the Eye glinted.

"Do you know where I got it?" he asked. "I'll tell you. I bought it from a Japanese. You'll never remember his name—Hidesush'o Ito. He is famous—a trader in pearls. Used to be in Kyoto. Now in New York. A gloomy, silent man."

Suddenly he stepped away from her.

"I suppose there's something else I should tell you," he said.

"What?"

Robbie fingered the Oriental brocade of the table cover as if considering.

"Well, there is a superstition about Cleopatra's Eye," said he, almost reluctantly. "You see, the first of its history—the very first—was when it was found on the coast of Sicily in 1848. It was found by a sailor in the clenched hand of a young man attired in the costume of one of nobility. But neither his nationality nor his identity were ever known. He had committed suicide."

Dolores touched the pearl timidly with the tip of one of her forefingers. Then she gave a mock shiver and laughed.

"A graduate of one of the best of our American colleges who has taken honors in philosophy before he is nineteen is above belief in such nonsense," Slade said, with a grin. "I tell you just so we can laugh at it, but it is said that bad luck pursues the owners of the Cleopatra's Eye. It is said that as time goes on when the pearl has not changed hands it loses its lustre little by little and as it loses its lustre so does the owner. They say it has often been owned by persons who have killed themselves."

"Pooh!" exclaimed Dolores. "I dare it!"

"Good for you!" Robbie almost shouted. "I knew you'd say just what I wanted you to say—you dear, wonderful girl of mine, with your eternal spirit! I want you for always."

Nevertheless, when young Robinson Slade had left, Dolores turned the pendant this way and that in the pink, moist palm of her hand. She tried then to assure herself that the great pearl had not lose something almost imperceptible of its brilliance. What nonsense! She put it down. Dear old Robbie! She ran to the window and pulled the heavy curtains apart to look down into the street. He had gone.

He had gone, but there was a man's figure moving slowly out of the shadow of the iron Park fence. She thought it must be Stuart Hotchkiss. Rain, dismal rain, with a dismal accompaniment of whining wind had come and it was hard to see, but she concluded that it must be Hotchkiss after all.

Dolores was quite right. The man she had seen was Hotchkiss. He was no fool; he was over forty and versed in low intrigue. He had known rather well that he could throw a bombshell into the office of Bertram J. Slade. The latter was not a man who would see his son become involved with a singer whom Mrs. Tremayer Collier had "picked out of the gutter."

Hotchkiss shrewdly guessed that the father did not know of young Robinson's attentions to little Miss Taraffa. He may have interpreted these attentions as one of his kind would naturally interpret them. If, perchance, he had correctly estimated the boy's purpose to make a lifelong alliance with her he was all the more convinced of the shock this would be to a hard-headed planner like old Slade. He was in no hurry, for out of luck and money as he was, he had been able to afford enough to corrupt Etienne, the worthless son of old Annette, and all tales were brought to his ears. He wanted to accumulate all the details of the tale he was to hear.

When Dolores saw him he had not come particularly to see Robbie emerge from Dolores' apartment just before midnight. He had come because Etienne had left the apartment after visiting his mother and had telephoned to Hotchkiss that he had a tale which would "break his eardrum." That was why Hotchkiss had come and the story of Cleopatra's Eye was now his!

Hotchkiss took it to Slade. When he had finally been admitted to the millionaire shipping man's office he said with a gesture of nobility:

"You will wonder, perhaps, why I am coming to you in a matter of confidential disclosure. I will tell you in advance, Mr. Slade. It is because if I were a father I would thank the man who would do the same for me. It is a matter between gentlemen."

"My son?" exclaimed Slade in a startled, anxious voice, for the father had as much faith in Robinson as he had in the South American trade. "What about my son?"

Hotchkiss told him. "I have a friend in the jewelry appraisal business," he concluded. "And I confess it was something of a shock to me to know the value—the price—of Cleopatra's Eye."

"What was that price?"

"Ten thousand dollars."

Hotchkiss had made good his promise to get even with Robinson Slade.

The export man did not go to see Dolores Taraffa to beg her to give up his son. "I have a distaste for Camille scenes," he said afterward. He merely wrote a letter. It was a brutal letter; not brutal in the sense of its phrases, for it was written with a fine manner of mock gallantry, but brutal in the exquisite thrusts he gave her.

He spoke of the shock it had been to him that his own son had not expressed to him the pleasure he had taken in her acquaintance; he said that it must be indeed only a persuading personality like hers that could make his son spend the last cent he would ever get from his father upon a trinket for her to wear over her heart.

In Dolores there was fineness of metal, well tempered and under injury it could whip up like a broken hair spring. Robbie had no way of knowing the hours she had spent in bitter tears; she had effaced them and their traces with ice and many bathings before he came to see her on that memorable night.

At first as he came in he did not know she was in the room. She was standing by the heavy curtains in the shadow, and only after she had come forward with her small head erect and as white as a marble bust into the light did he realize that something was wrong.

"I have received a letter from your—father," she said. "Here it is."

He read it, aghast.

"You might have told me how much this pearl cost," she said, with her fine teeth tightly closed.

"It was nothing—the cost."

"I did not know. I should have refused such a gift. Not only have you made yourself a fool, but you have made a fool of me. This is the thing you call love—this madness."

"It may have been madness," said Robbie, in a trembling voice. "But such madness I could afford. It is such madness as never comes a second time."

Dolores appeared a little shaken, but the fire of wrath, the blood of her father, was in her temples. She clenched her hands, and her eyes lit with the lights in the eyes of a tigress about to spring.

"You did not tell your father you knew me—that it meant anything to you!" she burst forth. "That is enough—that in itself."

It was impossible now for him to tell her his reason. To have told the truth would have seemed to be framing a weak lie. He merely said: "I would have told him soon"

"Oh, well," she said with a magnificent coldness. "I might have known. You are like the rest—bold as lion in your self-indulgences, but a craven coward in facing the obligations of life. What is the expression? Oh, yes—you are a little yellow, Robinson Slade—like your father's letter to me—a little yellow. It is so fortunate that I have found out before it was more serious, and it is too bad that I did not find out sooner. Do you know what it means to be a girl without a single friendly hand—alone—eternally subject to the assault of men's conspiracies and women's poisoned tongues? Do you know what you have done to wrong me? So much! Well, it is over. I look upon you for the last time, I hope."

"You mean that without knowing more—without hearing me you would send me away after all our world we have made together—all our plans."

"You better go," she said, with a curling of her lip. The devil himself was putting the words into her mouth. "If you ever come here again I shall know better than ever that you are without self-respect or pride or decency."

The younger Slade was not without pride and passion of his own; he seized his straw hat, and with reddened face started toward the door.

"Wait!" Dolores commanded. "You have forgotten something."

"What?"

"Your trinket."

He laughed in no pleasant tone.

"Then I shall send it to your father."

The threat fired him. He burst forth. "The things you have said to me I will never forget, nor will I ever come back to you unless you ask me; but if you send the pearl to my father I would never forgive you if we lived to be a thousand years old."

"Here—then!" she said, and tossed the Eye of Cleopatra across the table. It struck him on the mouth, and fell clattering on to the hardwood floor between two Turkestan rugs. He turned away and passed out through the hangings at the door.

She stayed motionless, breathing hard, her lips pressed tightly together until long after the door had closed. Then suddenly the realization of his going came to her, and she sank on to her knees and buried her face in the cushion of the wicker chair.

"Robbie! Come back!" she cried out. "Robbie, come back to me. I lied to you, Robbie. I love you. Come back to me!"

When she had caught her breath she listened and heard only the cough and purr of motors on the asphalt street below the window. She picked up the pearl and stared at it a long time. It was in a gay mood—this gem; it was filled with life and flash of rosy light.

"It is the only thing—the only thing he ever gave me," she said, holding it in her palm. "But I will send it back to him—tomorrow."

Then suddenly, as she looked at it, she saw the lights in it fade out; it lapsed into a miserable gray. Perhaps it was saying to her that she should not so easily get rid of it. Two days later she learned that Robbie Slade had gone on one of his father's ships on a voyage to the West Coast of South America.

If with the ownership of the Cleopatra's Eye, there went a strange and sinister influence, surely it had made a good beginning. Annette, to whom the story of the pearl had filtered, counseled the earliest riddance of it.

"Be still!" said Dolores. "Never speak of the pearl to me again. I do not wear it. It is gone—into a safe place. It is not mine, anyway. It is not mine. I'm not the owner. Beside, the superstition is nonsense—plain nonsense."

Annette was incorrigible. She replied. "Well, it came into our home over two months ago. Already the stock into which you put most of your savings of this winter has lost all its value because of that law suit. You have lost all your best gowns by burglary, have you not, Mademoiselle? How is it that Mrs. Tremayer Collier turned her back upon you and went off to Europe? Do you have any more engagements offered to you—you who can sing like no other?"

"But it is spring, Annette. The musical season is over."

"Ha! Over, eh? Did not Madame Orzicka take your place at——"

"Hush!" commanded Dolores. "It is absurd."

"Absurd? I wonder," Annette persisted. "Even you—mademoiselle, you are not the same. So much of irritation. Ah. I tell you bad temper makes enemies, and enemies will gossip about a beautiful young girl who has no one to protect her. What have you? Your voice. That is your only true friend—just as my pretty face was once. But if bad luck comes even your voice you may lose. Perhaps a sneeze—a cold—a cough, Mademoiselle, and it might be gone forever. Better sell the wicked thing while there is yet time!"

"I love it," said Dolores, passionately.

"Then you love your ruin!" Annette mumbled, and went on with her dusting.

She was not present for long, to haunt the girl with her warnings and her imagery of evil. Before six weeks had gone, and when the hottest days of July had come, Dolores told the old woman that she could employ her no more.

"I love you, Annette," she said, wearily. "But I have had no engagements. There is no money with which to pay you."

The old woman stared at her young mistress resentfully. She said, without any sign of regret, and insolently:

"You never would listen to one older and wiser than you. Take care of your health. You are pale. You have come from the tropics. I knew a girl who came from Brazil—a dancer—a girl like you, meant for sunlight. The damp, cold air here struck into her chest, and she passed away. That is what happened to her. And she did not have that wicked pearl!"

Dolores spent her summer practicing her singing. No one came to see her. Her restraint, her aloofness, had made her no-back you will stay; if you don't like it you will know where to come. If you are the sort of man that is wanted out here you will come back. I never shall. Once an engineer, always an engineer. But I would rather hump my bluey for twenty years and in the end die like a dog on a wet sack than not go on looking for the man I am looking for. I'll walk more thousands of miles yet if I don't find him."

"I am sorry for him when you meet him," said Jim.

"Sorry?" said Sadler. "Sorry?"

And for a long time they did not speak again. They heard the rain come down, battering heavily on the tin roof. In some places it came in through holes and made puddles on the floor. And the fire steamed and spat viciously. But it threw out a mighty heat and was comforting.

"Well, we'll keep up a good fire," said Jim as he threw some more wood on it. "It's damp enough in here, but it's damper outside. I am sorry for some of the poor blokes who are humping their swags now or are camped under some box tree out on the plain yonder."

"Aye, poor devils," said Bill Sadler. "I've done that same myself many a time. Many's the night I've camped out in a pool and slept in it. You're right, mate; we might keep up a good fire. One never knows if some poor devil or another might come along wet and hungry."

"That's so," said Grey, "and if there's one within a mile of this place he will come here for sure. Another half pipe and I'll turn in."

Both of them took off their boots and put them by the fire to dry. They hung up their socks on a dry branch of jagged gum.

"Holy show, my footgear," said Sadler. "I shall be havin' to do a week's work presently for a new pair of boots. But I'm ready for a doss, ain't you, mate?"

"Right you are," said Jim. "Let's turn in."

Sadler got into his bunk first. He did not quite lie down, but lay with his head in his hand, smoking his old clay pipe. To Jim, who looked at him in the bright light of the fire, it seemed that he had a fine, strong face. But it was hard and lined and above everything it showed a dogged purpose. And Jim, who had never had any great purpose in his life, wondered at it. And he half opened his mouth as if he wished to say, "Why, don't you chuck it, old son?"

But he said nothing. As well might a man preach against the nature of things, or the rain, or the Lachlan in flood, or the bush on fire.

"It's—it's like drink," said Jim.

Perhaps what was in Jim's mind touched Sadler's consciousness. He reached out and knocked the ashes from his pipe and looked across to the younger man, who was now in his bunk, and said:

"You see, mate, I have just got to do it. I can't help what I feel. It's here—here!"

He knocked upon his very heart. And with that he lay down.

In a few minutes he seemed to be fast asleep. Jim heard him breathing deeply, even easily. It seemed to the man who was awake that there was something calming in a big purpose. He wished he had one of his own. He knew he was doing nothing for himself and little for other people. He knew he had seen men, like himself, who had gradually become even less, tramps, sundowners, those who traveled seeking El Dorado. He sighed as he lay down.

"If I could only get back to England," he said, "I might settle and do something. This is a fine country, but somehow I am not the man for it. I wish I had some mate to go home with."

He did not go to sleep easily. Bill Sadler's story had disturbed him. Bill was doing something, he had his purpose. Suddenly Jim remembered some one who had once said to him that that was all a man had to live for.

"I might have done a deal better if I had listened to my old father," said Jim presently. "I suppose I am a fool to be here."

As he was falling asleep a loud crackle of the drying wood in the fire almost woke him. It sounded as loud as a gunshot. As he turned over he seemed to hear a cooey in the distance. He wondered whether some belated traveler was looking for a camp; trying to find the old hut, it might be.

"If he came near enough he'd see the fire," thought Jim Grey. And then he really did fall asleep.

When he woke again he had no notion how long he had slept. He was lying with his face toward the old slab wall. By now the fire should have died down a little, but it seemed to him that it was much brighter. It crackled as if new wood had been put on. And suddenly he heard a cough, such as a man might make, and, turning in his bunk, he saw the figure of a stranger squatting by the fire. For a moment he thought that Bill Sadler had got up, finding he could not sleep, and then he saw that the man by the fire was no one he knew. He heard him speak to himself in a kind of snarl.

"Snorin' swine," said the man by the fire. "Comfortable, ain't they? And they 'aven't left no tucker about. And I'm wet, wet to the skin! Nice country this, ain't it?"

And Jim Grey felt a sudden instinctive hatred of the man. But all the same he spoke to him and said:

"Well, mate, if you are wet you can dry yourself, can't you, without waking other folks that were wet a while back?"

And the stranger turned round with a frown.

"Ow, you're awake, are you?" he said. "'Ave you got any tucker?"

He was a sandy man, heavily freckled. He had the air of one who never gave thanks, but took all things as his natural due. Jim knew that there was still two johnny cakes upon the table, but he felt a strange reluctance to tell the man even so much. But at last he did.

"Ow, johnny cakes!" snarled the stranger. "Johnny cakes! Ain't you got any meat?"

"No!" said Jim, shortly.

And the stranger shrugged his shoulders, just as though he thought that Jim Grey had taken what belonged to him. Every word he spoke made him more like those who had ceased to labor and had become parasites.

"What there isn't you can't have," said Jim. "But there's a fire."

"Aye, and I could burn myself in it if I liked, couldn't I?" said the stranger. "I've come down the river, tramp, tramp, tramp, squelch, squelch, squelch, and 'oles in my boots. That's been the day's work. I don't know what I came to this country for. And I was nigh drowned today, let alone the rain. Fell in the river, I did. A little more and I'd never 'ave got out. Got any bacca?"

Jim threw him down half a fig of Barrett's twist. He picked it up without any thanks, but eagerly.

"Lemme your knife."

And Jim even threw him down his knife. Bit by bit the stranger cut a pipeful against his thumb and rubbed it up in his hands and then said: "Why, it's damp, nigh wet."

And suddenly Jim got into a fury. A little more and he would have jumped out of his bunk.

"Is it? Then dry it, damn you!" said Jim.

"Ow!" said the stranger. "Civil, ain't 'e? That's the kind of cove one meets in this country. I just say, polite enough, that the bacca's damp and 'e ups and says, 'Dry it, then, damn you!' Bloody country, this Australia To 'ell with them as sent me 'ere. I wish I 'ad never seen some of them as sent me 'ere."

And the more Jim Grey heard the more he loathed the man. He turned away from him and said:

"Dry up that jaw, and let men sleep. You'll be waking my mate, and if you do that you'll be sorry."

"Ow!" said the other man. "I'm to dry up, am I? I'm to dry up. Whose 'ut is this, I wonder? I've camped 'ere before and maybe I will again. Damn the place. Damn the whole show. O! All right, I'll dry up."

And still crouching over the fire he smoked the damp tobacco he had cadged.

And at last Jim fell asleep again. But he slept uneasily. He woke very soon, and yet perhaps it was not so soon, for the fire had died down a bit. The newcomer was lying alongside of it wrapped in his blankets. He was snoring heavily, and even in his sleep seemed angry and discontented, He was muttering when Bill Sadler woke up and turned round to find Jim was awake.

"I had a dream, mate," said Sadler. "I dreamt of—of him, you know. I heard his voice in my dreams. I should know it if I was dead. I remember when he spoke to that poor girl before me, and the way he did it. I got him by the throat, but she put up both her hands to me and said, 'For God's sake, don't, Bill. Go away! Go away!' When he got his voice back he cursed me and said, 'You get out of this house; she's my wife.' His house and her money Did I tell you that?"

"No," said Jim, "you didn't tell me that."

Then Sadler caught sight of the man camped down by the fire.

"Hallo," he said. "Have we got a new mate in the hut?"

"Aye, he came in a while back," said Jim. "Grousing swine! He wanted tucker."

"Poor devil," said Sadler.

"I told him there were two johnny cakes," said Jim, "and he just cursed them. He wanted meat. He asked for tobacco and when I gave him some he said, 'Why, damn it, it's damp!'"

"Did he?" said Sadler. "There's a lot of men on the road like that. Men who have gone under. What sort of a chap is he to look at?"

"O, just sandy," said Jim.

"Sandy, eh?" said Sadler.

"Very sandy," said Jim.

"My man's sandy!" said Sadler.

"Yes, you said so," said Jim. "Well, if this is the one you want you can take him out and drown him. Good-night, old son."

And once more Jim turned round and tried to get to sleep. He never knew whether he did sleep or not before he heard somebody speaking. It was the man by the fire.

"Them two in the bunks, snorin' and comf'able, and me on the 'ard ground, steamin' in the damp. Curse the bloody pair of them and every one, every one!"

Once more Jim looked out and saw him squatting by the fire, an ugly, gloomy figure, with the blanket over his shoulder, sucking at his now empty pipe and feeding the fire with little sticks. And as the light grew stronger Jim suddenly looked across to Sadler's bunk. He saw that Sadler was not asleep but was lying reared up on both hands and staring at the man by the fire.

Sadler's face was livid. He did not move. He was like a figure cast in lead. And then Jim saw his big eyebrows work up and down, saw his mouth open, saw him moisten his lips with his tongue. Then suddenly he turned his head and saw Jim looking at him. He smiled very oddly and nodded at Jim several times. He held out his right hand and beat down on the air with it two or three times, as if to say, "For God's sake don't do or say anything, because this man, this man is mine!" And when he had moved his hand like that he turned to Jim and nodded once more. And slowly, very slowly, Jim saw him shift his position, draw his legs up and lift them over the side of the bunk.

The fire grew brighter still, and the man who fed it muttered to himself. It seemed to Jim Grey, as he watched, that Sadler saw nothing but the man by the fire, and remembered his mate no more. And he who crouched by the flames hunched his shoulders uneasily. It seemed as if he felt there was some one behind him, looking at him.

Suddenly he turned toward Sadler, and Jim watched, wondering, as the two men stared at each other. Jim knew that his mate's eyes must look dreadful, for he saw the other man suddenly grow rigid and let the blanket fall from his shoulders. He laid down his short clay pipe with a shaking hand, laid it in the hot ashes, not knowing where he put it. Then Sadler spoke. As he spoke he had hold of his hands and worked them together.

"Dickson!" he said. "Dickson!"

"That's not my name. That's not my name," said the man by the fire.

"Bob Dickson,' repeated Sadler.

"That's not me; I don't know him," said the stranger.

But Sadler slipped from his bunk and went toward him. The other man was struggling to his knees when Sadler got close and crouched down beside him on one knee and looked him steadily in the face. He still had hold of his own hands. And he said:

"You liar!"

And the other man tried to speak, but for a moment could not. He put his hand up to his throat and swallowed, and then snarled:

"Well, what if I am Bob Dickson?"

"Where is she?" asked Sadler. "Where is she?"

"Who d'ye mean?" asked Dickson.

"Your—your wife," said Sadler.

"What's she to you?" snarled the other man.

"A lot to me,' said Sadler. "Where is she?"

"I don't know," growled Dickson.

"Where did you leave her?" asked Sadler.

"Leave her? She left me in London," said Dickson.

"You took her little money and came out here with it. I know that," said Sadler.

"That's a lie," said Dickson.

"What is she doing—doing now?" asked Sadler.

"Doing now? How should I know? Go and look for her on the streets," said Dickson.

And even as he spoke he sprang up and got away from Sadler. And Jim saw that he had the knife that he had lent him in his hand.

"Mind, Bill, mind; he's got my knife," cried Jim.

But Sadler, now standing up, was perfectly quiet. He looked in front of him as if he saw no one.

"This hound says I'm to go and look for her on the streets! My little girl! My little girl!"

And then he turned toward Dickson, who shrank away.

"Stand back," he said thickly, "or I will put this knife into you."

But even as he spoke he went back and farther back, round the little broken table, which stood on stakes driven into the earth. And Sadler followed him. And presently, with his eyes still upon Sadler, Dickson felt for the door and turned and jumped through it, with Sadler after him. And even as they went Jim cried out:

"O, Bill, Bill!"

For he knew what was in Sadler's mind. He sprang out of his bunk and ran barefoot after them into the rain and the darkness, which was now lighted faintly by the moon in a broken space of windy sky. By its light he saw the two men like two dark shadows running toward the river. And Jim called out:

"Mind the river, Bill! Mind the river!"

And then he lost them in the thick and crackling brush. But he knew that his mate now had hold of Dickson, for he heard him scream:

"Lemme go, or I'll knife you!"

And he heard Sadler laugh. Then they were down upon the ground together. Jim heard them fall, although he could not see them. He rushed through the tangle of the scrub and was thrown down by the exposed root of a gum tree upon the very verge of the river's bank. He saw the two men rolling over and over and writhing. He heard Dickson scream.

"O, Bill, Bill!" cried Jim.

And then both of them went over the bank. He heard another scream and a heavy plunge into the deep, quiet waters below. He found the path and ran down it and came to the edge of the water and almost slipped in. And then he saw a man's head coming out of the water and some one swimming. In his hand Jim found he held a heavy club of gum. He heard himself say:

"If that's Dickson that comes up I'll kill him! I'll kill him!"

So he cried out: "Who's that? Is that you, Bill?"

And even in the darkness he knew it was his mate, and he held out the stick to him and helped him ashore.

And then he saw the surface of the water, three or four yards from the shore, broken by something else rising. At that moment the full moon shone clearly. There was a hand, an arm, above the surface of the stream, which grasped at the empty air. And then he saw it sink, as if the man who held it up had been drawn down by something in the depths of the silent river.

And Sadler sat down in the slimy mud and sobbed to catch his breath.

"He's gone, he's gone," said Jim in a kind of strange and horrible exultation.

"Aye, he's gone," said Sawyer. But he spoke very, very quietly.

Together they climbed the steep and slippery bank. Now Jim was the stronger, for even when they reached the level ground Bill Sadler leaned upon him. And so they came to the hut. Bill sat down heavily on the little bench alongside the table and laid his head upon his arms. The water ran off him in a pool upon the ground.

"Did he cut you?" asked Jim, who was shaking.

But Bill shook his head.

"Get your things off and lie down," said Jim.

He helped his mate to strip, helped him into the bunk, and covered him with all the blankets they had.

Then he fetched more wood and built up a big fire and set the billy to boil again. He took his mate's things, wrung them out, and hung them up to dry. And Sadler sometimes sighed. It seemed as if he was very weak and tired. And presently Jim went over to him and took hold of him by the hand, but did not say anything. And Bill Sadler raised his eyes and smiled a little wanly and nodded and jerked his head sideways in a curious manner, as if he was thinking and could not speak. And presently he actually slept.

But Jim could not sleep. He sat by the fire and smoked all night till the early morning, which was clear and fine. And with the dawn Bill woke up and Jim saw that his eyes were steady again and filled once more with a purpose, a purpose that was sweeter to his mind. And the two men looked at each other and nodded a little shyly, as it seemed. And Jim went out and filled the billy from far upstream, and came back and made tea for both of them. And after they had drunk it Bill said:

"Jim Grey, I'm going back to the old country, to London, my son. You spoke of going back. Will you come?"

And Jim nodded.

And presently the two men rolled up their swags and set out for Forbes. Jim didn't ride but led his horse. It was now a splendid day, for the clouds and rain had passed. The sun was burning. They walked ten miles without either saying a word. But suddenly Bill said:

"It's mighty hot, mate!"

"Aye, it's hot," replied Jim.

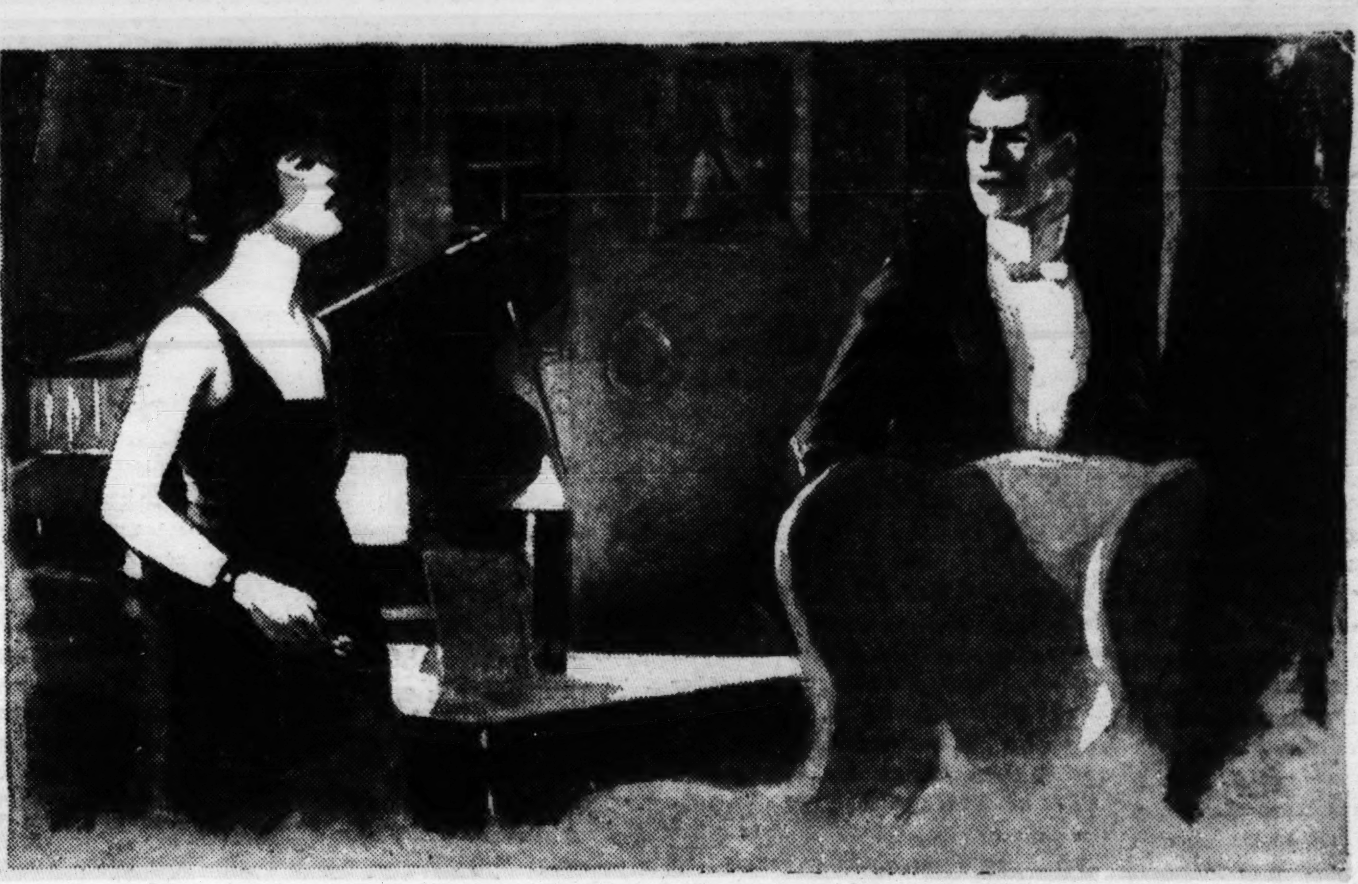
"Hot! I should say so," said Sadler. "I want to fill my pipe; lend me your knife, mate."

But Jim looked at him and never answered. And Bill seemed to think for a moment, and then nodded. But all he said was:

"Aye, you've lost it. To be sure, to be sure!"

friends. The men she had known sooner or later had to be sent about their business; the women who had patronized her had done so a good deal as they would patronize a canary, and they always demand a subservience that her proud spirit could not give.

Because she was so lonely she allowed an apoplectic man, who lived on the same floor and whose hair was still red, and whose age was uncertain, to make her acquaintance. He said that she reminded him of his daughter, and he came and sat in the evenings droning on about his past in the dullest manner, until she felt like screaming at him to go away. Sometimes she prepared her own meals; sometimes she went out over the hot brick pavements to the cheapest restaurants she could find.



"Wait!" Dolores commanded. "You have forgotten something."

Early in September the agent of the apartment house notified her that her lease had been ended.

"Already you owe us for two months," he said. "Besides, there is to be an increase in rent. You can go within a few days."

He paused.

"Who paid for all this?" he said, sweeping his fat hand around.

"I did," she said.

The man smiled. "Well, I will send a moving van around."

When he did he connived to take possion of her piano. It was sold for what it would bring. Dolores did not have any spirit for a controversy. Somehow an evil, subtle conviction had come to her that protest and battle was useless, and that an unchangeable fate was at her heels, driving its talons into her helplessness. There was tragedy in not having a piano; she could practice no more. She often sat for hours in the boarding house room staring at the terrible wall paper.

At these times she would usually end her meditation by unbuttoning the front of her dress before the mirror, and there, upon the white expanse of her bosom, was the Eye of Cleopatra!

"I couldn't afford to keep you, dear, in the luxury of a safe deposit box," she would say. "But you do not mind? Why don't you brighten? You look so dull—as dull as you look when some one is ready to plunge a knife into their own white flesh."

A long rainy spell came in early October, and one morning Dolores awoke with a headache and a sore throat. As she lay staring at the ceiling, a little asway with fever, she thought of the words of Annette. She knew that if this cold were to last she would think of these words sooner or later; but it appeared to her extraordinary that she had thought of them at once as if they were interwoven with these swollen glands in her-throat, and could not be unentangled from the infection that had seized her. When she got up, however, she took off the Eye of Cleopatra, and hid it in the lower drawer of the hideous golden oak bureau. Then she laughed a little hysterically at herself. She had yielded to the superstition; she had definitely said to herself as she had put the pearl away:

"This was the beautiful thing they found in his clenched hand!"

November came. The season in which she had promised herself better days had begun. In the absence of other circumstances she would have beeen seeking bookings for recitals. Somehow she could not bring herself to go. Her clothes, those that were left, were undoubtedly shabby. Furthermore, a great weariness had come upon her. She wanted to sit down always. Try as she would to go through the day, the weariness would go creeping through her body until late in the afternoon, when a restless warmth would follow it through her veins. The cold had not left her. She did not throw it off. But the thought that her voice, which had now broken up into hoarse responses would never return was one that she thrust away constantly, as one might brush aside an ever increasing web of filaments. She dreamed once that the fine entangling strands of fate were being spun by a bright glowing spider, and the body of the spider, when she looked at it closely, was the Eye of Cleopatra. She asked herself if resistance were worth while.

One day she went to see a physician—a business-mannered New York diagnostician, who listened to her story, looking at the ceiling with an air of boredom. After that he listened through a stethescope, pressing the cold metal against her beautiful neck and across her chest, marking dots upon her white skin with a blue crayon.

"Do you lose weight?" he asked.

"Yes."

"I find two spots up here in the right lung, Miss Taraffa," he said. "You need not let that shock you. You can be cured. Once really cured, you will be more immune than I am."

"Tuberculosis?" she whispered.

"Yes," said he. "I want you to go to some place where it is high and dry—some place, however, in this region, so that you will recover under the conditions in which you will live. Can you afford——"

"Nothing," she said.

"I will give you a note to Albers. He has a sanitarium near Lake Placid."

Perhaps it is useless to give an account of the fight that Dolores made. Such battles are without the slightest romance and are made of monotony. Emotion and drama are smothered by routine and the brave soul that bows to that routine and the virile will that goes forward yielding nothing to the enemy day after long day will prove the character of a being and will exalt it.

Dolores in a six months' span cured herself of tuberculosis, but her voice had gone forever. She had learned that human beings when driven to the test are mostly brave and true and kind and can even die wth considerable dignity and make of death a kind of noble event. Again, as when six months ago she had faced the necessity of getting some common job at a few dollars a week, she now faced that long prospect of being a working girl forever. One had to have clothes. Her own were falling apart, as one of the nurses said, and she had only enough money to buy a ticket to Detroit to get the position that had been offered to a professional waitress who had not left the sanitarium and now never would leave the sanitarium to take it.

The pearl was hers. The ten thousand dollar pearl! The pearl with its evil history! The pearl with its baneful influence! She could sell it if she would! But it was the one thing left of Romance, of love, of Robbie. And then there always seemed to be an undefined reason why she should not sell it—why she should never part with it. Why not? It was a fortune! And yet there was a reason. She hung the thing about her neck again before she left for Detroit. It had grown so lusterless and dull!

The job in Detroit had gone out of existence. It had been waiting for her—a position as caretaker of all the linen at a hotel. Unfortunately the hotel had been bought to clear the site for a new office building. The manager told her with brightening of his expression. "Why, there was a hundred thousand dollars for me in this big deal," he said, looking into her startled green eyes, that were still clear and large and beautiful.

Dolores found it difficult to realize that real extremity is real. In luxury and under protection of a kind life one reads of those who cannot pay for the three weeks of lodging house dues after looking about for a position and one reads of going supperless. She could not believe it when it was happening to her. She wrote back to her friends at the sanitarium, unable to believe that the facts she put into the letter were so. If things like this happened to one they were all the more unreal when they happened in the soft and indulgent springtime.

It was Spring! Neither the dingy rows of brick lodging houses nor the smell of the metal works could suppress Spring. It was there with its hurdy-gurdies and the shouts of children in the dusk, and from somewhere the faint whiffs of warm, moist loam from which bright green shoots were sprouting forth.

Dolores saw the arc lights come snapping on and later a man whose feet made strangely emphatic beats on the pavement like the marching of Time over a sounding board, came and looked up at her lodging house. She was joyful when she found he had come for her; she thought he had come to give her employment.

"I am Mr. Mondell's secretary," he said leering at her satanically.

"Mr. Mondell?" she inquired.

"You might not know him," he said contemptuously. "He is known well enough usually. He is one of the largest traders in pearls in the world."

Dolores gasped.

"I tell you we have had a time of it hunting you up," the man said. "A chase from one address to another. And frankly we expected every day since we began the search that we would hear that the Eye of Cleopatra was on the market again. It was desired by a special client and the Japanese dealer put us on the track."

"Well?" said she.

"Well, where is it?" he asked.

Dolores at once was suspicious; she was not going to tell that it lay upon her white bosom.

"I have it in safe keeping," she replied.

"Ha!" said the other with a sigh of relief. "We are leaving town tomorrow. Can you come with me to our suite at the hotel?"

Dolores, for the moment, felt that she had come to the end of her rope and now at the end was freedom from this bane of the evil Eye and ten thousand dollars beside!

"I will go with you," she said.

They went in a taxicab.

Of the risks she was taking she was well aware, but she discounted them by saying to herself that nothing mattered much now in any case. She was at the end of her rope. She was relieved nevertheless to hear Mr. Mondell's voice as she was shown into the parlor of his suite at the hotel.

"Sit down, Miss Taraffa," he said indicating a chair on the other side of a French gilded table decorated with hand painted flowers.

"You can go, Nelson."

They were alone. Dolores and he faced each other under the light—a strange contrast, she thought, because in the long mirror between the windows she could see how poverty stricken she appeared compared to this well dressed, well kept figure before her.

He was a man not tall of stature and with the look of one who in younger days had been stouter. Now he had a little of that wizening of years and austerity which appeared rather pleasant than otherwise. His lips were thin, perhaps a little cruel, but there was a rather kindly and quizzical look in his gray eyes as he sat there calmly enough, studying her and waiting for her to speak.

She felt as if she had come to the end of a long journey; she said nothing.

"If you do not mind my asking—where is the Eye of Cleopatra?" he inquired at last.

She felt that he was not a man to be distrusted. With her small right hand she reached down below her collar, undid the chain, and put the pearl upon the table.

"Ah!" said he, bending over it eagerly, and then after a moment of admiration he inquired:

"What is your price for it, Miss Taraffa?"

"I do not know," she said.

"Do not know! Do not know!"

She shook her head.

"Of course one does not trace a person as we have traced you in these few weeks without finding out—well, how shall I put it?—without finding out the course of circumstances under which you have lived for many months," he said. "It has not been a very—well—prosperous course, has it, Miss Taraffa? It is a most astounding thing that you have not sold this pearl—astounding! Why?"

She shook her head.

"Its sale would rather relieve you from further difficulties, wouldn't it? Say ten thousand dollars in the form of a certified check."

Dolores was staring deep into nothingness.

The other touched the Eye with his fingers. He said at last. "Well? What is your decision?"

"I shall not sell it," she said dreamily.

"Not sell! You must have some reason. Is it a sentimental reason?"

"Perhaps—partly—a little—but just now I have thought of the real reason that I will never sell it."

"And what is it?" he asked anxiously.

"Do you know the superstition about this pearl?" she inquired.

"Why, of course. That is nonsense. I would not be buying it for a man to give his beautiful young daughter if——"

Dolores covered her face with her hands.

"You do not mean that you would refuse to sell it for that reason?" the man said with unbelieving, doubting tone, and spacing his words slowly.

She nodded.

"Because you think it would bring misery to some one else!" He was astounded.

She made no comment.

"But in that case you would throw it away," he suggested craftily.

She picked up Cleopatra's Eye and gazed down at its wonders. "Yes, I will throw it into the lake!"

"You can't mean that you would throw away your chance to save yourself because of the harm the pearl might take to some one else," he said.

"Yes," said Dolores wearily. "I never quite knew, but that is it."

"Is it?" he snapped. "Let's see if it is. I've an idea." He arose, walked swiftly to the door and called, "Nelson!"

"Yes, sir."

"Give me a piece of paper. That scrap will do. Go down to the drug store and get that. Pour it into a glass and bring it to me."

"Yes, sir."

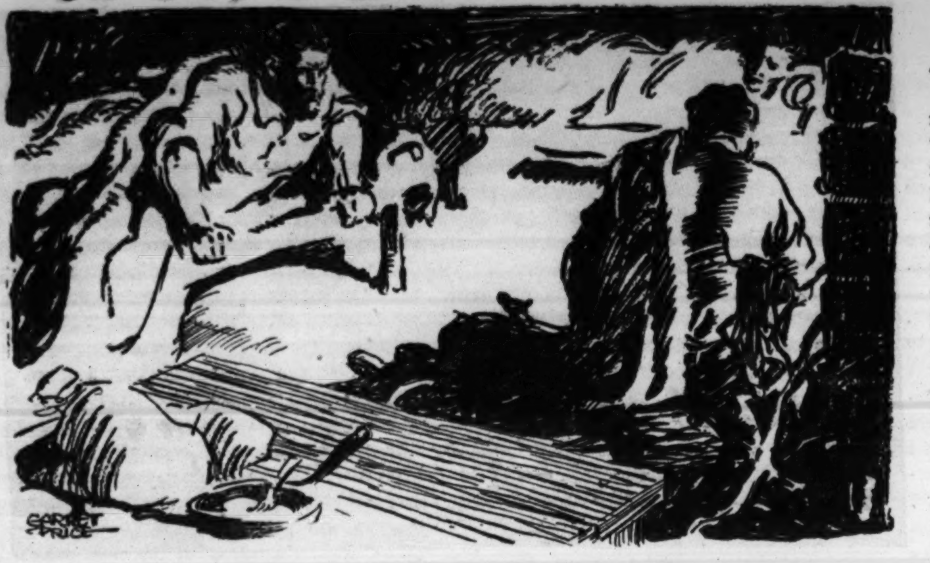
"Now we will see," he snapped in a challenging voice.

He paced up and down the room, now and then glancing at his visitor as if to be sure that like the vision in a dream she had not vanished; only when his secretary knocked at the door did he cease his pacing to take from the other man a glass half full of a clear liquid.

"If we are to have a romantic moment let us have it romantically," he said, putting

THE HUT BY THE LACHLAN

BY MORLEY ROBERTS



Sadler's face was livid. He did not move.

IT took Jim Grey two days' hard riding to get down to the River Lachlan from Conoble, away north in the Back Blocks, and it had rained ever since he crossed the Willandra Billabong. A cold southerly wind blew up with the rain and set him shivering.

"Wish I was in Forbes," he growled. "To blazes with the bush in this weather! It's a fine place for those who like it, but just now I'm hankering for England."

It seemed to him that it had been wet on the Lachlan ever since he left it on his northward journey. He could tell that by the condition of the ground when he splashed through the big swamp on the inner road, which runs along the river from Euabalong to Condobolin.

As he came out of the swamp he saw a swagsman ahead of him. "He'll be for the Old Hut, too," said Jim. And presently it seemed to him that he knew the traveler's walk, even his figure. He was short and sturdy, with broad shoulders, and held himself as those do who are very strong.

"Now where have I come across that bloke?" asked him. "I'm sure I've seen him somewhere." Then he slapped his wet thigh and said: "Why, I believe I met him last year on the Uglo creek."

And presently he drew up alongside the other man, who turned and nodded, but did not recognize him.

"Aye," said Jim to himself, "this is the cove! I recognize his beard and those eyes of his."

The stranger's beard was gray and his eyes were keen, deep set, heavily browed. They looked thoughtful and stern, as if he had been through things. Jim remembered something that had been said about him. The look in his eyes recalled it. A man down on Arria station, not far from the Uglo, had yarned to him about the man with the gray beard.

"He's lookin' for some one, and I'm sorry for the cove when he finds him," said the man at Arria.

"Ah! I remember," said Jim Grey. "They called him Bill Sadler."

And then he spoke.

"What cheer?" asked Jim.

"Why, mate," said Sadler, after a moment's pause, "there's mighty little cheer a night like this. Cold, ain't it? And wet. But you and I have met before somewhere?"

"That's so," said Jim. "Down on the Uglo, a year back.'

"Aye, that's where," said Sadler, nodding. "But I don't remember your name, mate."

And Jim told him his name, and added: "You're Bill Sadler."

"Aye, that's me," said Sadler with a smile. "Why, we was camped together for a week, more or less, down on the Uglo, in weather jest like this. Good coves, down on the Uglo! Pretty free with their tucker, but then it's off a main road, and they don't see many travelers."

"Have you come far today?" asked Jim after a little pause.

"Twenty miles," said Sadler, "and heavy going, too."

"Where are you camping?" asked Jim.

"Well, I was reckonin' to camp at the old hut, jest along here," said Sadler.

"Same with me," said Jim. "Hand us up your swag. I'll carry it for you."

And Bill Sadler swung his swag off his back and handed it up to him. They went on in silence for a good half mile, and the dark came down upon them suddenly. Presently Jim spoke.

"You ain't found that cove yet, Sadler?" he said, almost casually.

"Eh?" said Sadler, starting.

"The cove you are looking for," said Jim, staring at him.

"Oh, him!" said Sadler, without looking up. "No, no; I ain't found him yet."

Jim saw him pull at his beard.

"If I had I shouldn't have been hereabouts," he said, pointing with his hand vaguely, as if he was indicating the whole bush, the deep cut river, the tall gums upon its banks on their right hand. "Not hereabouts, I reckon. Did I tell you anythin' about—about him? I don't remember doin' so."

"Why, no," said Jim, "it wasn't you. It was him they called Ginger. A long, thin cove, working on Arria, driving bullocks."

"O, him!" said Sadler. "Yes, I remember I told him something. The cove I'm lookin' for has a red head, too."

"Ginger allowed," said Jim, "that it was healthy for the other cove that you didn't find him."

And Bill Sadler peered up at him under his eyebrows and frowned grimly. It seemed as if he was thinking deeply and couldn't speak. And Jim Grey repeated his own words to himself: "Not healthy for the cove." It was a way he had of chewing the cud of the things he said or thought.

And then they came to the bend in the winding Lachlan, where the old hut stood. Every man who wore out leather on the Inside road knew it well, though it was half hidden in the gums bordering the river. Just before they came to it they passed close to the Lachlan, which was very low in spite of the weather, for the rain had not been heavy on the upper waters at Carcoar or Mundooneen or any of the ranges east of the plains.

It was quite dark when they turned off the main road toward the hut. They had some difficulty in finding it, and that showed them they would have it to themselves. There was no fire lighted in it, and any fire would have been seen, for there was no door to the hut and it had no windows. It was very old. No one knew who had built it.

It was Bill Sadler who spotted it. He seemed to have keener eyes in the dark than the younger man, or it might be he knew the place better. That was the truth, for he said so, and added: "I come this way pretty often, mate; for reasons—for reasons."

And suddenly Jim saw the dark shadow of the hut in front of him. He dismounted, unstrapped a pair of hobbles from the off side doe, hobbled the horse, and unsaddled him.

"Poor old chap," said Jim, as he rubbed the animal's nose. "It's not comfortable for you, old son, but there's decent feed and plenty of water."

And he went into the hut with his saddle, his own roll of blankets, and Bill's heavier swag.

"I'll make the fire," said Sadler. "'Tis the thing one wants a night like this. 'Tis a'most better than tucker. A fire's a good companion, mate. There's many a man in the bush who has no other friend than a fire. 'Tis his home, his friends, his wife, and his children."

He was down on his knees in the old fireplace, grubbing in the dark for little sticks and pieces of burnt wood.

"Well, you start it," said Jim, "and I'll go out and rake up some logs."

And presently Sadler had a fire begun, no bigger than a man's hand. Yet in half an hour the flames drew up the chimney and the big logs hissed in the falling rain that came down it. By the side of the fire Jim piled a whole heap of small logs and one or two as heavy as he could carry. He hung up his outside damp blanket, which was presently steaming. The other he put in the old bunk opposite the door. Beyond the door there was now a pool of water that gleamed in the firelight.

"What tucker have you got?" he asked, as he stood steaming by the fire.

"Flour and sugar and tea," said Sadler, "but no meat, mate."

"Well, I've got some mutton and a bit of bread," said Jim, "but no flour. I don't reckon to travel with bags just now."

"Aye, you have been doing better," said Sadler, looking at him. "I thought as much from your rig-out and the horse."

"Only so so," said Jim. "I'm working for a cove in Forbes. He's a mean man, I tell you, and I'm full up with the bush. I've a kind of a notion that I'd like to go home to England."

"I reklect you said as much down on the Uglo," mused Sadler.

"Did I?" said Jim bitterly. "Well, I am likely to be spoutin' the same guff for the next ten years unless I get a mate to go mit."

And Sadler looked up at him.

"Some day I'll be back there myself," he said suddenly, "when, when—O, yes, not till then."

"Are you dead sure he's in this country?" asked Jim Grey, turning again to the fire.

"Dead sure," replied Sadler. "I heard of him the last time no later than yesterday. Coming this way he was!"

He put out his bags with flour in them and tea and sugar.

"Here, give me your billy. I'll get some water," said Jim.

"Mind you don't slip in," said Sadler. "'Tis a tricky path, that down to the Lachlan, and the water is deep and dark."

It certainly was dark by the river, and the path was slimy with mud. Just where it turned sideways there was a steep bank, and Jim almost went over it. When he saw the sullen pool beneath him he shivered and climbed down more carefully. Even then he slipped once or twice on the greasy mud. He was glad to get back to the warm hut and put the billy on the fire. Then he took off his coat and shook it and hung it up. He unstrapped Sadler's blankets for him and put the wettest one to dry. By now Sadler had the flour poured out on the table and was making dough.

"Damper or johnny cakes, mate?" he asked.

"The quickest tucker's the best, ain't it?" asked Jim.

"Then johnny cakes," said Sadler.

Presently they ate their meal of mutton and johnny cakes baked on the coals, and they drank their tea almost in silence. But they were both thinking of the same man.

"Every one meets every one along these roads," said Jim to himself. "Here I've met this same Bill Sadler twice. I am always meetin' men I know. We wander everywhere. I am gettin' sick of it."

And when they had eaten their meal they both filled their pipes, cutting up Barrett's twist and rubbing it up in their hands. Jim lent Sadler his knife.

"I lost mine," said Sadler, "at the very last camp I lost it. I'm sorry I did, for it was a good sharp one, quite a weapon."

"Use mine," said Jim.

"Has the river got a move on her?" asked Bill Sadler presently.

"Not a stir," said Jim. "It's only heavy rain east and southeast of Forbes that makes her move. But when she does come down she comes down. I have seen her run a banker here."

"Aye," said Sawyer, "I've seen that, too, mor'n once. I was fair floated out of my blankets one day three years ago. Fine, hot weather it was, too, and a clear sky at night. I woke up early jest at dawn, and heard the water whisperin' like a rat on a log, kind of whistlin'. And I went to sleep again, and the very next thing I knew I was floated out of my camp. Nigh drowned, I was."

"These rivers drown a few," said Jim. "They drown a few."

And Bill Sadler nodded.

"Aye, they drown a few," he repeated, "and they might drown more who'd never be missed."

When he had smoked his second pipe, squatted by the fire, he said, without looking at Grey, who was then on the bench at the end of the table: "Did Ginger, who was down on Arria, tell you anything about—about me?"

He poked himself in the chest with his thumb as he spoke.

"Aye," said Jim thoughtfully. "He guffed a bit, but I don't know whether it was true, mate."

"O, Ginger, he knew," said Sadler, nodding. "I told him years ago. He's a towney of mine. Newcastle I come from, or nigh to Newcastle. It's something to meet a towney in this blasted bush. Did Ginger tell you about—about her?"

"About some woman," said Jim, "but I disremember it mostly."

Bill Sadler went down upon his knees and fed the fire with sticks. Presently he said: "Yes, you wouldn't remember, but I don't forget. She was a pretty girl when I knew her first, mate, and I thought she'd marry me. But she chose the other man and I went off to the States. I'm an engineer, I am, and I worked in steamships on the lakes and on the Mississippi. And I heard she was not happy and I heard he beat her. She'd got a little money, not much. Just a little house property that her father left her. She might have married higher than either him or me. But he took her away from Newcastle and the houses were sold.

"And I found out from a sailor man that he was in Australia, flashin' it with a couple of hundred quid. And the sailor man had known him at home and he asked him where his wife was. And what do you think he said? Now, what do you think, mate, that he said? He said, 'To hell with her! She and me parted brass rags a year ago in the old country. Whimperer, she was!' That's what he said, mate. And this sailor man asked him where she was now and where he had left her. And he would not tell him, but he let on she was all on her own. What he said was, 'Serve her bloody well right.'

"That's why I come out here four years ago. If I get hold of him I'll find out where she is. It's my belief that he brought her out here. I have looked for her in Melbourne and in Sydney. I found out at last he was up here. And I have been on his track this two years, with no money and out of my own work, and having to do a bit here and there jest to keep going. But I'll find him; I'll find him!"

And there was a long silence, and presently he said: "Well, what would you do if it was you and you got him?"

"Kill him," said Jim.

And Sadler put out his hand and said: "Shake, mate; shake hands on that." And the two men shook hands

Sadler got up presently and laid his dry blankets in the bunk on the side of the door, near the fire. He took off his coat and then his shirt and stood stripped to the waist, while he dried the shirt before the fire.

"You keep a mighty good body on you, all the same," said Jim presently.

"Aye," said Sadler, "I always was a stout man. How old do you think I am?"

"Forty-five," said Jim.

Sadler laughed and pulled at his beard.

"That's my gray beard, my son," he said. "It's only gone gray these last few years. I am not 35 yet."

He stopped and looked down, and then said: "Waiting to get even ages a man."

And Jim saw the muscles of his back ripple and grow rigid. And again Sadler repeated: "Waiting to get even ages a cove. This beard of mine, mate, was black a while ago, and now I sometimes think it'll be white before I meet him. And then I think maybe there won't be another gray hair in it before I get my hands on him."

He pulled on his shirt again and sat down on the biggest dry log by the fire, and for the first time smiled a little.

"I shall be glad to be getting back to England," he said, "back to machinery. This country is a fine country for those that like stock, but give me machinery. I'm happy when I hear an old engine pound out her music, mate; it is music to the likes of me. And here only once in a while I get so much as a job of tinkering up an old engine. What will you do, mate, if you go home?"

"Can't you guess?" said Jim Grey, also with a kind of smile upon his sunburnt face.

"I know, maybe," said Sadler. "I've heard of those who hanker to go home."

"Aye," said Jim, "I suppose I should blue my cheque and think what a darned fool I was to be in England when I might have been in Australia."

"That's it," said Sadler. "That's likely. I have met your sort before, mate."

"So have I," said Jim. "The bush is full of us. But it's hard to get out of Australia. The place is like a honey pot and we are the flies."

"Was it a woman who sent you out here?" asked Sadler.

But Jim shook his head.

"I have not seen a woman yet that I so much as wanted to buy a hat for."

And Sadler actually laughed.

"There's a lot of them not worth the price of one," he said. "But it won't matter when your time comes whether she's worth it or not. You are the kind of a cove that will buy some woman a shopful. You crawl out of this mate. and get home. If you like being the glass before her. "If we are to test sincerity let us do it with due regard for historical precedent."

She looked up at him, puzzled.

"You said you would destroy the pearl," he went on. "In all my peculiar set of experiences I have never seen one quite like this. It is not often that one in your circumstances will do as you say you will do. And will you?"

He paused.

"I say, Will you? Cleopatra it is said destroyed a priceless pearl by dropping it into vinegar. She could afford that piece of bravado. Can you? The glass before you does not contain vinegar. It contains a much more powerful acid. If the pearl is dropped into it it will foam like an effervescent lithia tablet and it will dissolve like one."

Dolores smiled.

"Well?" said he. "Come, now. Isn't it rather too much to pay—too much to pay for insurance that no one else may suffer from its possession?"

He laughed. At the end of this short derisive laugh he heard the little splash as the pearl, twisted out of its setting, dropped into the glass. With an exclamation he came and like Dolores bent over the table, resting his weight upon his straightened arms, gazing down.

The Eye of Cleopatra, untouched and unmoving, giving forth no bubbles of disintegration, lay at the bottom of the glass, its blue haze and its pink light emphasized in its immersion. The acid had no effect upon it.

"You have deceived me!" exclaimed Dolores. "It was a cruel trick."

"Perhaps," said the other. "I have a reputation of being a cold-blooded man, Miss Taraffa. They say that of me. But you may think I am not without my romantic side when I tell you that the evil that you thought was in a pearl was the evil of fear that dwelt only in your own mind. You will not think I am lacking in my romantic side when I tell you who I am."

"Who are you?" asked Dolores. "I believe you are the devil himself."

"No," said he. "But my name is not Mondell. My name is Slade. I am Robbie's father. He has come back from a long journey and he has sent me to look for you and take you back to him."

"It is not so!" she exclaimed in her disbelief. "It couldn't be so! It couldn't happen to me, to the owner of Cleopatra's Eye!"

"Perhaps not," said Slade, with his face suddenly drawn into grave, hard lines. "But this isn't the Eye of Cleopatra. You never have been its owner. This thing in this glass is only a clever imitation by a Japanese skilled in such work."

"And there was no evil——?"

He answered after a moment's deliberation. "I said only in the mind. Hidebushiro Ito was discovered over a month ago with a bullet hole in his head and a revolver in his hand. In his other fist they found the real Eye of Cleopatra."

THIS 'ELL OF AN OLD WORLD by Douglas Newton

The Amazing Adventure of a Disconsolate Beauty to Whom 'Nothing Ever Happened'

REGINA said calmly and without rancor every morning: "Nothin' happens in this 'ell of an old world," and she used to take the Swiss alarm clock and choke it with her bolster. Sometimes as she pulled on her mock-silk stockings she wondered if her special segment of heaven would smell so much of early morning bacon as this lodging smelt of early morning bacon.

Then she would go out through the gray air of Water Lane and down Brixton Hill to Poggianni's, the famous Italian café kept by a Bavarian. There she would help wash the plates left over from last night, fill up the sauce bottles so that three partly filled Worcesters made one entirely filled Worcester, don her apron, best side out, and prepare generally for the round of "nothin'" that was going to happen all day.

Regina was the entire "waiting" staff of Poggianni's famous café. She was young, and even in Brixton, where good looks bloom, she was pretty. She was, in fact, pretty enough for a West End chorus or any other sparkling realm where looks are Queen; but she also happened to have a streak of Italian, north Italian at that, in her. She never noticed her beauty in her desire for a steady job.

Her father, who was rather more Italian, had died in a steady job. He had been third man down (her photographic bill) of the Flinghi Brothers' Troop of Unparalleled Gymnasts. One night he had been rather less unparalleled than usual, and had fractured the base of his skull in a manner to earn the reprobation of the second house, the active disgust of the troupe leader, and an inquest on himself.

Already, however, the gymnast had seen to the future of his daughter. Recognizing that the profession would not produce three pounds ten a week forever, he had cast about and had provided Regina with an eternal job. Poggianni, for the sake of an old friendship, accepted her as its one and presiding waitress at seventeen shillings a week, plus all the tuppences weak minded customers left furtively under their plates at the conclusion of the café's indefinable meals.

Regina recognized she was on a steady thing. She knew the world too well to think of flinging her chances away, even in the untrammelled fields of pro'gram and choc'lit selling in the Sinnymas, though she had had offers that were heady. Cinemas were mutable, whereas Poggianni, tips and all, went on forever.

But for all this there were moments when the world seemed stale, and the steady Italian strain was swamped by a wave of that passionate longing for "something" which had passed into her blood from the veins of her sentimental Brixton mother. There were times when she passed from Water Lane into Brixton Rise and saw, striking down toward London, the hill all bright in the sun, and she thought that she must run on the wings of youth down that fairy avenue where the houses shone like new gold, and the trees were gossamer and green, and where even the Chatham and Dover railway bridge was but a span of delight by which folk leaped between two shores of romance. And at the end of that long and shining way, that was merely Brixton road in rainy weather, there would at these times be the promise of "something" waiting for her with open arms. . . .

What it was that plucked at her heart, that caught at her hand, that called her to do reckless things, things that had danger and delight in them, things that defied convention, and caution and the stoic beat of her Lombardy heart, she did not know. It was something that was perhaps foolish, that would perhaps bring her to the unparalleled pass of losing her job—but it was something that tingled like wine.

Not even the striated smells of the café kitchen could keep that dangerous waywardness down when the sun shone bright on Brixton Hill. She would live her day with the thrill of that long avenue of golden promise in her blood, and she would treat her customers like wooden statues or princes—it depended how the emotion swayed her.

Yet "nothin' happened in this 'ell of an ole world." And the night would come with its lodging house and fusty air, and all her dreams didn't come true.

Then, one day, the fat policeman came into the café kitchen, and with a click the whole world was flashing with romance.

He was a most ordinary fat policeman, big and given to feet. He stood amid the almost tangible odors and asked questions and issued commands in a slow, thick voice. He was really a dull policeman conveying a trivial message, but he was bent on making that message awesome, impressive, momentous, and himself something of a visitant from the awful gods. They ought to have seen through him, but the police force is, for such as Regina and the myriad of her kind, so wrapped round in romance that they never see the common clay under the blue cloth and silver buttons.

Poggianni had introduced her.

"She iss lade this morgen. This is her. No, bud I tell you she iss the only waitress I haf."

The big obviously policeman policeman looked at her carefully, as though he thought there might be two of her hidden in the one. Then he said:

"The only young lady to wait on all your customers?"

"I haf tell you," said Poggianni, "she iss the only waidress I haf."

The policeman nodded cleverly.

"She c'n keep 'er tongue shut tight in 'er 'ed."

"She iss a goot girl," insisted Poggianni. "Oh, yess, she iss a really goot girl."

The policeman nodded again, this time weightily.

"Mind carefully wot I tells you, miss," he said. "An' don't you let it go no further. You understands?"

"Oh, no," said Regina. "I won't."

"Well," said the policeman, "'ave you noticed any one strange—queer like in this caff?"

Somewhere inside her breast Regina's breath suddenly caught. She had not thought about the young man with the blue eyes before. If you had asked her ten minutes ago she would have said she had not really noticed him at all. Now, abruptly, out of the welter of mixed customers, out of the hundreds of faces she saw in that faded gilt café, this face suddenly appeared vividly before the eyes of her mind. The policeman was speaking of this young man whom she thought she had forgotten; she could swear to it. So she lied to the policeman.

"Queer," she said. "No, I've noticed nobody particular queer."

"Well, o' course," said the policeman, "they—or 'e p'raps ain't really queer."

"That's perhaps why I didn't notice," said Regina simply.

The policeman frowned. This looked a little like contempt. He said, magisterially:

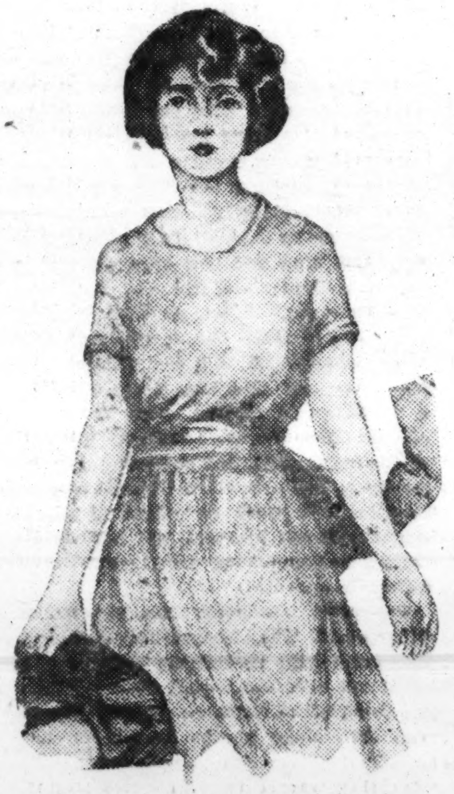
"Wot I mean, actsurely, is, 'ave you noticed any strange customers—or customer—new ones, or one. Some one who 'as begun th' 'abit o' eatin' 'ere."

The lips of Regina's spirit tightened resolutely. She had noticed. Now when she looked back, she did see that the young man with the sharp, clear eyes, had taken the 'abit of dropping in. So she said, ingenuously:

"Our customers is always changing. Some comes a few times, and then doesn't come. Some comes in once, some comes in twice. . . . We don't notice much, there always fresh faces."

"As I toll you"——began Poggianni, but the unbendable look the policeman gave him damned him effectually.

"You've seen nobody new but coming regular, the last few days?" the policeman demanded of Regina.



At the end of that long and shining way there would be the promise of "something" waiting for her.

Regina's mind cried, "Yes, of course, he's been here the last few days." But her soft, unquavering lips said:

"Bosshi & Brisk—they're on this week at the Empress, and they 'ave been coming in for coffee just before the first house; and some of the ladies out of the "Revels in Red"—that's on, too—might be said to be new and yet regular——"

"Huh," mentioned the policeman, and he stared at her for thirty seconds. "Not that sort. This 'ud be ordinary people, or person. An n'ordinary man, say. He might not seem suspicious, but he is suspicious."

Regina shut her heart tight, and said indifferently:

"No, I ain't noticed any of that sort."

The policeman stood rooted, very stolid. It seemed he had said his first little piece, and now had to get on with a new one. He appeared to have moral difficulties. He stared earnestly at Regina. Was she or was she not the right young person to whom even a hint of momentous things might be disclosed? With a mental gesture, which could almost be seen, the large, fat policeman decided there was nothing else to do but to plunge.

"Well, what I want you to do, miss, is to keep your heyes open." He looked deeply at her. "Well open," he said.

"Yes," said Regina, widening hers instinctively to show him how she could do it. The fat policeman said inconsequently, surprisingly:

"You know about the Clapham Park burgelries?"

"No," gasped Regina, "no—only what I've read in the Sunset News."

"Well, it's about them," said the policeman. "Listen careful, miss. We 'ave clues. There 'as been three burgelries, as you may well know. Big 'ouses. The procedoor in each 'as been simlar. That 'as given us clues. We suspect—persons. It is thort; we 'ave grave reasons to assoome—reasons which is neither 'ere nor there to you—that the cul—that the culp—that the burgelers many, in fact, possibly do meet in vesteraunts 'ere abouts to discuss their plans, or to eat, or to get their food generally . . . you follow?"

Regina followed perfectly and with an outward calm. Inwardly she was seeing the young man, the young man with the quick, active manner and the jolly blue eyes, who had taken to coming to the café; who had come and yet seemed out of place, fidgety; quietly so, bht she had noticed it. And at the thought of the young, slight man she thought suddenly of that other one—the big, slow fellow with the obvious feet. He was always in the café when the young slim man was here. Always at the same time, curiously, always the two were in together, though at different tables.

With a gasp of terror she let her glance stray down to the extremities of the big, stout policeman, to his obvious feet. And her heart was hammering, and she said quite calmly that she followed quite easily.

"Well," went on the policeman, "you grasp that then. It is thought that the—the burgelers, one of them, may be, or even more, go to local resteraunts—probably 'ere, as this ain't a very good one. (Poggianni made appropriate sounds.) We is on their trail. We 'ave men on their trail."

"Yes, yes," thought Regina, still mesmerized by his feet.

"But we desire the coöperation of the resteraunts. You grasp that: We want you, you, miss, to keep your eyes open. Anythin', any one suspicious is to be reported instanter."

Regina nodded.

"Yes, yes, I see—But—how shall I know him—or them?"

The policeman frowned.

"We cannot give away our secret information," he said. "But," he bent forward in suicide. Oh, how can I ever forgive myself for using my emotional power that way!"

"It's pretty serious business; that's what it is," says the manager, "and——"

"The first thing she'd better do," Lew cuts in, "is explain to the police."

"I'll explain to the whole audience at the matinée this afternoon," cried Bonaire.

The manager pulled Lew to one side, and they had a long pow-wow in a corner of the room. I couldn't hear what they said, but I could see that the manager was putting up an argument about what ought to be done. Finally Lew agreed with him.

"We've decided," says he to Bonaire, "that you ain't to explain anything at all to anybody."

"Is that so?" says she. "Well, I've decided to make a clean breast of the whole thing to the audience this afternoon. I'll tell them frankly that I'm an emotional actress, but that I never would of done what I did if I had of supposed it was going to turn out in any such horrible way. I would have chopped off my right hand first."

"You ain't going to do anything of the sort," the manager flashes back at her. "There was a line half a block long at the box office, buying tickets for this afternoon. when I came up here; and you ain't going to say anything that may crab the evening performance. All the harm's been done. There's nothing you can say now that will bring that dead boy back again; and the newspaper story is worth all kinds of money to the show."

"Say," growls the manager, "let me tell you something. If the people in this town and the students at the college found out that boy killed himself all through what they would think was a fool joke of yours, what do you think they would do to you? They would just about lynch you. For your own sake you'd better not let on to a living soul that the story you told last night ain't the truth. This thing has got to be kept an absolute secret by us four. Remember that, Claire," he says to me. "And you, too," he adds, looking at Lew mighty hard.

Now, if we had only known then that that college boy had never drowned himself at all, it would have saved us a whole lot of trouble. But we didn't know it. Nobody knew it. Every one believed his body was lying at the bottom of the river; and there we was, pretty near worried to death, with Bonaire suffering from remorse like a regular murderess, while at that minute that two-faced college boy was probably sitting in his room at a swell hotel somewhere, laughing his head off.

If I should live a thousand years I never would forget that Saturday matinée performance. It certainly was awful. If anybody that didn't know the circumstances had wandered in, they would have thought that we were playing to a lot of deaf mutes. Not a laugh! Not one laugh from beginning to end!

Entirely on the contrary. There was a lot of people crying all over the house before the show got well started.

Bonaire got them crying right after she made her first entrance. The stage was dark; and then, "Lights!" and there she was, standing in the back.

Lew's line was: "Why, here's the beautiful Queen of Elfland! How happy she looks!"

When he spoke the line that afternoon, Bonaire couldn't take her cue, but just burst out crying right on the stage; and the curtain had to be rang down.

Lew was furious. He got the manager, and rushed into Bonaire's dressing room, where some of us girls had taken her.

"Cut out this temper'ment business," he roars at her. "What are you trying to do? Kill this whole show?"

"Don't you suppose I got any feelings?" raves Bonaire. "Do you think I can go out there, and listen to your rotten comedy, and be full of pep, after what I've went through? It's a wonder to me I have the heart to step my foot on the stage at all."

She was so upset that it was decided to have Lew go out and make a little speech, explaining that she couldn't continue with the performance. So Lew did it, and I played the Queen of Elfland until the finale of the last part, when Bonaire came out and stood down in front, wiping her eyes.

There was no applause, but the stage manager kept us on for three curtains, just the same. Nobody in the house even got up out of their seats until the lights were turned up. Bonaire certainly did hold 'em.

At the evening performance the house was packed again. Before the curtain went up, the president of the college came around to the stage entrance, and asked to see Bonaire. When he was showed into her dressing room he told her he felt proud to meet her; that she was a heroic mother who deserved everybody's praise and sympathy. He asked her where he could reach her, in case her son's body was recovered; and she gave him the route of the show, and told him how to locate her in New York after our season closed.

When he had gone, she says to me: "Say, I wouldn't go through such a thing as that again for wealth untold. Just think of it! To hear those compliments, and then to hear about the search for that poor boy's body; and all the time to have to pretend that I'm his mother. That takes acting. But, Claire, suppose they find his body, and send it to me!"

She shivered so her teeth chattered.

I couldn't of stood it, if I had been her.

That night Bonaire didn't even try to play her part. She just went out before the curtain at the start, and made a little speech. She begged the audience to excuse her, because, she said, the whole show seemed like a sacrilege to her.

When she came off, and the show began, the audience was in such a state that Al Jolson and Charlie Chaplin, rolled into one, couldn't of got a laugh out of 'em. Lew never had a tougher job in going through his lines. Every time he tried to be funny, the whole audience acted like he didn't have decent feelings.

He and everybody else chopped out all they could, and went through their work as quiet as possible. The slapstick stuff, and the falls was left out; and at the end of one scene, when Lew ought to of run off the stage yelling: "Help! Help!" he sneaked off on tiptoe without saying anything.

When we left town that night a committee of college boys came down to the train to see Bonaire off. They gave her a big bunch of flowers from her son's class, and each one shook her hand without saying a word.

There were four more weeks to the close of our season, and during that time our show was the sickest burlesque show that anybody ever saw. By the crying that went on at every performance, you would have thought that we was playing "East Lynne."

Lew was in a row with the manager most of the time. If he hadn't of had an interest in the show, I believe he would of quit. He had to cut his comedy down to the bone.

Bonaire was the star all right. She dressed in black all the time, and people kept pointing her out on the street. In every place we played, the newspapers were filled with the terrible story of how her son, as soon as he knew who his mother was and seen her on the stage, committed suicide.

Bonaire gave up her part entirely, and just made a little speech afternoon and evening, and came on in the finales.

"You may think it's easy," she says to me, "to go on and tell the story of that poor boy, and act like he was my son; but it ain't. I dream of him every night. I see him splashing and choking in the water; and I try to call out to him in the dark that it ain't the truth—that it's all a lie, but I can't make a sound. Then he sinks, and a few bubbles come up; and I wake in a cold sweat."

She was under an awful strain, and she showed it; but we certainly did the business. Every stand we made, it was the same old story—a sell out at every performance. The receipts since the newspaper story of the college boy killing himself, had brought business up to the biggest the show ever did on a season, and when we closed, even the management was pretty near satisfied.

Bonaire and I settled down in a rooming house on Seventh avenue in New York, for the summer. I wanted a good, long rest, but she didn't know what rest meant.

"This is my chance," she explains to me, "and I mustn't let it get cold on me. The New York papers have printed a lot about me and my son, and I'm going to stick to it that the whole story is true. I'm going to land vaudeville booking on the strength of it—no small time, either.

"Oh, Claire," she goes on, "I've just got to get money enough together to send some poor boy through college. That's the only thing that will ever ease my conscience."

For a month she tramped around booking offices until she landed vaudeville time for six solid weeks at more money than she ever saw before.

The afternoon before she was going to open at the Palace, she goes out all dressed up in black and wearing her mourning veil. I was sitting alone in our room, doing some mending, when, all of a sudden, there come a running trampling up the stairs that gave me such a start I jabbed my needle right into my finger. The door flew open with a bang, and in bounced Bonaire with a great, big fellow that looked like a pirate. She flopped into a chair and burst out crying.

"I've been arrested!" she sobs. "I've been arrested!"

I turned on the lowbrow who was with her. "What do you mean by arresting this lady? You've made some mistake."

"No, I haven't made any mistake," he snarls, "and don't you get fresh or I'll take you along, too. You probably helped her work this thing."

"What are you talking about?" says I. "She wouldn't do anything wrong. I know this lady well."

"So do I," he answers back. "Her name is Irene Bonaire, and she's the party I want; so don't you try to frame up no lies."

"Oh, what shall I do!" moans Bonaire. "What shall I do!"

"What did you do?" I asks her.

"Get your things together, and come along quiet," growls the detective.

"What on earth's the matter, Bonaire?"

"What's the matter!" she screeches. "Why that college boy that was supposed to be my son has turned out to be a thief!"

"What!" I gasps. "That poor boy that killed himself!"

"He didn't kill himself, the faker! He was working for the college—in the treasurer's office—and he stole a lot of money that was paid in for lessons and room rent."

"Stole a lot of money!"

"O-o-over a thousand dollars! and he n-never drownded himself at all. That was all a fake! So that he could make his getaway! Now the police have caught him, and brought him back."

"Well, what if they have?" says I. "That's got nothing to do with you. You didn't do anything."

"No," she sobs, "I didn't do anything! But I told that fool lie that he was my son; and now I'm going to be taken there under arrest. All my vaudeville time has got to be canceled! My big chance is gone! They're going to drag me back there to be confronted by that fake son!"

The tears were just pouring down her face.

"But what do they want you for, Bonaire?"

"Because," she yells, "that rotten liar of a college boy has went and told the police that he sent all the money he stole off the college to his mother—to me!" she screams. "To me!"

LARAMIE HOLDS THE RANGE

"Why, it's like this, Barb," returned Lefever, nothing abashed, "When I seen you crossing down there at the forks I thought maybe you'd lost your bibles or something in the creek. That's the way you acted. But when I seen you and Harry Van Horn and Tom Stone loading your rifles in the timber I reckoned you must be comin' up to ask Jim to run for sheriff on the cattle ticket."

Sarcasm could hardly convey more defiance and contempt. The riders realized they had been watched and that deception was useless.

After much parley and protestations of peaceful intent, provided they were treated fair, Doubleday and Van Horn were allowed to ride up to the rock, but not to dismount. "Now," suggested Lefever to the two, "just talk plain business."

"Right you have it, John," returned Van Horn briskly. "The rustlers have got to go. We're looking for Abe Hawk. Gorman and Dutch Henry are lifting cattle now in the Happy Hunting Grounds. We're going to clean out the rest of 'em. We've tracked Abe here. Without any hard words, we want him."

"Then, boys, you want to ride right on; keep on riding—for he's not here. I don't know anything, but that much I do know," asserted the big fellow positively.

"How do you know?" demanded Doubleday grimly.

"I just walked down here from the cabin; there's no one there. I rode in here this morning from the Reservation, Barb. A buck looking for horses over on the North Fork yesterday saw the fight at Gorman's—everybody knows about it."

Van Horn showed his teeth. "You're a pretty good artist, John, with your buck looking for horses."

Lefever deprecated the compliment. "You must remember, Harry, I worked seven year for you. Seven year—and then didn't get all was coming to me."

"If you had," returned Van Horn candidly, "your headstone would be covered with moss by this time, John. Where's Laramie?"

Lefever stood with his left hand eagerly extended and appeared as if sensitive at Van Horn's incredulity. "All the same, Harry," he exclaimed, "I can take you to that buck inside two hours' ride and get his story. I've got five twenty dollar gold pieces in my pocket that says so. I'll put 'em up in Barb Doubleday's hands right now against your five."

"A man couldn't pry you loose from five twenty dollar gold pieces if you had five thousand in your pocket, John. What are you stalling around for?" demanded Van Horn suspiciously. "Where's Laramie?"

Lefever was frankness itself; almost over-frank in his genuine simplicity. Had it not been for his big, blunt eyes and round, smooth face he might have been suspected of duplicity—but not by the two men now talking to him; they knew beyond a doubt that John was "stringing" them. Unfortunately they could not prevent it. He answered Van Horn's sharp questions as innocently as a child.

"That's more than I can say this minute, Harry, where Jim Laramie is; but he's not far, I can tell you that, for the coffee pot was on the stove when I got to the shack a while ago."

"Then what are you holding us up here for?" barked Doubleday with rough words.

"I'm a peace officer, Barb, a deputy marshal." The bursting expression of disgust on his questioners' faces did not ruffle John's candor. "I knowed what you fellows are up to. I won't have any bloodshed here this morning—that's flat. Laramie gets hot sometimes and this is one of the times for folks to go slow. If you want to talk to Laramie come along up to the shack. But send them long horns over there down to the creek."

"Long hell!" spluttered Doubleday.

"Long Horns," persisted Lefever.

Barb growled at the proposal to send the boys down to the creek, and Van Horn objected profanely, but there was no escape from Lefever's stubbornness, except a fight, and this was not wanted. Lefever passed his word that Hawk was not in the cabin, but he was adamant on sending the men to the bottoms and his demand was grudgingly acceded to. In point of fact, John reckoned himself on foot with a rifle equal to two men on horseback, even if Van Horn were one. But not being able to take care of a dozen horsemen he was resolved to have no volleying applause from other guns, if the unexpected should happen on the open bench land.

After Doubleday and Van Horn's following had at length filed down to the creek bottom, Lefever walked beside the two horsemen toward the cabin, and since he could not walk fast and the two refused to ride ahead of him, the pace was deliberate all the way Nor could Lefever be persuaded even to walk between the two horsemen; he kept them both religiously on his left, his rifle lying carelessly across his forearm as he entertained them with a moderately timed and unfailing flow of Reservation small talk.

But he could not control Van Horn's quick, flashing eyes, and these were busy every moment and every foot of the way with reconnaissance and inference. It did not escape either him or Doubleday that a bunch of horses had been but lately driven over the ground they were crossing, and every trail leading to and from the cabin obliterated; this, however, only assured both that their man was close at hand and strengthened their determination to get him in their own way when they were ready. So intent were they on reading the ground as well as on keeping a sharp eye on the cabin itself that they had almost reached it before Van Horn, halting, fixed his eyes on the hills to the left—that is, down the creek, and exclaimed sharply: "Who's that?"

Riding in a leisurely fashion down and out of the rough country to the south, a mile away, a man merging from a rift between two hills could be seen following one of the cattle trails toward the creek.

Lefever after a minute's study answered the question blandly: "I'm thinkin' that's Jim Laramie, right now."

order to make Regina understand how greatly she must appreciate this concession—"but to 'elp you, I am allowed to say it is sum—it is summised that one of the suspected parties, is thought to be, is probably in all likelihood, a small man."

"He is small," cried Regina's heart. "He is slim and small."

"I will go so far as to say it is thought—for reasons which is neither here nor there, to you—he is of light build, probably, slim; thin perhaps, of low 'eight, with small feet—generally, speaking, you see a small man . . . p'raps small and smart."

"I would call him smart," said Regina's terror-wrung heart, and "O I wish I could make this policeman think he was big and shabby."

The policeman was looking at Regina closely.

"You foller all that?"

"Yes," murmured Regina, with a perfectly natural-looking artificial smile. "Yes, I understand what you mean. A small man, slim, p'raps smart. I'll—I'll look out for a man like that."

"And report instanter," insisted the policeman.

"Yes," said Regina's lips and her heart shouted "no—no, I won't."

She spent all that day in a passion of excitement and terror. She thought all day of the small, slim man with the quick, attractive eyes. She thought, "They are after him, an' 'e doesn't know. Only I know." She thought of him wending his perilous way, unknowing, unrealizing with big men with unmistakable feet, ready to pounce. She thought of him eating poached egg on spaghetti, quietly, calmly, as if the world was not a dangerous place, while over at the corner table the large man sat and drank lager and watched with "I arrest you in the name of the king," absolutely ready on the tip of his tongue. She thought of the quick blue eyes living unsuspected through these perils, and she said cinematographically, to a shelf of condiments:

"And only me stands between him an' his doom."

Once only she thought, "The Clapham Park burglaries—'Es a thief." But she did not experience even a flicker of horror at the thought. The idea "'e is in peril—they'll pinch 'im, sure to heaven," was more real, more actual and important. She saw those attractive blue eyes, in a dish of sweetbreads, and she muttered as the tender one in the "pictures" might well have muttered: "Only me between 'm and—" and "what," she did not know, but always she saw those unmistakable feet.

Towards six o'clock her heart was thrumming dangerously, and more than one customer had said cuttingly:

"When I orders strawberry ice fer me lady friend, I don't really want caufee an' er roll."

Just about six o'clock was his time; his time and the time of the big man who sat silently, drinking lager and ready to spring.

They came about half past six.

She had been in the kitchen explaining to the cook that when she had ordered ham and eggs she had really meant hamburg steak. It was an acid and prolonged explanation, for the cook was "fed up" with the way things 'ad bin 'appening all diy.

When she came back to the restaurant they were there. The blue eyes were looking up brightly, humorously from the lean, brisk face, motioning her to come across and take the order, and in the corner sat the big man silently contemplating the stein of lager he had procured from Poggianni at the counter.

Regina's heart crashed, she almost dropped the plates with the tin covers she was carrying, and she threw a frightened glance at the slim young man—a glance which she quickly changed into one which, she hoped, said plainly: "Beware, they're on your track. You are watched."

Possibly she had not had enough practice in glancing, for the only effect of this one was to make the young man smile pleasantly at her and say in a soft voice when she confronted him:

"You are a pretty girl, Polly. What are you doing in this one horse sort of place?"

Regina's heart sobbed, but she answered calmly in the manner of her vocation:

"Takin' orders. What's yours?"

As she turned away she saw that the fat man in the corner was staring at the slim fellow. He was looking craftily into the mirror by the side, in a way suggesting he was not interested in the crowd in the restaurant. But by means of that mirror he was examining the young man with a stodgy, unemotional carefulness. He was going over him thoroughly, not missing a button. Regina could have shouted a warning. She stared at the fat man, and she knew—knew he was making up his mind finally. He was deciding that the young man was the man.

Regina saw that the critical moment had come. She must act. She walked over to the fat man; she asked him if she could get him anythin'.

"Oh," he said, and, "Now—oh—'amburg steak."

She went into the kitchen feeling nerved up to great events. Hamburg steak did not seem an instrument of the gods, but she could make it so. "He'll wait for 'is 'amburger," she muttered. "It'll give us time—time." She stood staring at an enormous jar of pickled cabbage wondering what she should do. What did they do, she wondered, thinking of the decisive people in the "pictures." But she could not think of anything remarkable save one word. So she wrote the one word "Beware!" on the back of a meal bill and slipped it in front of the young man when she took him his food. She frowned down at him, and with a movement of her eyes she indicated both the need of caution and the presence of the mirrors through which he could be watched.

But she thrilled at the quickness of the slim young man. He read the single word without lifting the paper from the table cloth, then with an adroit finger drew it into the palm of his hand, crumpled it, and it was gone. Without the betrayal of a muscle he addressed himself to the humdrum business of his meal. Only from the kitchen door did she observe that by casual and brilliantly noncommittal glances was he scrutinizing the big man with the emphatic feet. He had understood, though his usually mobile face gave not the slightest sign, not the barest indication of the tremors that he must be experiencing.

He ordered a sweet presently, and, cleverly interpolating his remarks in his order, he asked:

"What's it all about, Polly?"

"'E suspects you," she said softly. "'E's watching you."

"Is he? the brute!" said the young man with the air of one discussing college pudding; and then, talking really of college pudding: "Is it worth eating? What makes you say that of 'im?"

"It's no worse than most things," said Regina, speaking of the pudding. "I know why 'e's watchin' you," she went on. "That's why I've watched 'im."

"Oh, you know," said the young man softly.

"Everythin'," said Regina. "That's why I warns you."

"Oh," said the young man again. "An' you think our fat friend knows everythin', too? I think I'll risk it." This referred to the pudding.

"'E knows somethin'," said Regina. "'E watched you yesterday—but not 'arf as much as today. 'E's sure of you now." She stared down at him with eyes a little dilated. She was looking into those attractive, jolly, blue eyes; she was thinking with terror that those eyes might—might be shut away. "Oh, do be careful," she said with her heart in her voice, and she went away to the place where college pudding was created.

As she went out the fat man scowled at her and demanded:

"Wot about my 'amburg steak?" She put a knife and fork before him, and told him it was just coming. "I carn't wait a 'undred years," he insisted. "Time's valuable." She thought it was, too; she thought she had made good use of it. She brought him his steak at the same time as she transported the pudding.

"You're a good girl, Polly," said the young man as she put the pudding down. "I want to 'ear more of this, you know."

"I carn't talk now. 'E'd suspect."

The young man looked carefully through the gravy engrained menus, as though ready to venture on another dish.

"How did you know everythin'?" asked the young man.

"I carn't talk," said Regina again, "and then: "We've been warned."

The young man smiled suddenly.

"Oh," he said, "the police—they would poke round?"

"Yes, they warned us," whispered Regina fiercely in a sudden, complete avowal. "They tole us they 'ad clews. They tole us they was—was on the track of the man—an' we're supposed to watch. Watch an' report instanter."

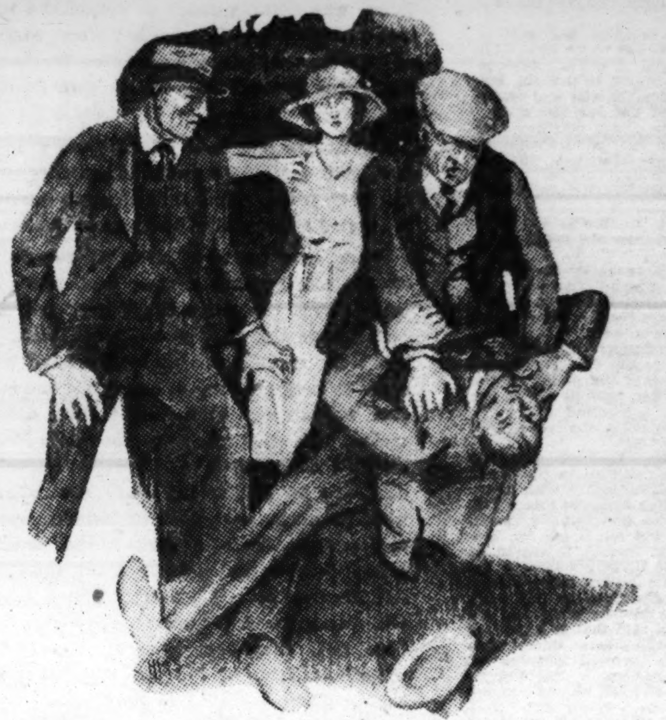
"Look 'ere," said the young man, staring down at the menu. "Look 'ere, I've got to 'ave a talk with you."

"You carn't," Regina cried softly, her heart hammering tumultuously. "You carn't, in 'ere."

"I know," said the young man. "Where?"

"I don't wan' to be mixed——" began Regina, and her eyes caught his steady blue ones and she faltered; for the life of her she could not resist his appeal, she could not refuse him the help in sore distress that tender women must always give. She cried rather breathlessly: "I'm off at seven tonight."

"Oh, tonight," said the young man, and he stared for a long thirty seconds at the menu. "All right, then. Do you know Crescent Lane, Clapham—— Well, meet me there, at the corner of Elms road. Don't forget, eight o'clock sharp."



Before the men could recover their wits blue eyes had the light man.

Regina went into the kitchen and sat down. She couldn't have taken an order for "love or money," she thought. She just sat down and let her heart drum on, and her mind was saying, "Crescent Lane, that's Clapham Park. Clapham Park, that's—that's bureleries!" She felt somehow she wanted to sing, and yet somehow she wanted to cry. Burgeleries—she ought to hate burgeleries, and yet jolly blue eyes—they made burgeleries somehow, different.

He said to her without greeting: "Come along this way, Polly." And he took her arm in his fingers. She could feel the sort of cool power in the grasp, and an overmastering thrill shot through her. He hurried her along the road through the soft dusk until they got to those that looked countrified, where the houses stood in large shrubby grounds, where there were wide open spaces, and big trees in the road. He stood for a moment looking up and down the road, looking for a suitable place, and at last found a tree in whose deep shadow they hid, looking out into a patch of light thrown by a street lamp. The young man kept his eyes on the patch of light.

"Now, Polly," he said softly. "Just how much have you got to tell? Go ahead."

"My name's Regina," she answered, conscious that his strong fingers still rested in the soft crook of her arm. "Well, they came to us and told us about these—these burgeleries, the policeman did——"

"Leave out the policeman," he said, "tell me about the other man—the fat feller in the corner. D'ye know anything about him?"

"He's watching you, I know that," said Regina. "An' I know why. The policeman said they had a man on the track."

"All right—all right," said the young fellow. "I can guess all that part. But the fat feller, how long's he bin comin' to Poggianni's?"

She stared at him a little surprised, longing to see his face in the dusk.

"Why, no longer than you," she told him. "He never came before you did."

"Ah," breathed the young man, "I see. I was on him first chop. Wot about any other man? 'As he come with any other men? 'As any other man come in—casually, perhaps—and sat down at his table, and talked?"

"Good lor, no," cried Regina.

"Not a little man, small man, f'instance, of light build, probably slim, thin you might call him——?"

"A small, slight man," gasped Regina, startled beyond words. "A small, slight feller, slim——"

"That's it. 'Ave you seen 'im in Poggianni's?"

"A small, slight man, with the big one? No, Oh, no," murmured Regina faintly.

"Sure?"

"Positive," cried Regina. "Why I thought that——"

"Well, I don't think you 'ave, either," said the young man, and then in a disturbingly intimate tone: "You'd 'ave noticed; you don't miss much. They're all wrong. I tell them they are. Crooks don't give themselves away like that—advertising theirselves as large as life in restaurants.

"Then you mean to say you ain't——" blurted Regina.

"Shiss," said the young man. "Look out."

Both stared into the gathering darkness, footsteps sounded distantly, and there were voices. Regina was getting dazed, yet a joy of relief was in her all the same. She seemed to know the magical hand was all about her, and it was all golden, golden without a flaw. She laughed softly.

"And I thought it was you who was 'im," she whispered.

"I think it was me all the time as far you are concerned. You're awful pretty, Regina," he said to her, and he turned from gazing into the darkness and looked into her face, and their faces were very close, and between them there seemed to come the flame of one smile; a smile of youth and joy, of understanding and mutual trust. His fingers slipped higher round her soft arm until he was hugging it tight to his breast, and their eyes caught and were tangled in smiles again. The voices and footsteps sounded near and he peered into the darkness.

"Shiss," he said, and his strong fingers thrilled upon her arm, and in a whisper he asked, "You don't funk things—Regina?" She shook her head slowly and slowly smiled, he turned back to her and caught her smile. "I know," he whispered, "I know you all through."

Into the patch of light came two men. A tall, fat, sullen man with unmistakable feet; a small, slim, smart looking man, light of build and thin—one might call him. They came on talking in low voices and with an agitated earnestness. The young man with the blue eyes clicked his tongue.

"They're together at last—I've got 'em both." He moved away from the girl, but was back in a moment, and had slipped something into her hand. "You will know when to use that," he whispered. "Don't 'esitate." With that he had snapped out into the patch of light, was standing before the two amazed men.

"Jones! Levenstein! I want you. You know why. No tricks now; no 'anky. We've got yer."

Before the men could recover their wits blue eyes had the light man; had him by the neck of his coat, and with a twist had brought him to his knees. He watched the big fat fellow through all these movements. Watched him—certain that he would attempt a rescue. And he did. He jumped at blue eyes, and blue eyes, with a laugh, gripped him round the body and held on like a bulldog. Big fists went upward and thumped down, but like a bulldog blue eyes hung on. And Regina was blowing the police whistle the young man had given her, blowing it like mad.

But it seemed hours before the first running feet of the police force came, and the big fists went up and down—in spite of Regina's young, strong, clutching hands.

The golden hill was golden for all time then. Something had happened in this 'ell of an ole world. It had happened no further away than in the heart of the commonplace, in Poggianni's itself.

The judge congratulated Detective Inspector Henry Walsh on his smart capture, and complimented Regina Milani on her pluck in aiding the police in bringing to book the desperate rogues of the "Clapham burgeleries." And he ordered that a certain sum of money should be given to the plucky heroine as a reward for her courageous act.

"I don't like to take it, Harry," said Regina somewhere behind the court.

"Rats, why not, Regina!" said Detective Inspector Henry Walsh, and he caught her arm in his cool, strong way. "Just think of it as another little wedding present."

"MOTHER STUFF" by Thomas T. Hoyne

THE orchestra in the Green Room Café has achieved fame for the pathos with which it renders sob songs. The saxophone artist with his glittering horn, bending about like a trained seal; the banjoist, swaying from side to side; the cello player, teasing his throbbing instrument with gestures that continually promise to crush it to his breast; the drummer, pounding out the muffled rhythm of the barbarian, and the pianist —each melts his singular melody into one, rich, choking harmony.

The last notes of "I'm in Heaven When I'm in My Mother's Arms" died away. A chorus girl sniveled. A rounder, become for the moment grave and stern, hammered for a waiter whose alertness had softened with sudden sorrow into pensive inattention. The manager of a crooked pugilist spoke an ameliorating word for a dishonest baseball player. "He was always good to his mother," he urged in extenuation.

Claire, of the Bon Ton Burlesquers, looked up through her tears.

"Ain't it fierce the way that mother stuff gets ya!"

A practiced criminal lawyer blew his nose audibly. He won most of his cases when defending murderers by having the mother of his client sit in court—spotlighted, as it were—and weep in full view of the jury. If a client did not happen to have a mother, this lawyer provided one for him.

"Half the time," continued Claire, "it ain't on the level. But it gets ya just the same. It put one friend of mine completely on the bum. Only yesterday I got a letter from her. Flat broke she is, out of a job, and——"

. . . .

You can't get anywhere on the stage unless you have temper'ment. Any other chorus girl can tell you that, the same as I do. Even when an actress has it she may have to wait and wait and wait for years before she gets her big chance. That was the way with Irene Bonaire, but the queer thing about it was that she got her big opportunity for emotional work while she was with our burlesque show.

She was just full of temper'ment. It stuck out on her like warts on beauty, you might say. We all noticed it right away when she first joined on with us late in the season to play the Queen of Elfland. Our original queen had made a hit in the turn she did in the olio, and got to thinking she was good enough for vaudeville; so she gave notice she was going to quit us.

We were just closing our week in Chicago when Bonaire came round to the theater and spoke for the part. Lew—that's Lew Ricketts, our director—signed her up right away, but he was jealous of her from the start. The first day that she showed up for rehearsal he sailed in to make it unpleasant for her.

"You ain't playing 'Madame X' now," he snaps at her, "so don't be so up-stage. In this show you ain't supposed to be a outcast mother that's weeping and moping over a son who don't know who she really is. This is a burlesque show intended for to make people laugh; so try to look as young as you can and get some ginger into you."

It was a rotten shame the way us girls in the chorus giggled, but Lew was our leading comedian—besides being director—and comedians want to get their laughs whether they're on or off.

At the time I didn't know that Bonaire really had been out with the Number 3 Company of "Madame X" for twenty-six weeks. She told me about it afterwards.

"That's my game," she says to me, "a big, emotional part with plenty of weeps in it. But what are you going to do when times are like they are now? An actress that's got any art would be better off if she was a bender or could swing Indian clubs."

Less than a week of rehearsing broke Bonaire in, and she was all ready to go on when our original queen finally did quit the troupe in Cleveland.

After her first performance she asked Lew how he liked her work.

"Oh, you'll do," he says in an offhand way, "only don't throw on so much dog."

She flared up in a minute.

"The part demands dignity," says she. "A queen's supposed to be somebody."

"Rats!" sneers Lew. "You ain't got over thinking you're an actress yet."

Later Bonaire says to me: "These comics that get all their laughs by falling down or hitting some one in the face with a bunch of celery don't know what acting is. That queen wants to be played with all the dignity I can put into the part. It makes the contrast for Mr. Ricketts' comedy. Why, in that bit between he and I in the second act, it's me that gets all his laughs for him—by never letting down in my serious dignity. But the people you play up to on the stage give you no credit. The audience knows, though. You saw the hand I got with my first song."

As a matter of fact, it really was the chorus that made that first song of hers go big. We were supposed to be fishermen, and we came on dressed mainly in nets. Bonaire sang the song with a fishpole in her hand and angled into the audience. It was a new novelty that season.

"Don't you mind Lew," I told her. "You'll get used to burlesque after a while."

"It makes me sick," she says. "There's no satisfaction in it. Monkey shines ain't acting; there ain't any art required in getting laughs. 'In Madame X' I used to have 'em weeping all over the place in the big scene where the son is defending his own mother in a murder case but doesn't know who she really is. It's the mother stuff that makes 'em cry; and making 'em cry is art."

In our burlesque wheel every show had to book two weeks at theaters outside of the regular circuit. One of those weeks we always played in the late spring, and two days of it—Friday and Saturday—at a town about ten miles from Dartford college.

It always meant big business for us to make the jump, because the college boys came over in flocks to kid the show. But it was a mighty tough job playing those performances.

Bonaire had been with us about a month when we hit the town where we always got the big college crowd. At the matinée on Friday we didn't do much, but at night the house was packed with college boys. Right from the start they began their rough work, too. Every time that Lew came on the stage they all yelled at him together:

"Leave us see you scramble like an egg!"

And whenever us chorus girls came on they all began to holler: "Where's the girls? You claimed there was girls with this show. We want girls!"

It was fierce. Long before we got through with the first part there was such a noise going on in the house that you positively couldn't hear a thing on the stage. It was quieter during the intermission, but when the olio started the noise got worse than ever.

There were only two turns in the olio—a quartet and a dancing act. So far as the quartet was concerned, they might just as well have stood out there and made faces for all the singing anybody could hear, and during the dancing act the yelling and cheering was so loud that the pair who did the turn couldn't keep time with the orchestra.

Where college boys get their manners at is what I would like to know. I never played one of those Alaska mining town honkatonks like you see in moving pictures, but nobody can make me believe that rough miners are any worse than a crowd of college boys.

Just before the curtain was to go up for the second part Lew sent word round front for the house manager to come back on the stage, but the house manager sent word back that he was busy counting up and that he couldn't do anything anyhow.

"We can't go on like this," says Lew.

When he made the remark Bonaire was standing right beside him, and she says to herself in a voice loud enough for him to hear:

"I could quiet this house in two minutes."

Lew swings round and looks at her with a nasty sneer.

"Drug 'em, I suppose?"

"No, Mr. Ricketts; by appealing to their emotions.

"Don't make me laugh," he says. "Why didn't you do some of that appealing during the first part? You had chances enough."

"Burlesque and horse-play ain't my line, Mr. Ricketts, and you know it; but if you have the curtain raised, and let me go out on the stage alone, I'll show you something about handling an audience."

"That audience wouldn't listen to anybody."

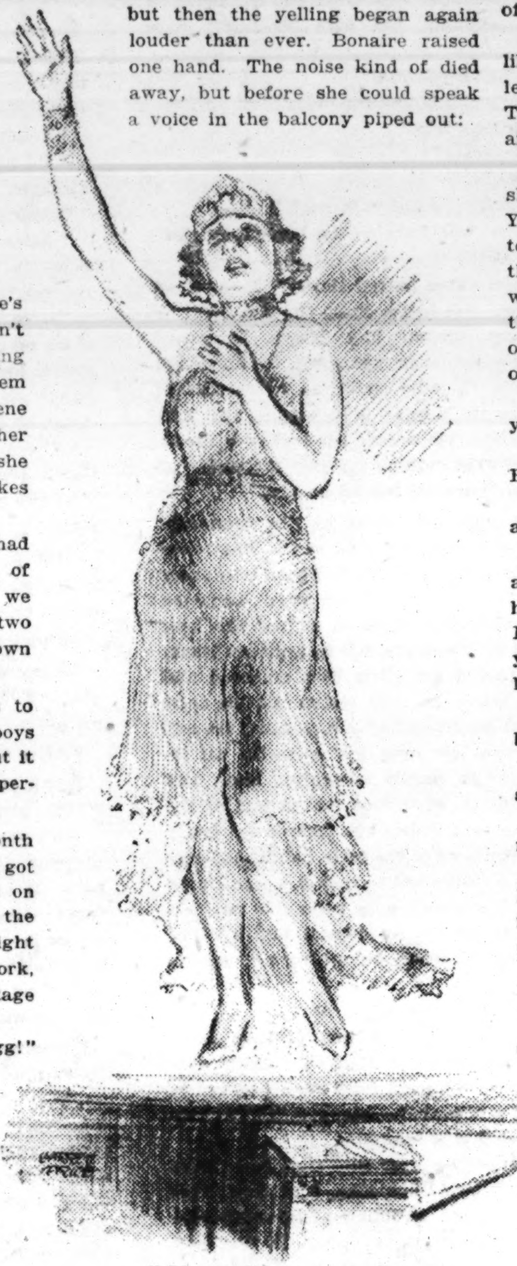
"I can make 'em listen to me," says she, "if you give me the chance."

"Go ahead, then. Tell 'em the story of your life, if you want to. It may be funny enough to make some of 'em think it's part of the show."

But there wasn't anything funny about it. It was the fiercest thing I ever saw in all my life.

The curtain was raised on an empty stage, and Bonaire walked out all alone, down to the footlights at the center. The rest of us crowded into the wings to watch her.

At first there was a little hush, but then the yelling began again louder than ever. Bonaire raised one hand. The noise kind of died away, but before she could speak a voice in the balcony piped out:



"Please listen to me!"

"Hey, lady, which one's mother are you?"

There was a roar of laughter, and the whole house began to shout: "We want girls! This show claims it's a girl show. Where's the girls?"

Bonaire takes out her handkerchief and begins to cry. She didn't cry loud, but just sobbed and sobbed. The noise quieted down a little.

"Please, gentlemen, please!" she begs through her tears.

"Is that your college cry?" some one in the back yells at her.

There was a laugh, but it wasn't so loud. A boy way down in front jumped to his feet, and turned to face the audience. "Why don't you give her a chance to say what she wants to?" he shouts. "It may be some good news. Perhaps the comedian is dead."

For a couple of minutes after that you couldn't hear anything. The house wore itself out laughing, while Bonaire stood there and begged for silence.

"Let me tell you a true story," she said over and over again. "Oh, please be quiet—just for a minute."

But they kept yelling at her, "Sing it!" "Dance it!"

"Please listen to me! Please!" she pleads.

Two or three boys interrupted her again, but others began to hiss, and finally there was something like quiet.

Bonaire wiped her eyes. "It'll take me only a minute," she says. "Only a minute. Be that fair to me, boys. Listen without insulting me for just one minute."

By that time there wasn't a sound.

"I have a son in your college, boys. My son! He may be sitting out there among you now. He doesn't know who his mother is."

We heard a gasp go all over the house.

"He's working his way through college, but I send him what money I can every month to help him. He doesn't even know that it comes from his mother. He doesn't know how I earn it on the burlesque stage. Please don't interrupt the performance again. Oh, I can't stand being insulted by my boy's friends."

Then she broke right down, and hurried off the stage.

Well, you could have knocked me over with a feather. The same went for Lew and everybody else. There wasn't any noise when the curtain went up again, for the second part. Bonaire had certainly taken all the rough, mean stuff out of that audience; but she had taken all the life out of the show, too. The way she told that story made most of us girls cry.

The rest of the performance was more like a funeral service than a rattling burlesque show. The audience was just dumb. They didn't applaud anything. They were afraid to laugh. Laughs seemed out of place.

Every time that Bonaire came on the stage she wiped her eyes and gave a brave smile. You could see that those college boys wanted to cheer her for her grit, but they were afraid that she might not understand what they were cheering about; so they didn't do anything. Part of the audience was so ashamed of themselves that they got up and sneaked out.

"You rather overdone this thing, didn't you?" asks Lew.

"Oh, don't talk to me now," answers Bonaire. "My nerves are all unstrung."

The curtain finally came down, and it was a relief to everybody all round.

When we got to our room, Bonaire was all wrought up. "Well, I guess I showed him, didn't I?" she kept saying. "I guess I taught him something about acting. I tell you, Claire, it takes art to hold an audience like that one."

The next morning, before we were out of bed, there came a big pounding on our door.

"Who's there?" Bonaire calls out in a sleepy voice.

"Open the door, quick!" shouts Lew. "It's me and the manager."

We got up and put on our kimonos, and Bonaire unlocked the door. Lew and the manager burst into the room like a couple of bloodhounds that had just broke loose.

"Have you seen the papers?" they both yelled at once.

"We ain't hardly got our eyes open yet," says Bonaire. "What about the papers?"

Lew took one that was folded back, and shoved it into her hand.

"Read that!"

She looked at the newspaper, and her mouth dropped open and her eyes stuck out so that you could have knocked 'em off with a stick.

"Oh, my God! my God!" she screams. "Who ever would have thought such a thing could happen."

She threw herself on the bed, and carried on something awful. I took the newspaper away from her and looked at it.

There, on the front page, was a story under great, big, black headlines that made my blood creep. Chills started in at the bottom of my feet and run all over my body while I was reading.

If anybody had of told me, I wouldn't of believed it; but there it was in black and white. One of those college boys had gone and committed suicide. He had drownded himself the night before, right after the show was over.

The police had found his clothes on the bank of the river, and along with them a letter saying he never knew before who his mother was, or where the money that he used to get every month came from. When he found out and remembered what he had done during the first part of the show, he couldn't stand the shame of it. He begged his mother to forgive him.

The newspaper went on to say that the boy was a new student in the college, and that everybody supposed he was an orphan who was working his way through.

"That's a nice thing, ain't it?" says Lew. "She ought——"

"See here, Lew," I interrupts, "you oughten to talk that way to the poor thing at a time like this."

"Good Lord!" he cries. "That story she told wasn't true, was it?"

He looks at Bonaire, and then goes on with a mean sneer: "No wonder she broke down on the stage. She was telling the truth. There wasn't any acting about it. That's why the audience listened to her."

Bonaire sat right up on the edge of the bed, and wiped away her tears with the sleeve of her kimono.

"Don't talk about things you can't understand, Mr. Ricketts," says she sharply. "I never had a son in my life. I guess I ought to know. I just acted that story too strong, and that poor, orphan boy believed I really was his mother, and went and committed

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman, whom she likes, and

TOM STONE, foreman at Doubleday's ranch, whom she does not like at all. Also she hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, about whose character there seem to be sharp differences of opinion. Laramie, she gathers, is a figure of some importance in a war which is being waged between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country. One day at the eating house, meeting a stranger whom she believes to be a marshal with papers to serve on her father, Kate lures him away into the plains on the pretext of taking a ride with her, only to find to her chagrin that the man is not a marshal at all but Jim Laramie himself. Subsequently she learns that the real marshal is a man named

JOHN LEFEVER, a likable character who has been maintaining an impartial attitude in the cattle wars. Soon after Kate's first encounter with Laramie, Doubleday closes his eating house at Sleepy Cat Junction and the girl goes to her father's ranch. She tries to avoid Laramie, but meets him on several occasions and, in spite of herself, begins to be interested in him. Meanwhile Laramie has been approached by men from the Doubleday outfit with a proposal that he line up with them in the feuds that are under way. This he bluntly refuses to do, and thus he has no part in a raid that is organized presently by Doubleday and others under Van Horn's leadership with the avowed purpose of "cleaning out" the cattle rustlers in the Falling Wall country. The raid is directed chiefly against ABE HAWK, known both as a "bad man" and as a friend of Laramie's, and three of his associates —Dutch Henry, Stormy Gorman, and Yankee Robinson. The raiders first lay siege to Dutch Henry's cabin, and Tom Stone starts things by shooting Gorman down when he comes out of the shack. In the fighting that follows one of Van Horn's men is killed and two are wounded. Toward night an attempt is made to fire the cabin by rolling a blazing hay wagon down upon it, but some one within wrecks the wagon by shooting at the wheels, and the attempt fails.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

Abe Hawk at Bay.

WHEN midnight came the men had been fed and the watch well maintained. A steer, interned earlier, had been cut up for the men's supper, and Van Horn and Doubleday were seated together before the camp fire near the creek eating some of the reserve chunks of meat when a hurried alarm called them up the draw—the cabin was on fire.

Nothing could have happened to take the besiegers more aback. There was hasty questioning but no explanation. Of all the possibilities of the night, none could have been so unexpected. But, whatever the cause, and theories were broached fast, the cabin was ablaze. Smoke could be seen pouring through the chinks in the roof, and little tongues of flame darted out at the rear under the eaves. Though there was not a breath of air stirring, the roof within fifteen minutes was in flames, and the cowboys, confident of victory, set up, Indian fashion, their death chant for Dutch Henry.

The old shack made a good fire. The roof collapsed and, with the incantations of the cowboys, the stout walls, worm eaten and bullet splintered, falling gradually, blazed on.

"The jig's up here, boys," announced Van Horn, as the fire burned down. "The two biggest thieves on the range are accounted for. It's a good job. If I guess right you'll find the Dutchman in the fire. Yankee Robinson's next. He won't put up much of a fight, but the hardest man to get is still ahead of us. This was a boy's job beside rounding up Abe Hawk. He'll never be taken alive because he knows what's comin' to him.

"There's not a minute to lose now. Stone and I will take two of your men, Barb, and round up Yankee Robinson. From there we'll ride over to Abe's place on the Turkey. About our only chance is to catch him before he's up. If he's got wind of this, we'll have a hell of a chase to get him. Feed the horses, the rest of you eat, and we're off! You can follow us with Pettigrew and the bunch, Doubleday, just as soon as you look the cabin over after daylight." Within half an hour Van Horn and Stone and the two men crossed the creek, rode into the hills, and disappeared into the night.

Setting a watch, Doubleday and his men curled up on the ground. When earliest dawn streaked the sky, the logs were still smoking, and the cowboys, rifles in hand, walked down to where the cabin had stood.

Everything within the walls had been consumed. Long after daylight, with some of the men asleep, and others waiting for the fire to cool, one of Doubleday's cowboys, poking about the sill log of the rear wall with a stick, gave a shout. What had been taken for a half burned log was the charred body of a man. The invaders gathered and the body was presently declared by those who knew him well to be that of Dutch Henry. There was nothing more to detain the men that were waiting. The cowboy worst wounded had started with a companion for home. The Snipe insisted on going on with Doubleday.

The horses had been left in good grass a little way down the creek. When they were disturbed it was found that one was missing. A hurried search failed to discover the horse.

While trackers were at work, the Snipe, always alert, found a clew that upset all calculations. It was a small dark red spot soaked into the dust of the creek trail. It was very small, such as might have been made by a single drop of blood; but one such sign was enough to put on inquiry a man versed, like the Snipe, in mountain craft. Keeping his discovery to himself, he tracked back and forth from his single spot, almost invisible in the dust, until he found a second similar spot. This he marked, and, dodging and circling, as a hound on a scent, the Snipe ran his trail from his first tiny spot to the trees near the creek where the horses had been left. Doubling, he patiently tracked the telltale spots up the path that led to the cabin. Then he called to Barb.

Doubleday, much out of temper, was in the saddle waiting to get started. He bawled at the Snipe, and not amiably.

"Keep cool," was the answer. "I'm comin'. But look here before you start. There was two men in that cabin, Barb."

"What are you givin' us?" blurted out a cowboy. Doubleday stared ferociously.

"There was two of 'em, boys," persisted the Snipe.

"You must 'a seen double when you was runnin'," was the skeptical suggestion of another man. But Doubleday listened.

The Snipe took him from the cabin down to the creek. Then back to the cabin. There he showed him where some one had dug what might have been a hole under the sill log, near the door.

A horse was certainly missing. And then shells from two different rifles were picked out of the ashes. One had been fired from a Winchester rifle; the others, much more numerous, belonged to a Marlin.

"Who was it, Barney?" asked Doubleday, breathing heavily. He was so wrought up and so hoarse he could hardly frame the words. But he was already convinced.

The Snipe shook his head. "There's two or three fellows up here shoots a Marlin rifle. If I got one guess on this man that's made his getaway, Barb, I'd say——" The Snipe poked further into the ashes.

"Well, say," thundered Doubleday.

"I'd say it was Abe Hawk."

A bomb exploding in the smoking remnants of the cabin would hardly have caused more consternation among the man hunters than the Snipe's naming of Abe Hawk. But however Doubleday's jaw set at the unwelcome surprise, he was not the one to swerve in the face of any personal danger, and those with him were not men to bolt whatever adventure they embarked in. However, it was remarked by the Snipe that those least acquainted with Abe were least disturbed by the news of his almost certain presence in the cabin the day and night before and his escape after the fight.

Common prudence made it necessary to cross the small divide with care and to get word of the unpleasant discovery as soon as possible to Van Horn in order that he and his companions might not be picked off by the wounded man from ambush. The Snipe was assigned to Hawk's trail and two men were sent to the wings to scout for him among the rocks. Bradley rode to warn Van Horn; but the old man did not sweat his horse in the effort.

The trackers soon made it plain to those behind that the escaping man had ridden a pretty straight course himself, and had picked his way in the night like one thoroughly at home in the hills of the Turkey. And, though losing the trail at times, the Snipe had no serious trouble in picking it again from the grass or the rocks.

The country lying north of the forks of the Turkey is rougher than to the south and pretty well covered with pine. On the northern slope, Hawk's trail led down a long and winding break mile after mile, and in the end pointed straight for his shack on the creek.

Moving as nearly as possible in the order in which they had started, the party emerged from the hills half a mile from the creek, and not much farther from Hawk's when they encountered Bradley and Van Horn with one of his men. Doubleday hoarsely asked for the news.

Van Horn rode up close before he answered, and, though his tone was confident, his manner showed his annoyance at the way things had turned. "Robinson's shack was empty," he said. "Whether he got wind of yesterday I don't know; anyway, he's skipped —there's nothing left on his place."

"What's there to this talk of Barney's about Abe Hawk?" demanded Doubleday.

"From what Bradley says, it looks as if he might be right," said Van Horn. "The horse Hawk took is eating grass in front of his cabin. We saw him when we got here and waited for Hawk to show himself."

"He didn't do it," interrupted Doubleday huskily and baring his teeth as he spoke.

"Stone's watching the place."

"Is Abe there?" demanded Doubleday.

"You tell," returned Van Horn. "He may or may not be. That horse may be a stall. We've got to close in somehow on the shack and find out."

A cowboy clattered up from the creek and pulled his horse to its haunches between Doubleday and Van Horn. "He's just closed the door," declared the cowboy. "The door was open when we got here—wasn't it, Harry?" He pointed his finger at Van Horn in his excited appeal.

Van Horn scowled and waved his head from side to side in irritation. "The door was open, yes; the door is shut, yes." Then he swore at the alarmist. "You blamed monkey," he pointed to the cottonwood. "Don't you see how the wind is blowing? That door has been swinging half an hour. The shack is empty."

But nobody could be found with confidence enough in Van Horn's belief to close in and demonstrate its truth. After a litany of hard words, in which everybody took more or less part, Van Horn declared he would demonstrate. Whatever his faults, he was dead game, a formidable antagonist in an encounter. He was risking his life on his belief that either Hawk was disabled or the cabin was empty. Stripping himself to shirt and trousers, turning his effects over to a cowboy, bare headed, and with only a six shooter in his hand, he shook out his long, brown hair, hooked up his belt, and started to crawl up a little wash breaking into the creek not far from the cabin.

There was no point from which he could be seen, and his companions, secreted where they could watch the cabin, bent their eyes along the course of the wash up which their hidden leader was making his way.

Fortunately for the slippery undertaking, Van Horn, by a little digging as he made his way carefully ahead, was able to crawl to within fifty feet of the door without exposing himself to fire. Reaching the nearest spot he could attain with safety, he called in stentorian tones to the cabin:

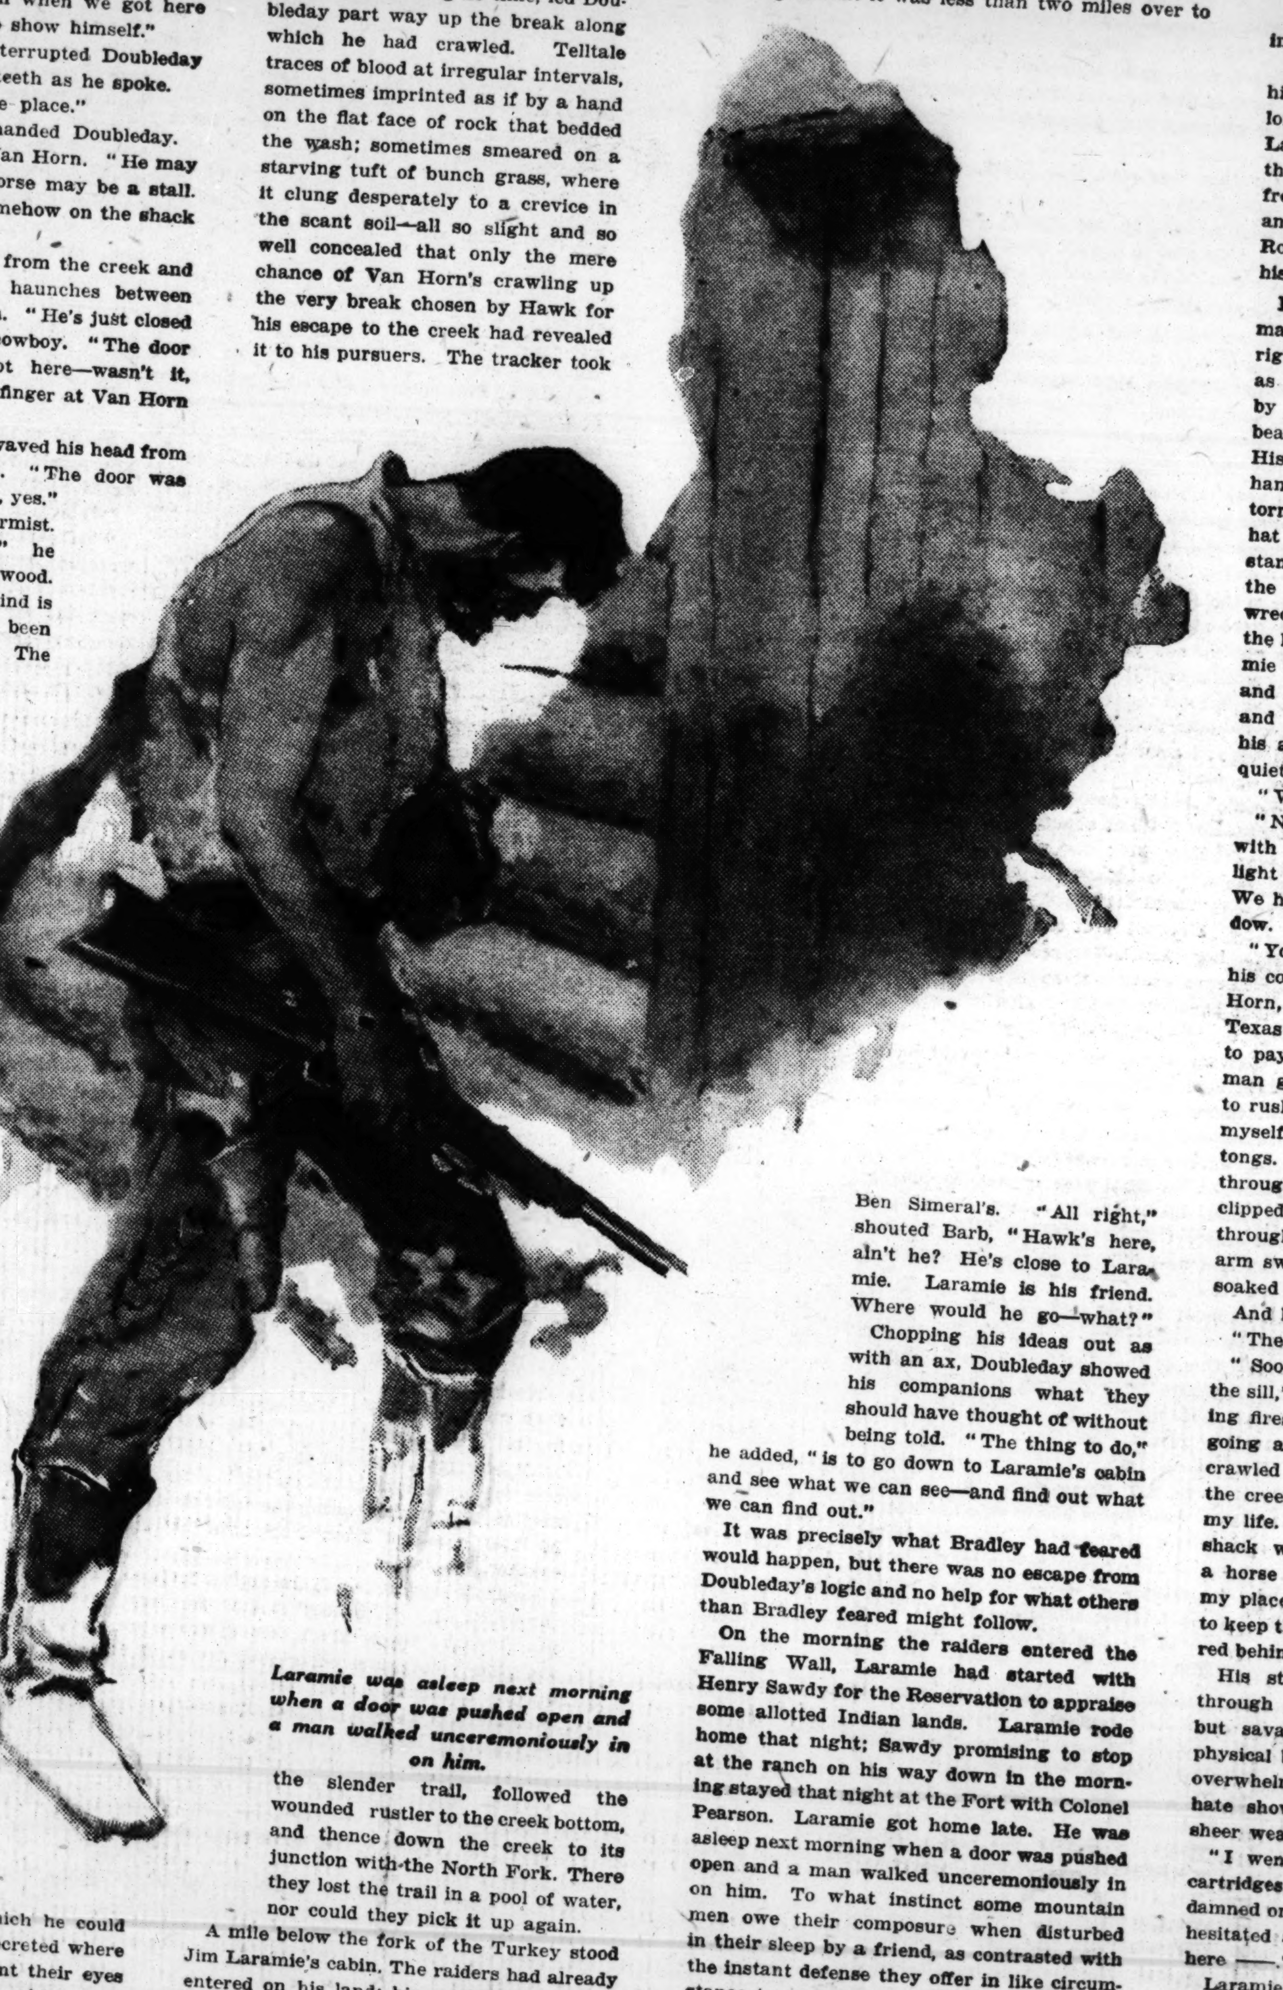
"You're surrounded, Abe; you can't get away. If you want to surrender I'll guarantee your life. Come out unarmed and I'll meet you unarmed. If not, it's what Gorman and Dutch Henry got, for you Abe."

The cabin gave no answer back. But Van Horn would not be baffled. Knowing it would be suicide to venture closer, he sought patiently his answer on the ground he was covering on his way back to the creek. And on the ground he found it.

"He slipped us," Van Horn called out when Doubleday arrived, "but I've got his trail."

Doubleday swore a bitter oath. "Two hundred and fifty dollars to the man that gets him!" he shouted huskily. Some of the boys gave a whoop and began to look around, but they did not scatter much.

Van Horn, losing no time, led Doubleday part way up the break along which he had crawled. Telltale traces of blood at irregular intervals, sometimes imprinted as if by a hand on the flat face of rock that bedded the wash; sometimes smeared on a starving tuft of bunch grass, where it clung desperately to a crevice in the scant soil—all so slight and so well concealed that only the mere chance of Van Horn's crawling up the very break chosen by Hawk for his escape to the creek had revealed it to his pursuers. The tracker took the slender trail, followed the wounded rustler to the creek bottom, and thence down the creek to its junction with the North Fork. There they lost the trail in a pool of water, nor could they pick it up again.



Laramie was asleep next morning when a door was pushed open and a man walked unceremoniously in on him.

A mile below the fork of the Turkey stood Jim Laramie's cabin. The raiders had already entered on his land; his cattle and some of his horses were, in fact, grazing in and about the creek fork. The following of Hawk's trail had been a nerve racking job. Hawk, his enemies knew, might be waiting at any turn in it and that meant, in all probability, death for some one. In consequence the pioneering fell chiefly on Van Horn; even Stone showed little stomach for the job. But the trail was now completely lost.

"There's a bunch of horses grazing at the fork," said Van Horn as Doubleday reached the front, "Laramie's, I guess—anyway, the trail is gone."

A council was held. Doubleday, long headed and crafty, listened to all that was said. Van Horn finally asked for his opinion.

"I don't know no more than the rest of you; but a blind man can figure a few things out. He's hit, ain't he?" Barb put the question as one not to be gainsaid, and found none to say him nay. "He's looking for help, that's more'n likely, ain't it? He's a mile from Jim Laramie's cabin, not more; he's three miles from anybody else's—what?" he exclaimed, as Bill Bradley interrupted to suggest that it was less than two miles over to Ben Simeral's. "All right," shouted Barb, "Hawk's here, ain't he? He's close to Laramie. Laramie is his friend. Where would he go—what?"

Chopping his ideas out as with an ax, Doubleday showed his companions what they should have thought of without being told. "The thing to do," he added, "is to go down to Laramie's cabin and see what we can see—and find out what we can find out."

It was precisely what Bradley had feared would happen, but there was no escape from Doubleday's logic and no help for what others than Bradley feared might follow.

On the morning the raiders entered the Falling Wall, Laramie had started with Henry Sawdy for the Reservation to appraise some allotted Indian lands. Laramie rode home that night; Sawdy promising to stop at the ranch on his way down in the morning stayed that night at the Fort with Colonel Pearson. Laramie got home late. He was asleep next morning when a door was pushed open and a man walked unceremoniously in on him. To what instinct some mountain men owe their composure when disturbed in their sleep by a friend, as contrasted with the instant defense they offer in like circumstance to an enemy, it would be difficult to say—certainly there is a difference.

Laramie half opened his eyes to realize that Abe Hawk had come into his room and seated himself on the one chair. Laramie was not inclined to wake up. "You're early, Abe," was his only greeting. Hawk made no answer.

After a further effort the drowsy man roused himself to the attention that seemed demanded in the case. "Going somewhere?" he mumbled perfunctorily.

"Yes." Hawk's hard tone might have surprised his host for a moment; but if it did, drowsiness overpowered his senses once more and it was some time before he realized that his visitor was sitting silent at his side and that he himself ought to say something. In protest he shifted his comfortable position in bed. "Get your breakfast ready, Abe," he said hospitably, but with his heavy eyes closed.

"I've had breakfast."

"Where you bound for today?"

"On a long trip."

"Which way?"

"Home."

"What do you mean, 'home?'"

"I mean hell, Larrie—the home long waiting for me."

Laramie's eyes batted slowly. He rose on his elbow. Not half a dozen times in all their long acquaintance had Hawk shortened Laramie's name in speaking to him; and then only when he spoke as he rarely did from a depth always hidden from the men among whom his wasted life had been spent. Roused by something in the utterance of his guest, Laramie looked at him.

If the sight was a shock the mountain man gave no outward sign of it. The lower right side of Hawk's face had been torn away as if by some explosion and blood, darkened by clay and rude styptics, clotted the long beard which naturally fell in a glossy black. His disordered garments blood-smeared and hanging loose—his coat sleeve and his shirt torn from his forearm for bandages, his soft hat jammed low over his eyes—for an instant, Laramie hardly recognized him. But the cold black eyes that looked out of the wreck of a man before him pierced so clearly the long shadows of the early light that Laramie had no choice but to realize it was Hawk and even the shock only served to restrain and steady him. He showed but little of his amazement when he sat up and spoke, quietly.

"What's up, Abe?"

"Night before last I was playing cards with Gorman over at Henry's. After daylight Gorman went out for a bucket of water. We heard a rifle shot. I looked out the window. Stormy was tumbling.

"You know the draw that runs down past his corral. Barb Doubleday, Pettigrew, Van Horn, Stone and a bunch of cowboys and Texas men lay in that draw. It was hell to pay from daylight till dark. The Dutchman got hit right at the start. They tried to rush me. I stopped three of 'em and dug myself in. Then we went at it hammer and tongs. In the afternoon they put a hole through my whiskers. After awhile they clipped my shoulder. Then I got a bullet through my arm." He held up his left forearm swathed in a mass of soiled and blood-soaked bandages.

"The raid's on," muttered Laramie.

"Soon as it was dark, I began to dig under the sill," Hawk went on. "They began lighting fires. I knew they couldn't keep those going a great while. About ten o'clock I crawled out under the front sill and got to the creek; I never was so gone for water in my life. I set a candle so it would fire the shack when it burned down and sneaked a horse from their bunch and got over to my place." He looked at his arm. "I tried to keep things bound up. Maybe I left a little red behind me. If I did, they'll be after me."

His story haltingly told; his utterance through his torn cheek thick and painful but savagely uncompromising; carrying a physical burden of wounds that would have overwhelmed a lesser man but with a deadly hate showing in his manner, Hawk from sheer weakness paused.

"I went to my cabin to look for more cartridges," he added slowly, "and not a damned one was there left on the place." He hesitated again. "I didn't want to come here ——."

Laramie sprang to his feet. "Where the hell else would you go?"

Hawk heard unmoved the rough assurance; perhaps his eyes flashed, for Laramie's voice rang strong and true. He already had his hand on Hawk's chair. "Come over here to the light," he said, "till we get some of this dirt off you. You need a bath, Abe. For a clean man you look like ——."

Hawk put up his right hand. "I'll do for all the job that's left ahead of me."

"What job's ahead of you?"

"You've got a rifle like mine Jim; the heavy one you don't use."

"Well?"

"I come here to see if you'd lend it to me."

"Why not?"

"Got any shells for it?" snapped Hawk.

"I guess so."

"I left the horse at the cabin to stand 'em off awhile. They'll lose a little time there. They'll come down the creek—can't come any other way. I'm going to wait for 'em in the timber."

"What for?"

"I'll finish with Doubleday and Van Horn, anyhow. Maybe I can with Stone."

"And they'll finish with you."

"After I get them three the rest are welcome to what's left of me. I've got to be moving."

"Hold on a minute, Abe." Laramie sat down on the side of his cot, his knees spread apart, his elbows resting on them, and his hands clasped as he leaned forward, head down, to think.

"Them fellows are riding every minute," Hawk reminded him grimly.

"Let's talk this thing over," persisted Laramie.

"I'll pay you for your rifle right now," mumbled Hawk, feeling with his right hand in his trousers pocket for some gold pieces.

"Don't talk monkey stuff, Abe."

"They don't make a monkey out of me," snapped Hawk. "Give me your rifle and let me go!"

"After we've talked it over."

Hawk pulled himself up out of the chair. "You blamed fool," he said profanely. "Don't you know that bunch will track me to your door and smash us with lead or burn us up in this shack if they get here first? Give me the rifle," he thundered, "or I'll go into the timber with this six shooter. What do you mean? Are you going to turn yellow on me because I'm a thief?" he demanded with a fearful oath.

Laramie moved neither hand nor foot. "You're an older man that I am, Dave," he replied, without even looking up. "I can take words from you, I'd hate to take from anybody else, you know that, and you know why. You won't talk; all right. Now I'll tell you where you get off; you're not going down to the timber—not a blamed step," he added deliberately. "Finger your six-shooter as much as you like." Laramie waved his hand with his words. "Use it on me if you like. But, by heaven, Abe——" As his voice changed, he jumped to his feet, adding like lightning, "you're not going to use it on yourself!"

He sprang for Hawk, reaching with his left hand for the gun. In tigerish ferocity the two men came together. Sleepy Cat worthies had sometimes speculated on what might happen if the two men most known and most feared in the Falling Wall country, Hawk and Laramie, should ever quarrel. They met now; but in a quarrel the wildest gossip had never fancied. Reeling, feet slipping, knees and hands locking, eyes staring, no word spoken and breathing hard, the two struggled in the middle of the cooped-up room —Hawk striving to free and kill himself; Laramie determined to wrest the gun from his grasp.

It was an unequal contest. Weakened by loss of blood, Hawk was not long a match for the only man on the range who under other conditions could have stood up before him. Gradually, with the gun in his right hand, Hawk was bent backward, with Laramie's left hand slipping along the barrel closer and closer to the grip. Prolonged by the fear of further injuring the wounded man, the tempestuous effort for mastery ended when Hawk was forced to the bed and Laramie's iron fingers closing on the gun wrenched it from him.

Hawk was done out and Laramie without more resistance straightened him out on the bed.

"You're worse hit than you think," panted the conqueror. "I've got a scheme better than yours, if there's time to put it through. Wait till I get a couple of horses."

The clatter of a horse outside cut into his last words. Laramie instantly slipped Hawk's revolver back into his hand, picked up his own gun and holster, strapping it to his waist as he ran, crossed the room, tore up a board in the floor, snatched a pair of rifles from their cache and hastening back to Hawk, his eyes glued all the while to the door pushed one rifle into Hawk's hand and swung the other to his hip.

Not a word had been spoken. But preparations for a reception had been made complete and eventualities thoroughly considered. Heavy footfalls outside announced the approach of a man. The next moment the door was flung open and the intruder heard Laramie's voice in savage emphasis.

"Pitch up!"

The intruder did not, however, pitch up. It was John Lefever. He stood amazed. "For the love of God," he exclaimed, "what's broke loose?"

"Come in, John," cried Laramie, seizing his arm. "I want your horse a minute. Stay here till I get back—come, Abe, lively!"

"Where you going?" demanded Lefever, staring as he tried to collect his wits.

Laramie hurried Hawk past him. "That'll depend on the shooting, John," was all Laramie hastily said. "Doubleday and Van Horn have got a bunch of Texas men raiding the Falling Wall."

Lefever, gazing stunned at Hawk, talked as if he saw nothing. "I know all about that," he cried. "Man alive, that's what I'm here for. Hold on, can't you.

"Not now. Just stick around till I get back."

Lefever caught his breath in time to fire one more question.

"What about Abe?"

"He's not coming back. Scout around down along the creek, John, so you can see these fellows when they ride in. Hold 'em as long as you can."

Laramie knew Lefever to be quite equal to the highly particular job he had assigned to him and that John would give his best to it. Hardly thirty minutes later the raiders rode out of the timber along the creek. Van Horn stopped his pack for a word of warning.

"Look to your guns," he said harshly. "You can guess most o' you what you'll be up against, if there's trouble at this joint."

Leaving the creek, the party rode out on a rarely used trail which Stone told them led to Laramie's cabin. They followed this for some distance, keeping two men ahead as they had done in the early morning. These two men reaching the bench, which at that point had been cut sharply away by some flood, halted. The main party riding up the hill debouched on level ground at the crest and joined their scouts. Half a mile to their right, under a high wall of rock, stood Laramie's cabin. The bench land lying in front of it was as smooth as a table and covered with mountain blue stem. Out of the level ground, a hundred yards from the edge of the bench where Doubleday's party had halted, rose a huge and solitary fragment of rock.

Beside this rock stood a large man facing the intruders; slung over his left forearm he carried a rifle, and his right hand he held well out toward them with its open palm raised in the air. The raiders understood the signal; it warned them to advance no farther.

"What's that fat buck doing up in this country?" asked Van Horn.

"Who is it?" demanded Doubleday.

"John Lefever," returned Van Horn, nettled. "What are you doing here?" he bellowed at the unwelcome sentinel.

John pointed a stubby forefinger at Van Horn and returned a perfectly intelligible retort.

"That's not the first question, Harry; that's the second question," he yelled. "What are you doing here?"

This was not in all respects a question easy to answer. But Van Horn was resourceful.

"We're on our way down the creek, John. Rode up from the bottom to see Jim Laramie a minute."

"Just a friendly call," assented John. "Well, how about side arms," he shouted, "and how many of you are there?"

Van Horn looked around him. "Why, maybe a dozen, I reckon, John. You know 'most everybody here."

"How many of you are there 'want to see Jim a minute,' Harry?" asked Lefever, calm but conveniently close to the rock and quite conscious of the delicacy of his position should shooting begin.

There was some exchange of talk before the question was answered.

"Look here, Lefever," roared Doubleday huskily, "what the hell's all this fuss about?"

Fashions Beauty Contests

FROCKS FOR THE AFTERNOON PARTY

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Easter parade on 5th avenue used to be something that we could go by. It is now something that we can pass by. There are no longer many valuable suggestions as to what the fashionable are wearing for formal occasions. Indeed, the old time parade has lapsed into a mere go-as-you-please race.

There were fashionable women represented in this year's pageant, but it was hard work detecting them. For the more exalted their social prestige the more intent they were on hiding it from the world. Informality of attire was the rule of the day.

One thing, however, was indicated clearly by that long queue of women moving up 5th avenue under the brilliant skies of Easter morning. This is the popularity of black. We are as black as the coal scuttle or as a London street during the war. The way we've darkened ourselves up, in fact, would make any stray Martian suspect that we feared any moment an air raid.

And if the whole costume wasn't black it was the next best thing—black and white. Of course, mixed with the ebon livery was a great deal of navy blue and gray. The promenader of Easter morning, however, seldom ventured anything more cheerful, unless the color was introduced in hat or trimming.

Another feature of interest was this: New York women seem to have moved back into their suits. After a long vacation spent in the one piece frock they have returned to the serviceable tailleur. This was represented on Easter day by almost every type of suit. The deb and subdeb selected usually the widely known variety with the short loose coat and, be it mentioned right here, the edges of this kind of jacket are frequently bound with ribbon—either cire or the unvarnished variety. French knot embroidery is frequently used in conjunction with this ribbon finish.

Among the older women one noted a partiality for severe tailor mades with long, skimpy sleeves and long jackets that were as a rule unbelted. Such a model in blue Poiret twill had no other touch of trimming than three straps of self-material in the back terminating in groups of knife plaits. In fact, the less you put on this sort of tailor made the smarter you are. All decorative effects are left to waistcoats, and blouses, and hats.

But the tailor made has by no means snuffed out the wrap made. Black satin coats! Go out on 5th avenue any one of these bright, sunny days and you will find an old home week among these. Their name is legion, but the usual variety is the long, straight line affair belted with the narrowest of girdles.

The fact of it is that no gentleman's bath robe should waste its sweetness on the home these days. If it happened to be of black satin, a wife or sister could wear it abroad without rousing any suspicion of its original humble destination. This is the day of the bath robe silhouette.

Many of these black satin coats are quilted. Our little New York quilting bee has extended, in fact, far beyond any hopes of its promoters. The quilted satin coat is reproduced in the windows of the humblest shops and at prices discouraging to those optimistic ones who believe that the mode will continue among exclusive women.

Yet there is a tremendous difference in quilting. That fact has got to be remembered. As against the common ordinary squares, one finds on the costly models beautiful rose quilting that make these models quite different affairs from their Cinderella sisters.

And it is a significant fact that the other day I saw a woman of international social distinction wearing one of these wraps helped out by a fringe of monkey fur around the hem. Indeed, monkey fur on the black satin coat is extremely good just at present.

I passed the other day on 5th avenue a woman of perhaps 38, wearing one of those saucy little hats with a long tassel dripping down over her ear almost to her shoulder—one of those hats that a friend of mine designates as the pull-bell variety. (Remember the old fashioned hotel bell with the tassel just beneath it?) This woman had streaks of gray in her hair, a pinched face, spectacles, and a sharp, prominent nose. Ah, yes, she was quite as tragic as the heroine of a Hardy novel—only, unlike the Hardy woman, she didn't have her fate wished on her by the unfriendly gods. She had actually gone out and picked out that hat for herself—she who should have worn a little toque or a nice clement kind of hat with a brim.

These dangling trimmings are much the mode. And, alas, how few are young enough, and pretty enough, and dashing enough to wear them without being quite ridiculous! If you don't select one of these trailing bonnets with a comet rush of glycerin ostrich, or paradise, or gourra—perhaps even a swishing bunch of grapes—over the ear, the next best thing you do for your street hat is to choose a flat trimming. For example, your little toque may be finished with several bandings of leaves which may quite possibly form a fringe over the eyes.

One thing is sure. There are few hats designed for street wear—with the exception of the sailors, which are more popular than ever—that have any executive sessions of the brim. The turn-back-off-the-face effects are the rule of the day—either these or the smart little toques now so much worn. True, the bonnet which turns back sharply is not becoming to more than half of us, but still we have got to submit to the rule of Cæsar Chic. That is the sort of millinery that is being worn for street and restaurant.

On the page today we are showing a group of gowns and hats designed for spring and summer afternoons. Here, of course, we illustrate millinery with brims, for the formal hat has not followed the lead of the street one in abandoning this softening influence.

As for the frocks, these effects of organdy, and satin, and velvet have not forsaken the wearable qualities so enshrined in every American woman's heart for the experiments with the bizarre which have been attempted in many of the recent importations. Yet many new little touches link them absolutely with the mode of this spring.

At the extreme left, for example, we find in this frock of pink organdy worn with hat of the same shade and material the many flounces which do so much to characterize styles of this present spring. Really, you know, skirts and wraps, too, are flouncing in like the French maid in the play.

One of the latest confirmations of this fact is to be found in a photograph taken at the great Auteuil races in France. This has snapped a lady attired in a frock of tan chiffon broadcloth distinguished by its long corsage and three trier skirt. The cape worn with it repeats the tier motif by being composed of five flounces. Both cape and frock are of the same material.

This charming organdy model is further indicative of the hour because of the corsage of pink mousseline de soie draped over beaded brocade in the same tint. As will be seen, the mousseline is drawn over the arms in the shawl manner of which we have seen little for some seasons past. This spring it is being done again, and certainly nothing is more graceful nor more becoming to the average woman.

The draped skirt is much to the fore in every smart exhibit of afternoon and evening frocks. In the delightful costume shown on the figure standing back of the table this draped skirt is achieved in a shaded opalescent taffeta combined with simple corsage of flesh colored chiffon mounted on pearl taffeta. A big sash sets off this frock, and right here let me say that the sash is one of the prominent features of spring costumes. The Callot exhibits, for example, make much of the Japanese sash. Indeed, some of Callot's models have bodices which are chiefly girdles. With this taffeta costume is worn a hat of cobra blue velvet trimmed with trailing ribbons of the same tone.

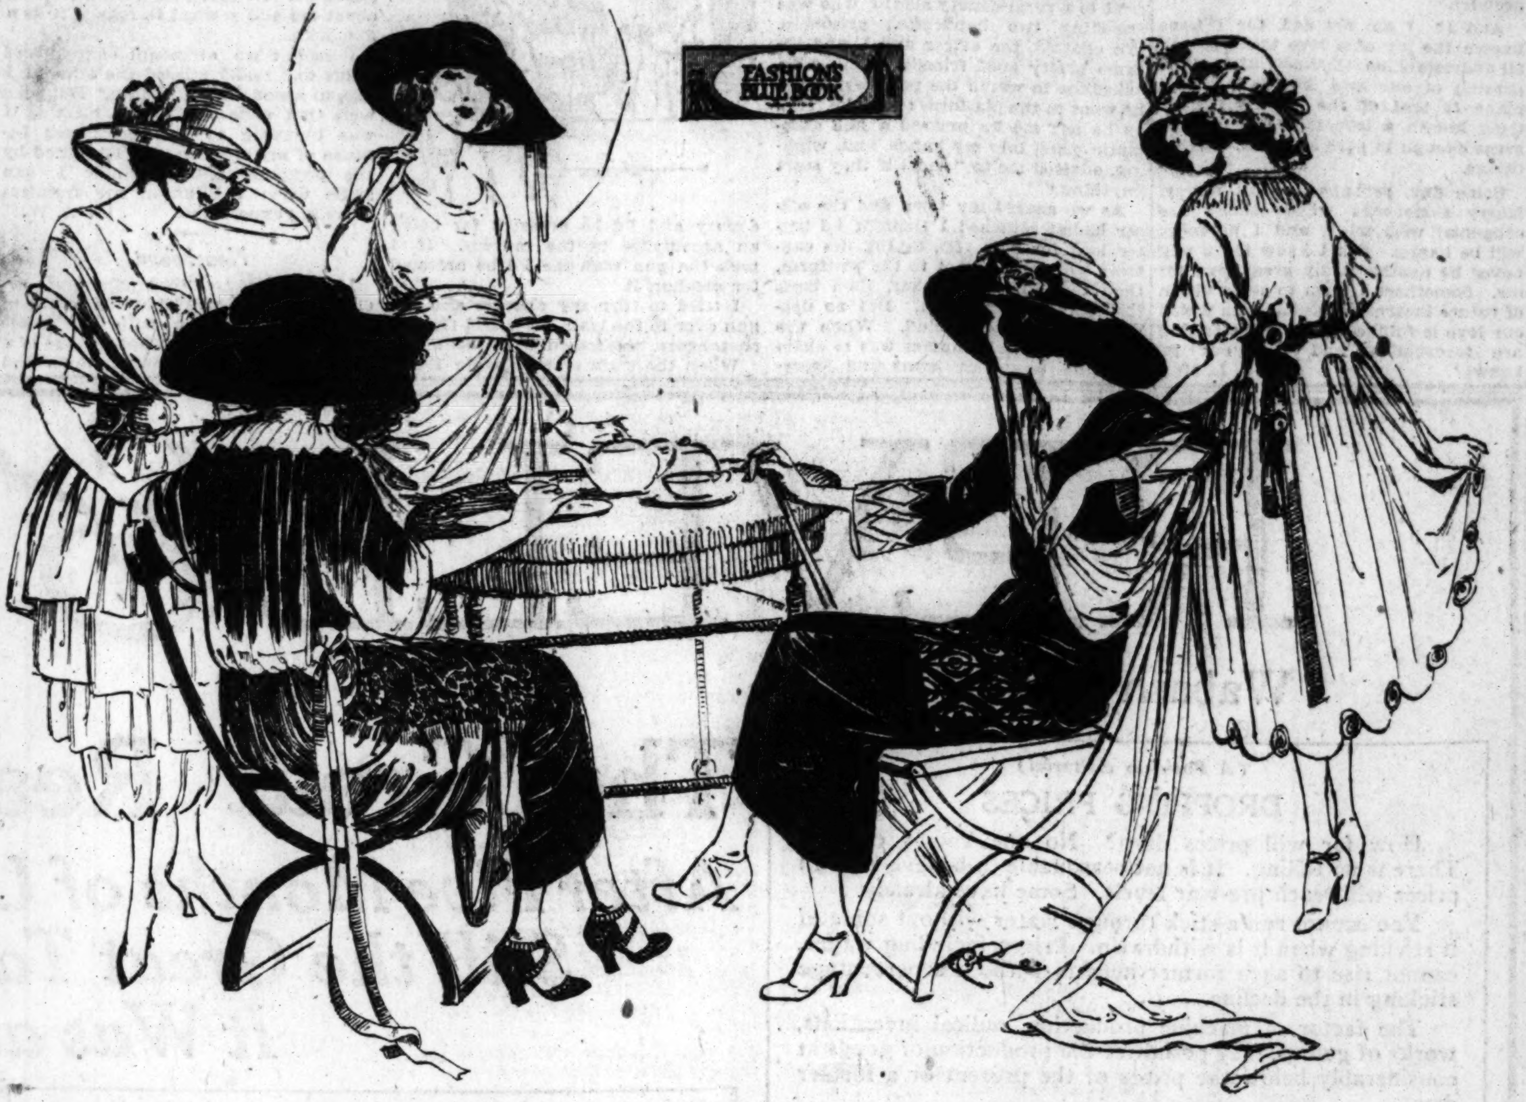
Last come a frock and hat designed for the girl in her late teens. The former is of pink organdy made over a satin foundation, and the hat of the same material is finished with rose lace.



THE demure shawl drape is revived in the costume to the left—one of pink organdy with undercorsage of beaded brocade. This drapery is of mousseline de soie, and the hat of organdy with its grosgrain bow repeats the tint of the gown. The first seated figure wears old blue satin draped with stenciled chiffon of lighter tone and accompanied by hat of black velvet with ostrich. Back of the table appears a costume combining draped skirt of shaded opalescent taffeta with corsage of flesh colored chiffon draping pearl taffeta. The hat of blue cobra velvet is the source of ribbons of the same color. The second seated figure is in black satin with stenciled design brought out by silver brocaded white foundation. The hat of black satin has draped crown and long scarf of old rose chiffon. Last, misses' frock and hat of pink organdy,

Newly-Created Spring Modes

WE announce a display, beginning tomorrow, of newly created productions for Spring. Garments of the finest and most beautiful fabrics—qualities that always distinguish Stevens Apparel—present the latest, authentic style versions. These new styles are offered at prices that are surprisingly moderate and so varied, they permit an almost individual choice.

Distinctive Sports Apparel

THE code of dress for sports wear is as exacting as any that governs social fashions. The punctilious are always attired in apparel appropriate to the event. This section features a complete line of Sports Apparel, Homespun and Jersey Suits, Tweed Homspun Mixture and Polo Coats, Golf Suits and Riding Togs. These represent the newest sports modes.

The New Suit Silhouette

THE new Long Coated Suits have developed into the late Spring Suit Mode. These new Suits are custom made, meaning, of course, hand tailoring, individualized style and fit plus high type custom effect. In navy Tricotine, Poiret twill and Twill Cord.

New Separate Skirts and Blouses

OUR showing for immediate and early Summer wear is now complete. Canton and crepe de chine in pleated and gathered effects fashion the smartest skirts for sports wear. Especially effective are the new Striped Flannel Skirts.
To go with the Sports Skirts is the mannish, tailored Blouse, custom-made of Dorisoire silk. Its very ruffles spell correctness.

As the New Hat Sees It

TAFFETA silk, quilted in white braid, a white facing and garniture of lilies contribute to the charm of this becoming Hat. It is one of the many stunning new taffeta and straw combinations. Our new Spring showing is now complete with hats of this type, as well as more dressy hats of Chantilly lace, hair braid and tulle.

New Coat and Wrap Features

ALLURING new style features are noticed in Coats and Wraps, displaying Canton crepe, Duvetyn and Tricotine as materials. Custom tailoring distinguishes the cloth wraps. The new silhouettes are the Directoire, the sleeve wrap and the Tuxedo coat. Fringe and embroidery are popular trimmings.

Individual New Frocks

REPRODUCTIONS of the French mode as well as original interpretations of our own are the themes of the new Frocks. Developed in Canton, Roshanara and Crepe de Chine, they feature straight lines and slip-on effects and sponsor fringe and embroidery as trimming. Many lovely Wash Frocks are shown in dotted Swiss, gingham and organdy.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE ONE THING TO DO.

THIS is not a conventional love story, rather it is an illustration that proves the theory that the emotion called platonic love and the relation called platonic friendship are nonexistent after a certain point is reached.

I met a man, a man of wonderful personality. He was engaged to be married to a girl who lived several hundred miles from here. The nature of his business prevented him from joining her for five or six months, when their marriage was to take place.

After we met it so chanced that we were thrown into each other's company a great deal, and we soon became close friends. We were great pals, happy and carefree as school children. He told me all about his fiancée, showed me her picture and some of her letters, and told me of their plans for the future.

I enjoyed all his confidences, gave him advice, and told him how sweet she looked and how dear her letters were. So you see, I did not love him then, because if I had I would have been jealous or hurt when I heard him speak of her. I can truthfully say that the thought of love never entered our minds during this time. We remarked several times the fact that ours was certainly a true platonic friendship.

And so our friendship continued. I went out with other men friends, and he kept writing his love letters to his fiancée, and we were just good pals. My friends disapproved. Some of them because he was engaged; others because they thought I was wasting my time. But I laughed and told them they did not understand.

The time grew close for him to claim his bride. I viewed the prospect with equanimity until our last night together. Just before we said good-by came the revelation.

I was wishing him future happiness when suddenly my voice broke and tears came to my eyes. He looked at me for a moment, then suddenly he clasped me in his arms. "My dear, it's you I love," he cried.

We stared at each other, terrified

as the full truth burst upon us. Imagine the hopelessness of the situation. We had found our love, but we could never fulfill it. After a bit we decided that we must do the honorable thing—even at the cost of our broken hearts. We must, because he was a gentleman, and he must obey his honor above self, and because I was a woman, and no woman can ever walk to true happiness over another woman's broken heart.

And so we had our one hour of joy and sorrow in our new found love. O, the exquisite, bitter, sweet agony of it. To kiss for the first time and know that soon it would be the last; to be held in the arms of one whom you love, only to realize that soon those arms would be beyond your reach. And then the last good-by, the last kiss, the last smile of love—a smile through tears, a smile that seemed to tear your broken heart.

And so we parted and he went to his bride, but he promised me never to let her know by word or deed that he did not love her. And, as he is an honorable man, I know he kept his promise.

And I? I am not sad, for I have known the joy of a love that passeth all understanding, the knowledge of the passing of our love from a physical plane to that of the spirit. I have truly known a love that is pure and great enough to pass above all earthly things.

Some day, perhaps, I shall marry. Marry some man whose habits are congenial with mine, and I probably will be happy. But I know there will never be another truly great love for me. Sometimes I seem to see a vision of future incarnations. Lives in which our love is fulfilled. The ways of God are inscrutable, and who but he knows?

MY FUNNIEST TRAVELING EXPERIENCE

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Traveling Experience." Address Traveling Experiences, The Tribune, Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

He'd Clean Forgot.

There was just one seat available—next to a rural deputy sheriff who was escorting two handcuffed prisoners. We chatted, the officer and I, and became pretty good friends. At last he asked me to watch the prisoners while he went to the platform to smoke. And as he left me he pressed a fine automatic pistol into my hands, and, winking, advised me to "shoot if they start anything."

As we neared my town and the officer hadn't returned I thought I'd better look for him. So, taking the captives with me, I went to the platform, then through the smoker, then back through the day coach. But no deputy sheriff could I find. When the train stopped my impulse was to abandon the prisoners, guns and everything, but if I did that I might get arrested for liberating prisoners who had been duly convicted of crime. And if I left the gun they might shoot the deputy and I'd be arrested for being an accomplice in the murder. If I took the gun with me I'd be arrested for stealing it.

I tried to turn my charges and the gun over to the train crew and then to passengers. Nobody'd have them.

When the train started again I was still a passenger. And the conductor demanded and got more fare from me. I was sure that the deputy had fallen off the platform. What could I do with the captives. As we pulled into the next station the officer entered the car. He had been in the baggage car talking to a long lost friend—the baggageman. He said he'd "clean forgot" about me and seemed to regard it as a fine joke.

I hadn't an abundant supply of funds and really missed the amount I had to spend for extra fare. But all's well that ends well. The meeting I was hurrying to was postponed because of my absence, and I profited by the postponement. So now I can smile when I think of my funniest traveling experience.

E. A. W.

Nonchalant.

My funniest traveling experience occurred when I was about 18 years of age. In connection with our home paper my father and I had charge of a local paper in an adjoining town and made the trip to and fro on a short run local train. This train always came in ahead of time and usually waited five or ten minutes before pulling out.

The morning I have reference to a traveling troupe was in the waiting room when the train pulled in and I smiled as I saw them rush out and hurry to get on. I wanted to impress them with the fact that I had traveled, so opened a book and began reading, sitting by the window in the depot where I could see and be seen.

I glanced out just in time to see the conductor get aboard and the train slowly moves off. I barely had time to catch hold of the rail and pull myself up. In my hurry somehow my foot became entangled in my dress and I landed full length in the car door with my lunch scattered over the floor. The actors were gallant and helped me to my feet and expressed their regrets, but I could see they were dying with laughter. I made an impression all right, but not the kind I wanted to.

DROPPING PRICES

How far will prices drop? No one knows exactly. There is no telling. It is not reasonable to believe that all prices will reach pre-war levels. Some have already.

You cannot run a stick through water without some of it sticking when it is withdrawn. Prices, including wages, cannot rise to such former heights without a percentage sticking in the decline.

The factor of machine production, radical inventions, works of genius, may permit of the production of goods at considerably below the prices of the present or a former day.

But there is a human factor. That is another story. What about wages? It is not likely that wages will fall as low as they were prior to 1914. It would require an almost complete cessation of business—a long depression—a serious panic—to bring that about. If those hoping to do business on any such sad basis could appreciate this point business could start more vigorously—not normally, but as nearly so as possible.

Unless business is generally active, an adequate amount of goods will not be made, and business slumbers. It follows that when industry is drowsy, labor is in distress. widespread labor disturbance halts business because the buying power of labor is nil. Capital should realize that all industry is business. Do it. Labor should accept a fair wage. The halting, waiting game in business, or labor, may do you.

WHEN a woman rises to that point of prosperity where it is a question not of how much can I afford to pay, but which fashionable modiste shall I patronize this season, she has in the minds of her penny counting sisters no excuse in the wide world for not being among the noticeably smart women at Mrs. None-Such's buffet luncheon.

Her name missing from the list, the p. c. sister says: "Mebbe fine feathers don't make the fine lady, after all." And another bright and original thought strikes her along about the middle evening chapter of her penny countings. "Mebbe fine feathers are like beauty—only skin deep. Perhaps she won't stand scratching down a layer or two."

Thereby hitting the nail directly on the spot where women have achieved small reputations as expert marksmen!

Strike a Balance.

But leave it to the sisters who must count while the darlings of the gods squander! They strike the merry balance on the leaning tower of dress.

They have the instincts of the French woman, who says in relation to items of dress expense: "Put not all your golden ducats into one basket. Let there be a basket for shoes, for hats, for gloves, for underwear, and for corsets."

Now, there are many wise women who know all about the basket for shoes, for hats, for gloves, and maybe for underwear, and they divide their golden nuggets so that each is allotted a fair share.

But there are some foolish ones who forget about the mainstay of dress—the corset—and throw their all into the quality of the goods, the color, and the name of the modiste tacked on the waistband in gold lettering. Which is responsible for more actual dowdiness than may be dreamed of.

There are figures, to be sure, designed by an all kind Providence to be freed from the confines of steel, and bones, and lacings. Usually the young are so favored or an occasional woman with wholesome athletic tendencies who has kept that first fine symmetry of youth. But the average one of us who has forfeited her stayless privileges by appetite and physical inactivity has to lean upon the corset for support of both figure and dress reputations.

What Every Woman Wants.

And incidentally after we have depended for years upon a corset for support to our abdominal walls it is dangerous, as medical men agree, to become suddenly smitten with the corsetless fad and throw them away. A hardening course of exercise of these muscles that have been inactive for years is totally necessary if we insist upon following the style. Otherwise the muscles will sag, drag down with them other muscles which have been trained to depend upon the corset to hold them in place, and actual physical discomfort ensues.

Then it is a rare woman who has reached any age of plumpness who will show to advantage without a corset. If she has trained herself to an erect and correct posture and carriage she may look all right. But few of us are perfect in these details of posture and carriage. The corset—and a good one—is our best bet. The plumper we are the better the corset we need.

Lines are what every woman strives for. Long lines and slender! Now, you can't get lines from the dress alone. There has to be a good foundation or the lines are distorted therein.

The corset manufacturers long since learned that the emancipation of woman included relief from the formidable affair of years ago, which sometimes included tying the strings to the bed posts, the patient trying to see if she could reach the hall from that position; a tearful proceeding at times.

Nowadays there's a corset built for almost every figure. And when purchases are made we are taught the right kind to wear, the correct size, and the manner of adjusting. And we learn it may be a thing of beauty, of comfort, and of much self-respect all in one.

That's why I advocate having a corset fitted every time the purchase is made. And, if possible, buy two pairs and alternate. They wear longer and prevent that diabolically common sin among womankind of soiled corsets.

It Must Be Fitted.

Corsets are designed to correct as well as fit. They are designed to do away with that thickened diaphragm, the o'erhanging baskets of fat in the back which the ill fitting corset often establishes. But one must be fitted by a woman who knows her business and knows figures and how to improve them. You cannot just pick a corset off the counter and order it charged and sent home. That is, if you are a stickler for lines.

The average woman has bulges and crowdings because she does not buy her corset in a large enough size. The bust will be pushed up grotesquely and the lacing will not cover neatly the flesh over the abdomen or across the back, whether it happens to be front or back laced.

Another fault is in the adjusting of the corset daily. Maybe it is drawn too tight at the bottom, which will force it out at the top. Or she yanks the waistline until it pinches, forcing the abdomen out. It seems second nature to woman to wear her corset tight at the bottom and wide at the top, when it should be laced evenly from top to bottom and about three inchs apart. The lacings come at the waist and hips.

This gives the straight back, the flat abdomen, and the slender hip.

Brassieres for the heavier women are a Godsend. They supplement and complete the work of the corset and should be bought and fitted along with the corset.

It is not extravagant to urge good corset buying—which includes correct fitting—any more than to urge good shoes correctly fitted, is it? And one can save on the cost of dress if a good foundation line may be depended upon, as it may be with a correctly fitting corset.

Beauty Answers

By Antoinette Donnelly

DISCOURAGED: THE BEST EXercise in the world is swimming. And just what you need to develop your chest and lungs. I saw a remarkable change recently in a 15 year old girl after six months' work in a swimming pool, where she took herself twice a week. From a chestfallen, pale, anemic looking youngster she swam into an upright, attractive girl. It is good for reducing, too. So take mother along when you go.

CAREY: GRAYNESS OF THE hair is more often hereditary than not. Sometimes worry, anxiety, a diseased condition of the scalp will help along the gray hairs. Aside from removing these latter causes, there is not much one can do for it. If you once start dyeing it, you are in for a lifetime of care on it. And then dyed hair, unless extremely cleverly done and dyed as near the original color as possible, is apt to be quite ugly.

J. J.: IRREGULARITIES OF food, drink, and bowel movements may cause a feverish breath and fever blisters. Decayed teeth and catarrhal troubles will also cause the former trouble.

EVELYN H.: DON'T USE A DEpilatory on your face. Have the hair removed by electrolysis. It is the only safe and sure way.

WORRIER: YOU KNOW THE trouble is in worrying. I cannot tell you to stop it. You have to tell yourself and make yourself mind. But the wrinkles ought to force you into better self-control. They sure do come with worrying. They don't iron out easily, either.

ELOISE: AN AMERICAN WOMan, who has lived for years in Paris, comparing the American and French girl, said the American girl had it all over the French girl for smart dress, but the French girl was a healthier looking creature because of the better understanding of food values and the better manner of preparing it. That carries out your theory somewhat.

JEVO: DON'T USE THE ACNE cream as an overnight salve. Just massage it into the skin after the wash-up at night. Rub off the surplus cream. No, it won't grow hairs. Neither will that cold cream formula I sent you.

MOTHER: YOU CAN CULTIVATE nice eyebrows by using vaseline on the child's brow daily. Use a tiny brush dipped in the vaseline, and shape them as you apply it. Bowlegs can be straightened by braces and exercises when the child is young. In fact, a mother can pretty well make a pretty grown up girl out of her daughter if she is careful of her teeth and her posture, her hair, and correcting expression habits in youth.

G. B.: A SET OF EXERCISES FOR daily practice? Yes, I have a ten minute daily program mapped out, illustrated, and described carefully, guaranteed to put every muscle of the body to work. Send s. a. e.

J. H. G.: THE TREATMENT OF moles should be left to a skin specialist. I could recommend nothing.

SHOPGIRL: YOU NEED EXERcises for your arches. Yes, weak and falling arches are found oftenest on people who stand a great deal. Then the wrong kind of shoe will put a strain on arches. Send s. a. e. for a set of exercises that will help you a lot.

JESTER: YOU WILL BE SINGING "Good-by, Bones, I'm Through" if you will just send along the s. a. e. and get what I have in the way of instructions on how to put on weight.

LUCY: FIVE FEET FOUR INCHES and 18 years of age calls for about 123 pounds. Most girls have full growth at 18. Some, however, keep on growing till 20.

MRS. X.: MASSAGING THE LINES about the eyes must be done gently, beginning from the nose and working outward toward the temples. Have a good formula for skin food and more detailed instructions on massage. Send s. a. e.

War Discovery Does It Easily

Quick healing antiseptic, originally invented for wounds. Wonderful for skin eruptions or itching anywhere. Free trial proves it.

To really end dandruff, dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and simply wet the scalp thoroughly with it. The results from the first application will prove how easily this scalp disease can be ended by a few of these simple treatments. It stops the annoying itching instantly and is as harmless to the hair as water.

This is the same wonderful antiseptic agent discovered in the war, which healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time and conquered infection where the old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, pleasant and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test it is over 40 times more germ destroying than carbolic acid.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

Compare Kloria with anything ever used for eczema, itching, skin eruptions, irritations. Note how quickly wounds, sores, boils, and burns heal. Test it for pyorrhea (sore, bleeding gums), and notice how promptly the soreness and bleeding disappear, usually in one week. Try it for mouthwash and gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat—how clean the mouth feels. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

LUNCHEON AND A TALK.

I AM giving below a letter written by a business woman who tells of the enjoyment and mutual benefit she and a group of her associates in business have derived from meeting together daily at lunch, somewhat as Marion, Ann, Dorothy, and I have been meeting for the last year or so. Her letter is by way of a suggestion to other girls (those who work together, or girls in different business houses who can arrange a time and place to suit one another) to get together in small groups this way at noon time.

Surely, there's a great deal to be gained from a first hand knowledge of the mistakes—how they're overcome, the problems—how they're solved, and the successes—how they're achieved—of our associates and friends in business.

"Dear Miss King: I, too, have lunch almost daily with a group of business women. And from my own experience of these daily meetings, as well as your reports, I believe it would be a good idea to foster and encourage such gatherings.

"Our number varies from day to day, but there are hardly ever less than four and often as many as eight of us at table together. But no matter what the size of our party, our chief topic of conversation is work. Unlike your group, however, we are all employed by the same firm, and follow exactly the same line of work—salesmanship.

"We are employed by a large retail house, and it isn't often that we have a chance to talk over or explain things to one another during business hours. We are too busy with our work to take up our own or somebody else's time in settling difficulties that are not emergencies. So the noon meeting, at which we can talk unreservedly and at leisure, fills a real want.

"It's only a little over a year that we've been meeting like this. Before that I did feel a sufficient confidence in my ability and own judgment, but I realize now that I wasn't quite as expert as I thought. I've lost some of my old assurance. I've been helped in innumerable ways since, by advice and suggestions from the others.

"There is no obligation on any of us, of course, to eat at that table every day. We simply go whenever we please. But we get so much enjoyment out of our noonday chats that it's a great disappointment to any of us to miss it. It's a lot of fun, too. For while our conversation is confined mostly to 'shop' talk, we are rarely solemn about it, and there are often funny experiences to relate. I, for one, go back to the store after one of these luncheons entirely refreshed and ready for the hardest half of the day's work.

"Our talks wouldn't, as a rule, interest any but ourselves. They have too much to do with local policies and politics. But occasionally we talk over an item of business procedure that might be of particular interest to other saleswomen, and when we do I should be glad to send you a report of it.

"I know that it isn't practicable for every business girl to join a group of her friends or associates at lunch every day, but wherever it is convenient for a girl to do so I am convinced that it will be to her benefit. I'm sure you think so, too. "MRS. D. R. L."

I would be glad to print any of Mrs. L.'s letters that might be of general interest to business girls, or that would appeal to saleswomen in particular.

I like this idea of a symposium made up of business girls who are interested in the same things, and who are impelled by the same motive—ambition. Marion, Dorothy and I find a great deal that is of mutual benefit and enjoyment to us in our daily chats, and if, for any reason, one of us had to drop out of our regular luncheon foursome, we would take it to heart as a calamity.

Spring Calls You to Walk

A softness in the air, a greenness in the grass, a sparkle in the sunlight—they beckon you to swing out into a walk. Will your feet stand a gay hike up the avenue? Or do they wobble and ache at the end of a few blocks? Then turn your footsteps to the nearest Cantilever shoe shop.

As smart as you wish, and as comfortable as a moccasin, is the Cantilever Shoe. It has a heel well set for poise, a sole line well designed for comfort; room for the toes, support for the arch. And a shank that flexes with every step. Truly is there youth in your walk in a Cantilever Shoe, for the foot is freed from a stiff, unrelenting sole. The blood circulates freely, the muscles grow strong. Cantilevers correct and prevent fallen arches and make walking one of the big joys of springtime. Width from AAAAA to EE.

That Corn
ends tonight

Make that resolve and watch what Blue-jay does.

Apply it with a touch—the liquid or the plaster. The corn pain will cease at once. In a little while the whole corn will loosen and come out.

This is the scientific method and is right. A famous chemist perfected it. This world-famed laboratory stakes its reputation on it.

Over 100 million corns

Blue-jay has ended at least a hundred million corns. Now it is ending, probably, 20 million corns a year.

It has brought to multitudes freedom from corn aches.

Such a relief—easy, quick and simple—deserves your test. Try it on one corn tonight.

Stops pain instantly

Ends corns completely

In the blue-label can

Millions of men this spring are helping their wives clean walls, ceilings, window shades with CLIMAX Cleaner. Anyone can use it. A can will clean a room and make it bright and cheerful and save the expense of redecorating.

Insist upon CLIMAX, the old reliable cleaner. Sold by all good grocery, drug and hardware stores.

DEL-A-TONE

is a safe and sure preparation for the removal of hair from the neck, face or under-arms.

Beauty specialists recommend it because it leaves the skin clear, firm and perfectly smooth.

A Food Protection that you should never overlook

This Trade-Mark is a sign of food protection that you should never overlook. Prominent packers of jellies, peanut butter, meats, mustard and other table specialties use it as a guarantee that they have provided the safest seal possible to secure.

It is an added protection that costs you nothing. But look for it, and find it before you buy. Ask us for "The Story of Preserving." It tells you more that you need to know about this important subject.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

"My husband has been out of work since three weeks before Christmas and I have five children that I am trying my best to keep in school. Their clothes and shoes are about gone. If any one would help me I would be so glad. Girl 6 wears shoe size 13. Boy [illegible] wears shoe size 1. Boy 10 wears shoe size 4. Boy 12 wears shoe size 5. Girl [illegible] wears shoe size 6. I wear 46 or [illegible] dress. Anything will be highly appreciated. MRS. L. H."

This seems a good chance to put to use some of our children's worn clothing of last year—surely some one's clothes closet can yield something that will spell school for Mrs. H.'s children.

"I am a girl of 18 and just devour books. As there are no libraries out here in this town, will some kind person who has some old books and magazines to give away pass them on? I am a working girl and can't afford to buy any. As I'm a new neighbor in this town, I get lonesome, and books are my only pastimes. I just love to sew. Will some one pass cloth leftovers for patch blankets? "ANNA B."

Many there are who have books they no longer have room for and which would afford great pleasure to Anna B. I am holding the address.

"I am coming to your column for aid. My little boy who is to remain a cripple the rest of his days finds that time hangs heavy on his hands. My brother has been so good to him—bought him a phonograph with a few records. But having heard the same four records over every day, sometimes playing them each as high as ten times a day, he soon becomes tired of them. He likes music but I cannot afford to buy him any new records. Will you kindly ask in your column for old records? They would all be greatly appreciated. I thank you. "MRS. J. K."

This letter strikes a special chord of sympathy. Poor little chap, just think what it means to be crippled for life. He lives in Wisconsin, but I thought perhaps that the records could be sent parcel post to him.

"I am a widow and the mother of [illegible] children. My baby girl is 9 months old and sick all the time. Would you try to get a baby carriage for me so that I can get her out in the fresh air? "MRS. A. S."

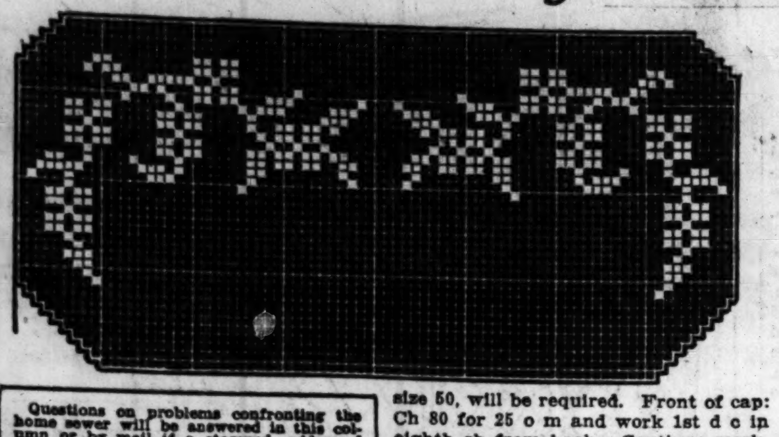
With all the babies growing up in this city there must be some mother who has a baby carriage which is not in use and could be given to Mrs. A. Her sick little baby ought to get out in the sunshine every day.

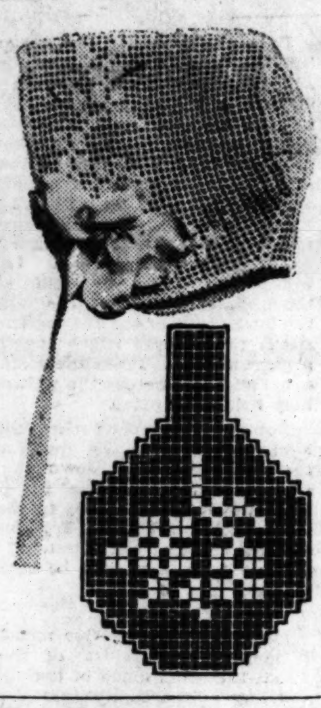
"Do you know any little shut in who would like to have a female canary bird? If you do, I shall be pleased to give mine. MRS. F. R."

Thank you for your offer. Some shut in will take pleasure in such a gift.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE





Questions on problems confronting the home sewer will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.

INFANT'S CROCHETED CAP.

If one wants to make a gift to the mother of a prospective baby, there is nothing much prettier than a cap. The one shown today will be delightful to make and sure to be greatly appreciated. For summer wear a lining of China silk will be protection enough.

Two balls of white crochet cotton, size 50, will be required. Front of cap: Ch 80 for 25 o m and work 1st d c in eighth ch from hook. Continue working up and down according to diagram. Work a row of s c around lower edges and front of band and a p edge with 3 s c between p on back of band.

Back: Ch 26 for 7 o m and work 1st d c in eighth ch from hook. Continue working back and forth according to diagram. Work a row of s c all around back.

With fine needle and thread fasten the picot edge of band to back of cap and work a p edge all around.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

Perhaps He Can Explain.

"Dear Miss Blake: A attended a party without a date and a boy asked to take me home. I consented. When the time came, however, he did not show up, instead going home with another boy. How should I treat him? Should I treat him coldly and refuse further dates? Please give me your advice on the matter. ANXIOUS."

Perhaps you will not get another "date," as you call it. Then, too, there may have been some misunderstanding when it came to go home. I think I would just act as though nothing happened, at least until you hear his side of the story.

It Is Not All Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it all right for a girl to kiss her friend? My friend always wants a kiss. Shall I give it to him? AUDREY."

No. He ought to be more than a friend to get the kisses.

A Change of Heart.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 17 years old and have known a young man since childhood. We were the best of friends until about a month ago, when he went away on business. When he came back he acted strange toward me and I do not know the reason, for every time I see him he tries to avoid me. I love this man. I do not know what to do, and as I have no mother I am coming to you for advice. "L. M. C."

I wonder what could have effected the change of heart? Do you suppose some other girl usurped your place while he was away? Or maybe he has some real or fancied grievance against you of which you are totally unconscious. Perhaps a talk with him would explain things. Could you not arrange it?

There Is No Remedy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and am in love with a fellow of 20. It is just one year since we met each other in the country. I know this fellow loves me, too. I have found out that this fellow is going with another girl, and he does not come so often to see me. Can you tell me how to win his love back again? I know I will never love another fellow as much as I do this one. I. I. W."

I wish I could give out some rules for reviving affections that show signs of cooling. But I cannot. I know of none that are guaranteed. When the young man's fancy goes a-wandering the best thing is to let him go.

Do as Mother Says.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 years of age, and I am in love with a man of 25. He has asked me to go out to parties, dances, and theaters, but in every case I have refused because my mother will not allow me to go out with him alone, saying he is a flirt. I do not think so, but I do not wish to disobey my mother. Please can you tell me what to do? DICKIE."

You are 17, quite young, you know, even though you may disagree with me. Your mother has met the young man, and so I would bow to her judgment and would ask you to do the same. After all, she is thinking of your happiness.

Better Drop Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: Knowing that you have helped thousands with your good advice, I, too, appeal to you and hope that my plea will not be in vain. I am a girl of 20 and in love with a man of 30. Although I have known this man for some time, yet I cannot understand him, for when we are alone he tries to kiss and hug me, but when among relatives or strangers he acts as if he hardly knows me. Can you explain such a man? TROUBLED."

Something radically wrong with the man, Troubled! And with you, too, if you allow him to hug and kiss you. You don't, I hope. How about dropping him off your list of callers? I think I would.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE.

MY DEAR ONE: I know you are hastening to me, that you are nearer and nearer every hour, every minute, but O! how long the hours seem! Three days and nights of weary travel to cover the long distance between us until I see you again—it seems the hours stretch endless until the time comes to be held in your dear arms again.

And yet I must not be impatient. My dear, I have learned patience in these three long, long years that have separated us, the endless times, the dreary hours. But still I know, "Whatever is, is best."

I know I have learned much; I have learned to be charitable and kind to those poor, unfortunate ones who know not the meaning of a great love. I have listened to that inner voice which comes to one in great solitude, and it has taught me much that is good for me to know, that I may be more worthy of your wonderful love.

My dear one, with your great and patient heart, bear with my faults and I will grow into the woman your love portrays me to be.

I want to make our home a real home for you—your kingdom of rest, where no unpleasant thoughts or unkind words may find a harbor.

Our "own fireside"! What magic in the words! What a multitude of happy pictures are called forth! Simple homy pleasures, long winter evenings by the open fire, with books and music and worth-while friends.

And, O, may our hearth be blessed with little faces, sweet little faces, with tender, trusting eyes, who will know their home as their magic castle, and their father, their fairy king!

My dear love, my one love, adieu, until the glorious day that is to be.

Ever your own,
MARGARET.

How to Use the Patterns

THE long waisted frock with the loose panels, No. 9858, is one that will be becoming to slender or full figures. It is not close fitting—opens down the back and is easy to get in and out of. There are many cool days during the spring and summer when a thin dress is not comfortable, and this design, made up in challis and having a satin drop skirt, will be just the thing.

Of course, the sleeves can be made long or short, but if this is to be the sort of dress just suggested, short sleeves will be far more comfortable, for it will be possible, by slipping on a large apron, to go into the kitchen and get dinner. And if the sleeves were long they would only be in the way.

The drop skirt can be finished with French seams, running the first one by hand, and when the machine stitching is done be sure not to have the stitch short or the tension tight, else the seam will pucker, no matter how much you press it.

Lay a 4 or 5 inch hem around the bottom and hem it invisibly by hand. The panels should be finished with narrow hems on the long sides and a two inch hem across the bottom. If challis is used for the dress, no embroidery or trimming will be necessary, as the ground of the material is usually so well covered with dots or other designs.

If the half length sleeves are used, it will be a pretty finish to mark off the elbow length on the sleeve seam, then on the outside fold make a mark two or more inches below the other. Draw three scallops, making the center of the middle one come at the fold of the sleeve and shaping them down towards the outside point. These can be finished with a binding of the satin. Separate organdie or marquisette collars may be worn if preferred; in that event simply face the neck; or if the satin collar is liked, that is attached to the right side of the neck and the left side is faced and fastened to the neck with snaps.

No. 9952 is an attractive design, and Canton crêpe in navy blue, brown, tan, or a delicate gray would be lovely. The dress is a one piece one, made to be slipped on over the head, and the skirt measures one and one-half yards at the lower edge for size thirty-six inches bust measure. Beading or silk embroidery in border shape will be effective around the bottom of the skirt.

The vest and collar should be made of some one of the beautiful sheer materials, such as organdie, marquisette, voile, handkerchief linen, or the small checked ginghams. Then there are wonderfully attractive organdies embroidered in colors that are ideal for the purpose.

Poiret twill, tricotine, taffeta, or satin would be pretty made by this pattern, and the pockets will be an addition both to the looks of the dress as well as the usefulness.

The line for cutting the opening on each side of the front of the skirt should be accurately marked by a basting thread. Then the welts are cut from the dress material and silk or satin lining.

Turn the material in one-quarter inch on three sides and stitch just inside the edge. Then hem the lining down over the stitching on the three sides and press well. Cut the two pocket sections for each pocket, and then cut the slit exactly on the bastings. Slip the unfinished edge of the welt into the opening a seam's width. Pin it carefully to the skirt across the top so it won't slip, and turn to the wrong side of the skirt. Lay the upper edge of the top pocket section, the unfinished edge of the welt, and the lower edge of the slit together and stitch these three edges together in a narrow seam. Press the seam open, catch stitching across the welt edge to help hold it in place.

Now sew the under pocket section in a narrow seam to the upper edge of the slit; then stitch down the sides and across the bottom of the pocket. Then the welt is stitched to the skirt down each short side. Try this on a seperate piece of cloth first. It is not difficult work, but may be somewhat puzzling just at first.

Isn't 9962 an attractive model for a little girl? The skirt of the long waisted dress is made of two flounces, and any of the lightweight materials will be appropriate. There are all sorts of charming wash materials in plain colors or dots, checks or figures. Then there are the crêpes, challis, or taffetas.

The scallops on the flounces can be edged with narrow lace, using the round mesh valenciennes, or they can be bound in a contrasting color.

The little waist is cut kimono fashion and fastens in the back. It will look well to have the sleeve edges match the finish of the ruffles.

Ribbon will be the thing for the sash, and there will be found a bewildering assortment from which to make a choice.

Reinforce the hems down the back by laying a strip of cambric cut on the length of the material. It will help to keep the button holes from tearing or from letting the buttons tear the hem.

Gum neglect is worse than tooth decay

Tooth decay can be repaired by your dentist. But neglected gums—gums that bleed easily, become soft and tender, start to recede—open the way to pyorrhea.

Pyorrhea starts with irritation and infection of the gum tissue. If unchecked, this infection spreads to the bony root sockets.

The sockets hold your teeth in place. They are the foundation upon which the teeth depend; if socket destruction reaches a certain point as a result of pyorrhea, your teeth loosen and fall out, or must be extracted. No dentist can save them, then. All the time and care you have spent in keeping them white and clean is wasted.

So, if you want to save your teeth—watch your gums! Keep them firm and healthy.

Pyorrhocide Powder was compounded for the specific purpose of maintaining and restoring gum health. In addition to its ingredients which keep the teeth white and clean, it is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent widely used by the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair.

Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums, stimulates their blood circulation, maintains hardness and firmness, thereby increasing the power to resist pyorrhea infection. Its effectiveness for this purpose has been conclusively proved by thorough tests in clinics devoted exclusively to pyorrhea study and research. That is why dentists everywhere recommend it.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses.

Free trial package to prove what real gum health means

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each child-ish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

As I watched my son and his playmate at their games I noticed that the young visitor let Harold be the leader and proposer of all the fun they indulged in. That evening I asked Harold if he liked David. "O, yes," he answered, "I like him a lot 'cause he lets me know it all." L. R. C.

Tommy is the only child of fond parents and so has been used to having things his own way. Last week his cousin came to visit him for a few days, and as he is a masterful youngster Tommy had to play second fiddle. Upon Tommy being asked how he liked his cousin he replied: "I don't like that guy. He's too first in everything." M. G. G.

Roger was invited out to supper. "Remember," said his mother, "not to ask for more dessert. I should be ashamed of you if you asked for a second helping."

The dessert proved to be Roger's favorite kind—apple pie. One piece was not enough, and he had promised not to ask for more. Suddenly a thought came.

Turning to his hostess, he said, "Mrs. Montgom'ry, would it make you much ashamed of yourself if you cut me another piece of piece?" B. E. W.

Charles and Cora were discussing a bird's nest, which they could see from the window. Charles said it was a robin's nest, because he saw some robins going in, but Cora declared it was not, because she saw some sparrows going in. Finally Charles said: "Well, it's probably a bird hotel, and all the birds go in." E. A.

Bobby was told to keep an eye on sister Carry, but meanwhile Bertie, the boy next door, came over and they got so interested in building up a factory, roof and all, that he forgot all about sister. Just then she appeared and mischievously knocked down their fine structure. Bobby jumped up stormily and slapped her. The boys erected another and a better house.

Bobby, who had left to get a drink, came back just in time to see Bertie ready to attack little Carrie.

"How dare you hit her?" he indignantly demanded.

"She started to knock down the house again," explained Bertie. "You thumped her good and proper for it," he impressively reminded.

"O," said Bobby, "that's different, she's my sister." F. J.

Doris and her father were great chums, and often he had told her he did not know what he would do without his little daughter. One time when her aunt was visiting her she asked Doris to accompany her home for the weekend. Doris' eyes brightened with pleasure, but after a moment's thought she said: "I'd awfully like to, auntie; but my papa couldn't get along all that time without me." E. M.

Dick and Helen were spending the afternoon at grandma's. Now, grandma always offered the children some refreshments, but this particular afternoon she was busy and forgot to do so. As the hours passed Dick grew restless, and said, "Grandma, I suppose sister will be asking you for some bread and butter soon, but make mine bread and jell, will you?" C. S. C.

When Jamie's married sister became the mother of a son, Jamie was proud of being an uncle, and carefully announced to every visitor and chance passerby, "I ain't but 7 years old, but I'm a uncle all right!"

Eighteen months later, when his sister's second baby arrived, Jamie ran out on the porch to spread the news.

"Say, Mr. Hopkins," he called to the next door neighbor, "I'm another uncle!" M. S.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

SQUARE IN PLAN.

THE average house fails in two respects to meet the needs of the average family. It assumes that the family is a fixed quantity as to numbers, and always on dress parade. Neither assumption is true. All households vary in size, and all want some chance to be informal.

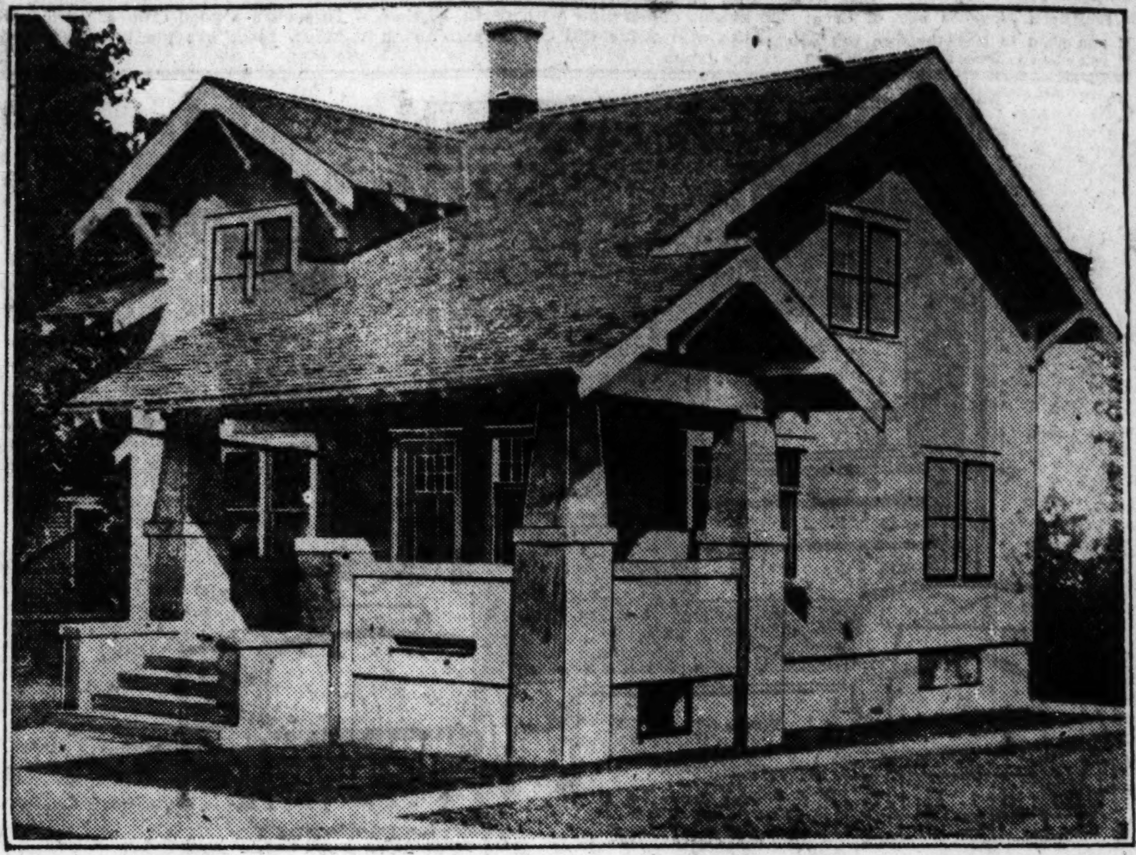
This dwelling meets both these requirements, as well as nearly all the regular ones. A couple starting married life in this house need finish only the ground floor, which contains one chamber. As the children arrive, the upstairs part would be finished and occupied, though the ground floor chamber would remain a wonderful convenience in case of sickness. Then, as the youngsters went away to school or to start families of their own, the daily occupancy would be narrowed to the first floor again, with the second floor in reserve for home comings.

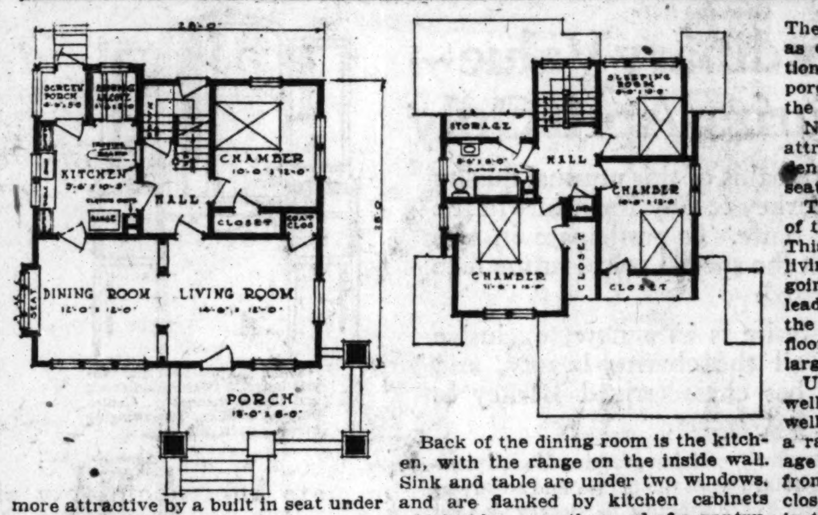
The other desire, for informality, especially at meals, is met by a delightful dining alcove, of which more later.

From the outside, this house is extremely good to look at. It is wonderfully compact, 28 feet by 28 feet in ground plan, with a projecting porch. This porch not only serves as an entrance, but one end of it could be screened for an outdoor sitting room, and as it projects to the side as well as in front, will catch every wandering breeze, and make the hottest summer evening comfortable.

Though square in plan, the house has none of the stiffness too often associated with square houses. The roof lines and window grouping attend to that, with the help of the porch. The stucco walls are laid on metal lath, which is attached to a strong wooden frame, and the interior plaster is put on the same material. Wood protected in this way is well guarded against fire, and will last almost indefinitely. The roof is covered with asphalt shingles.

No room is spared at the front of the house for a hall. The entrance door opens directly into the living room, 12 feet by 14 feet 6 inches, lighted from both sides, with a handy coat closet in the corner. The dining room, 12 feet square, is really a part of the living room, the two being separated only by a post and panel construction. In effect, it is all a big living room, 26½ feet by 12, and the dining end of this spacious room is rendered still more attractive by a built in seat under a group of windows.





Back of the dining room is the kitchen, with the range on the inside wall. Sink and table are under two windows, and are flanked by kitchen cabinets which take away the need of a pantry. The clothes chute opens here as well as on the floor above; there is a stationary ironing board, and the screened porch is large enough to accommodate the icebox.

Next to this screened porch, with an attractive window overlooking the garden, is the dining alcove, with built in seats and table.

Though there is no hall at the front of this house, there is one at the back. This is reached from either kitchen or living room, and contains the stairs going to the basement as well as those leading to the upper story. Across the hall from the kitchen is the ground floor bedroom, 10 by 12 feet, with a large closet and cross ventilation.

Upstairs are three bedrooms, one so well supplied with windows as to be well nigh a sleeping porch. There is a rather large bathroom, with a storage space opening from it, and the front bedrooms have uncommonly large closets. There is likewise a linen closet in the hall.

Embarrassing Moments

Father Was Out.

During the summer of 1908 B. P. (before prohibition) I became well acquainted with a certain girl. In making several calls on her I met all of the family except her father. One Sunday evening at dusk we were sitting on the front porch with her mother and sisters when a man, who had evidently been out with old John Barleycorn for the afternoon, came staggering up to the front gate and made several futile attempts to open it. Wishing to save the family the embarrassment of getting rid of the intruder, I rushed to the gate and tried to get him to leave. He protested strongly and I was just about to use force to get rid of him when the family recognized him in the dusk and informed me who he was. H. C.

Helping Himself.

It was in my first year of college life that I became acquainted with a girl whose home was in the college town. One Sunday evening I had accepted an invitation to dinner at her home, and found that she had also invited another friend on whom I was anxious to make a good impression. An excellent dinner was served and everything was lovely until the girl across the table said: "Can you reach the rolls, Mr. K.?"

"Why, yes," I said as I reached and took one, thinking she had been merely solicitous in my behalf. As the hostess passed the plate across the table, the laugh that went around, in which I joined, did not fail to impress on my memory one embarrassing moment. H. K.

The Blueberries Ran.

One day last summer my mother told me to go to the bakery. I was to get a blueberry pie. I was on my way home when a runaway horse came tearing down the street. I became interested in the horse, so that I did not notice that everybody was looking at me, until I was near home. I put my hand in my pocket and found to my astonishment that there was something sticky in it. I looked down and behold, the blueberries were running down my cape from the pie. I reached home, and ran up the stairs calling, "Mother! the pie is leaking!" A. B.

Just What He Feared.

I am a short man and weigh only 120 pounds. I am always conscious of my size, and try not to stand or sit near large people. One day on a street car I took a seat near the entrance, and, seeing that my neighbor at the left was a fair sized man, I felt comfortable. At the next stop a large woman got on and sat next to me. I began to feel uncomfortable. Later a crowd boarded the car, and soon a woman still larger than the one at my side was standing before me. The man at my left gave her his seat, and I found myself squeezed in between the two fat women. And the worst of it was that the people on the opposite side of the car began to laugh. I got up and went to the front of the car. M. G.

Tragic.

I am 39 and considered a rather well preserved woman. At a recent gathering there was considerable war talk, and during a lull in the conversation one woman of 60 or 65 turned to me and said in a loud voice, "You evidently remember the enthusiasm at the return of the troops at the close of the civil war." All turned toward me. It was an embarrassing moment for me, also a tragic one, for I fear each woman in that gathering will think of me as an admirer of the troops who returned years before I was born. J. K.

Not Quite Herself.

I had just taken gas to have a wisdom tooth removed, and as I had eaten nothing all day I felt rather dazed as a result of the gas and my head felt as if it didn't belong to my body. Anyway I walked out without paying my check. The cashier ran out to the street after me, and I followed her back, feeling like less than a nickel. Of course I couldn't blame them for thinking I was trying to get away with something. A. T.

Latest Reduced Carpet Prices

Carpet manufacturers have reduced the wholesale prices on Carpets for the fall season. We have immediately reduced our prices to correspond with these latest wholesale reductions. In some cases where we are discontinuing certain qualities, the reductions are more than are warranted by the new wholesale prices. We fully believe this is the last reduction for the coming fall season. As our retail prices are based on cost to our wholesale department, our selling prices are always lowest.

Sowing and Planting Lore

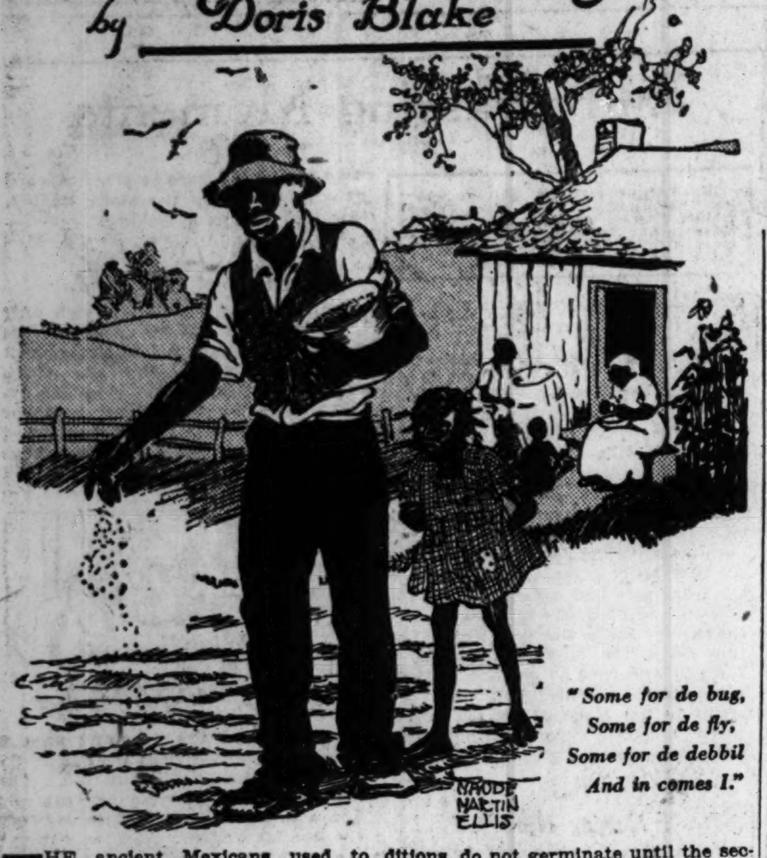
by Doris Blake



"Some for de bug,
Some for de fly,
Some for de debbil
And in comes I."

THE ancient Mexicans used to make idols of seeds and then eat them, so that they might be favored by the gods. This was especially done by those in ill health.

In Bohemia, it is considered lucky to have an aspen planted on the premises. If you sow rape seed with imprecations, it will grow and thrive, but if sowed with praises, it will do the reverse.

This rule in gardening never forget,
To sow dry and set wet.

Sow thin, shear thin.

Sow flax in the morning and you will have yellow seed; but if you sow it in the evening it will be large and red.

Never sow anything on your birthday, for it is a sign that it will outlive you.

As many nights as the moon is obscured by clouds, so many days will be delayed the coming up of planted seed.

Who in January sows oats, gets gold and groats.

In Norfolk and Wales, if a drill goes from one end of a field to the other without depositing any seed, some person connected with the farm will die before one year.

Some people think that if seeds are sown on Palm Sunday, they will be sure to come double.

Flowers should be planted or potted in the sign of Virgo, the virgin.

Tuberous rooted vegetables such as potatoes, turnips, etc., should not be planted in the sign of Pisces (the fish), but in the sign of Libra (the reins or scales.)

If seeds, planted under proper conditions, do not germinate until the second year, it is a sign that the planter will never be rich.

If you plant single flowers when the sign in the heavens is Gemini ("The Twins"), they will come out double.

If you plant peas, beans, peanuts or corn, do not burn the cobs, hulls, or shells. Strew them over the field. If you burn them, there will be dry weather, and your crop will not do well.

It is unlucky to sow any kind of seed on the last three days of March.

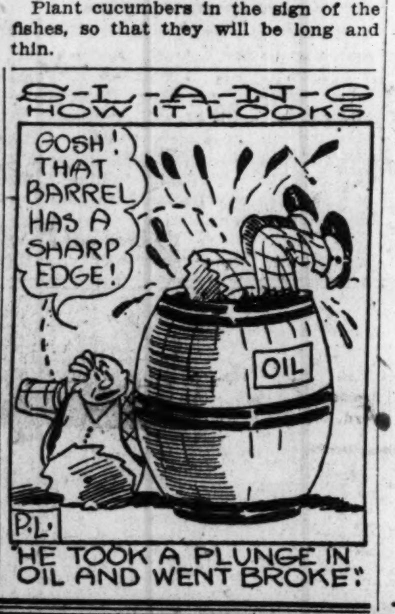
In Tyrol, before sowing his seed, a peasant sprinkles his field with small bits of charcoal, for good luck.

Sow your beans:

One for the mouse, one for the crow,
One to rot, and one to grow.

Plant cucumbers in the sign of the fishes, so that they will be long and thin.

S-L-A-N-G
HOW IT LOOKS



GOSH! THAT BARREL HAS A SHARP EDGE!
OIL

"HE TOOK A PLUNGE IN OIL AND WENT BROKE."

Peasants in Prussia sprinkle the returning sowers with water, so that the harvest may be plentiful.

Potatoes should be planted in the new moon, so that they will have sufficient light to strike root, but the sign of the moon must be in the feet.

In India, a pasture is dedicated to the gods, and when the peasants sow they veil their faces, so as not to see an inauspicious person.

Southern Negroes say of corn:

If you plant in May the corn will weigh;
If you plant in June the corn will [illegible]!

Cucumbers must be planted in the morning before sunrise, or they will be destroyed by bugs.

If the seed you are going to sow is laid on the table, it will not come up.

If, in sowing, you accidentally drop a handful of seed, you must not pick it up or you will not have a good crop.

It is unlucky to thank any one who gives you seed to sow.

In Albania, when the spring planting is finished, the farmer rubs the handle of his plow with earth, so that the wild swine will not dare to touch his crops.

To plant a tree on new ground, was, in Biblical times, sure to bring great prosperity to the planter.

Farmers of ancient Greece believed that certain fruits would not burst on the tree if three stones were cast into the hole when the seed was planted.

If you want a good crop, go out in silence on a certain day, fetch mold from three inherited fields, and mix it with your seed.

To secure a good crop of corn, sow it when there are plenty of stars in the sky.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

DANDELIONS AND OTHER WILD GREENS.

DURING every spring for eleven years now the writer of this column has invited its readers to get down on their knees in the open and dig, not "pick," a mess or many messes of dandelion greens. And there has also been praise for the dandelion in the editorial column, in the cartoons, in the health department, in the gardening department, and in news items. Even the poets might have quoted the ancient child rhyme, "I bring the dandelion, the prettiest thing that grows on the earth in the glad days of spring."

But it is the plant, not its blossom, that concerns this column. Yet when quickly grown dandelions, such as grow in last year's garden or in deep grass, or in plowed fields—large and single—are in bud, that bud cooked gives us another type of delicacy from the one we get when the dandelion is the youngest, and least like a vegetable when cooked.

Your Spring Tonic.

It rather interests me in looking into my files to find how many ways I have found to tell people that in the earliest dandelion we have a plant with a blanched or white heart, which, when cooked, is true vegetable lobster. Once it was thus: "Here's where you get your spring tonic, your vegetable lobster, your best salad, your good bitter tasting stuff."

By the way, the old methods of cooking dandelions made them about four times as bitter as they needed to be, just as tea is made bitter by boiling and bitterer yet by long boiling.

In a news column during the war there was an item about how the French soldier, the "poilu," regarded the dandelion. It said: "The spring crop of dandelions is a great event to the poilus in France. To gather them they will run every kind of risk, even to crawling out on their bellies into that tract of death, No Man's Land. They consider them the greatest possible delicacy as a spring dish. The part they eat is the soft white part. . . . Those hollow eyed, mud stained poilus simply swarm out of their trenches, and, falling on hands and knees, gather bushels of dandelions, which they eat raw and unseasoned, or as a salad."

The French have long cultivated the dandelion, and during the winter in Paris one of the wonderful salad materials to be purchased are the long, perfectly white leaves of bleached dandelions. Many people—and with good reason—prefer them to the various sorts of bleached chickory, of which the Brusselslof, or what we call French endive, is one.

A few years ago cultivation of the dandelion on market garden scale began anew in this country, and of course the growers thought they were doing something never done before, yet twenty years before that Miss Parloa had given a description of the cultivated dandelion, and how to cook it.

In Massachusetts it is said that the dandelion today is profitably grown on land that is worth $1,000 an acre. Dandelion greens always used to be procurable in Boston's big public market all through the winter, coming there from the south. The plant when forced grows so rapidly that it loses one of its virtues—its bitterness—but is a less wasteful green, and preferable to the New Englander to spinach.

Cooking Dandelions.

Scalding or blanching the green is only a way of giving it a final cleaning. This cleaning is desirable, particularly when it is dug wild, within city limits or parks, where it may have been stepped on—its heart was not reached.

The best thing to do is to clean the greens as you dig them, or before you bring them into the house. They need a good shaking to remove any grass or dead vegetation, and the kitchen is not a good place in which to do this. Besides, the work is pleasant out of doors in the sun and wind, and may be discouraging indoors. After the root has been cut off close to the plant, dead or poor leaves pulled off, and the whole shaken well, wash. Wash and wash and wash, lifting them each time into a colander instead of pouring the water off them.

When the dandelions have been cleaned and washed, drop them into a large quantity of boiling water and leave them in it about five or up to ten minutes after they boil, according as they are a tender or a slightly sunburned green. Then pour them into a colander, and instantly pour cold water through them, or "sousle" them well in cold water, then drain. After they have drained put them in a kettle and add to them a small amount of boiling water and cook them but a short time, or until tender.

When tender, squeeze or drain off the water and serve with butter, and only a bit of salt. The butter may be slightly acidulated with a few drops of vinegar, but to use much vinegar is to defeat the purpose, the high purpose, for which you should eat the greens. They are a great tonic, the best of spring tonics.

Cold Dandelion Salad.

Well buttered greens are delicious cold—this is presupposing they were well cooked—without any salad dressing, but an orange flavored French dressing is excellent for them. Rub a bowl with a clove of garlic, add a half teaspoon of salt and paprika to taste, dissolved in the orange juice, of which there should be one tablespoon to each two of oil. Whip the whole until creamy and serve. The juice of the blood orange is the best for this.

Dandelions with Bacon Fat.

When cooked dandelions are hot, hot bacon fat and the crisp bacon powdered, may be used with them instead of butter, for a change. These greens used always to be boiled with pork or bacon and for two or three hours. Pork may need that long boiling, but a tender green leaf, which is at least 80 per cent water, needs nothing of the sort.

Preserving Dandelions.

Here is a recipe of 1888 for preserving dandelions like sourcrout, but I have not tried it out: "Place at the bottom of a barrel all the dandelions likely to be used at one cooking, cover over with salt, then as many more dandelions and as much more salt, and so on until the barrel is full. Place a cover on top with a heavy weight on it. The moisture in the dandelions will make enough brine, but if not, use a little water so that all the dandelions will be covered." As you see, this is but the outline of what to do. A careful recipe for preserving cabbage in the same way tells how to tamp, how to use a cloth over, and rinse often, etc.—many details to perfection.

Other Recipes.

The Italians use a sour-sweet egg sauce on dandelions. By the way, if, after dandelions are cleaned, they are kept damp they need not be used for some days; therefore, it is well to clean more than is needed for one day's cooking while you have your hand in the business.

Three years ago, under the head "The Despised Dandelion," there was printed an article—in one of the best of the women's magazines—written by two of the people of the home economics department of Cornell university. This article contained recipes for a dandelion (raw) sandwich filling, egg and dandelion salad, dandelion and apple salad, dandelion and tomato jelly salad, dressed dandelions for jellied salad, dandelions and tomato sauce.

I must say that the last recipe especially did not appeal to me, but the garnishing with boiled egg is not a bad plan, as it adds to the nutritive value of the dish, and thin slices of raw tomato for a garnish give just that tiny bit of acid that is good.

Wild Greens in General.

The United States department of agriculture has done a good deal of work on the subject of wild greens for food. Some of this has been written up in the year book, and number XI.

Both the rough and the smooth pig- of the "Food Thrifty Series, 1917," has the title "Wild Greens and Salad Plants." weed are much praised as greens by those who know them. We have to get into a botanical discussion to describe the difference between these two, but the smooth pigweed is called lamb's quarter and the rough, which belongs to the amaranthus family, I have known to be called "red root." It does have a red root, but the plant recognized botanically by that name is something else.

However, this amaranthus pigweed does grow in the most desolate places, where grass refuses to flourish, and right under our city noses, around apartment houses where the lot is uncared for, in sandbur preserves, etc. From calling it red root some people have advanced a step and called it beet root, because its root is somewhat fleshy as well as a rose red. By the way, the other pigweed belongs to the goosefoot family.

Cooking Rough Pigweed.

Only the upper tender parts of the plant need be used, but, when young, use it root and all. The greens will keep their color without blanching, being of a coarse sort, but perhaps boiling water should be poured over them and then cold, as a sanitary measure.

This green will cook in from fifteen to twenty minutes in plenty of water and give off a faint aroma of the beet if not cooked too long. When tender, drain and chop and season with some salt and butter, or use other fat and a meat stock.

The rough pigweed is not beloved by the sentimental, who call it a "wretched garden weed." But try it, and you will find it quite as pleasant to eat as spinach and not nearly as much work to prepare for the pot.

Milkweed Greens.

Milkweed sprouts have been used as an imitation asparagus in various localities. This green is good even after the leaf buds are quite large. In fact, these make dainty eating. Butter seems to me all the seasoning needed, but lemon juice is recommended by some people. Here is one eater's recipe:

"Cut off the roots and soak the tops for a few minutes in slightly salted water to free them from possible insect life. (Insects are fond of the milkweed blossom and find the plant friendly quarters before the blossom comes out.) Cook exactly like spinach, in a small quantity of water, and for about the same length of time, and season in the same manner. A few cubes of fried salt pork or bacon can also be used for seasoning. It makes a delicate and appetizing dish."

Any edible green leaf contains that precious health giving principle which some people today are trying to get by eating yeast or by taking something out of a bottle or box which manufacturers have taken out of green leaves and put up for those who will not do their own manufacturing by eating green leaves in abundance and often. That principle puts color into the blood and is an energizer, although the leaves themselves are not energy foods. The manufacturers throw away the leftover, which is one of the best of food "roughages." The roughage part of spinach is called a stomach sweep. That is what all greens are, besides giving us the vitamines—their greater or greatest service.

INGROWN

NAIL

Will Turn Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing toe nail reduces inflammation and pain at once and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, any druggist will sell you a small bottle containing directions.

World's Record Set by General Furniture Co.

and the Lumbermen's Ass'n of Chicago in building and furnishing a home complete in one day at 6734 S. Claremont Ave. 8 hours in building. 1 hour in furnishing.

Another Blow to Profiteering

The GENERAL led the way in forcing furniture prices back to normal. Now they have joined hands with the Lumbermen's Ass'n of Chicago to give you liberty from rent hogs. If you landlord evicts you in the morning, you can have a home like the one above to move into by evening. This house, exactly as picture, was built in 8 hours, the GENERAL FURNITURE CO. furnished it in 1 hour. It is now open for inspection. A visit will convince you of how easily you can escape high rents and excessive furniture prices.

The Reason Why We Grow

Our Free Savings Bank Account Plan is the big secret of our success. It is, however, only one of many reasons why a GENERAL CUSTOMER is always a GENERAL CUSTOMER. This plan gives you the privilege of buying on time with the same advantages that other dealers give you for cash. One dollar out of every ten dollars you spend with us for merchandise is deposited in your own name with the Chicago City Bank & Trust Co. The bank is instructed to turn this money over to you as soon as you have completed six monthly payments on your account. Full particulars at any of our nine big stores.

Attend The Great HARTMAN Six Day FURNITURE SALE Before You Move

BUY NOW

IN THE history of Chicago's biggest furniture sales there never was a selling event of greater significance than this one. Purchases for this great sale were specially made by us with a view to giving those about to move extraordinary money-saving advantages. We purchased for spot cash, from some of the very largest and best factories, their surplus stocks, sample lines, and a few discontinued patterns embracing furniture for every room in the house. But because we were content to buy only the "real" bargains, we were compelled to curtail our purchases, and although the assortment is large, the quantities are rather limited. We therefore have restricted this sale to six days only. We believe we have enough merchandise to supply the demand, but in order for you not to be disappointed, whether you are about to move or not, we strongly advise your early attendance at this unprecedented money-saving event.

Furniture Stored FREE Until Needed

WE KNOW that there are many who are more than anxious to take advantage of these tremendous savings, but who, on account of moving, do not desire to have their purchases delivered until later. For your convenience, we will permit you to make your selections now, and we will warehouse the goods you purchase, FREE OF CHARGE, and deliver them to you when you specify. Whether you are about to change your residence or not, whether you wish delivery made tomorrow, next week, or next month, is immaterial to us—we will hold them till you want them. We are here to serve you to your absolute satisfaction, but whatever else you do, don't fail to take advantage of these stupendous bargains. Remember, you must make your purchase during the coming week, but we will hold the goods for you till you want them, and then you can

TAKE A YEAR AND A HALF TO PAY

PAY LATER

WE NOT only enable you in this bargain sale to make extraordinary savings in the purchase of your household goods—we not only offer to store them for you free of charge until you desire to have them delivered—but we furthermore enable you to benefit by the great convenience of our extended payment plan. HARTMAN'S liberal credit plan has enabled thousands of families in and around Chicago to beautify their homes, without any financial hardship whatever. The small monthly payments which you make are really never noticed, and besides, you have the use of the goods while you are paying for them. All business enterprises of any importance are conducted on a credit basis. Then why not furnish your home in the same convenient manner? You should feel proud that your credit is so good that you can come to HARTMAN'S and buy all you desire in this convenient manner, taking a year and a half to pay your bill.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

A tabloid résumé of this, that, and the other things now posing effectively as amusements in the Loop theaters:

"Mary"—A fruity musical sarsaparilla to which Mr. Cohan has added a finger or two of the well known Cohan "kick." The sentimental sort of thing we imagine that Mr. Cohan would "kid" to death were it not his own. For instance, that sappy scene between the hero and heroine as they pose before a bungalow and emit an oozy ballad entitled "The Love Nest." It is abject and popular, yessing the public with felicitous gusto, though with a saving tongue-in-cheek. It belongs, I suppose, among the benefactions. Try to get in.

"Linger Longer Letty"—Written around the quizzical personality of Miss Charlotte Greenwood, who can tell a riddle as well as, and perhaps better than, any other musical comedy comedienne. She jokes, dances, acts, and sings, and her play permits her, in the lingo of the esthetic flappers, to express herself. The show is quick, humorous, wise, and sporty, and it is not handicapped by any too much "class." For the Elks' rather than the Woman's Club.

"Irene"—Like the luscious flavors of Mr. Wrigley's chewing gums, it lasts. Although it is nearly everything that a musical comedy ought to be, it received for its first twenty weeks' performances in Chicago the tidy, not to say the handsome, total of $500,000, according to Mr. Garrity of the Shuberts, who counted the money. Miss Helen Shipman will be replaced in the leading role this week by Miss Dale Winter, who in the sunny nights of dissipation's long ago, sang well and with dignity the Mother Songs indigenous to late hours and emotions alcoholic. In the picturesque assassination of her husband, Mr. Colosimo, Miss Winter's behavior was excellent, as became a primrose misplaced on the dubious brim of the heating waters; and she won her present job without trading ignobly on that sordid but not uninteresting homicide.

"Pitter Patter"—Ernest Truex, Miss Eve Lynn, Miss Marion Keats, John Price Jones, et al. in songs, episodes, love making, and dances of a moderate interest and quality. It went very, very well, the New York reporters say, in New York.

"Tickle Me"—Frank Tinney.

"East Is West"—Miss Fay Bainter in a series of (to many) delectable tricks and cutenesses as the daughter of Prof. Herbert Johnstone, a celebrated American scholar and missionary to China. Kidnaped by Chinese gypsies at the age of 4, Miss Bainter enters the drama as Ming Toy, a forlorn but piquant and vendible little slave girl, offered for sale in the busy basement of a Shanghai mart. The essential conflict of this edifying comedy is, thereafter, between the callow son of the American ambassador, and Charlie Yong, the amorous and sinister chop suey king of San Francisco's dark, cryptic, and oriental cafeteria life. The populace adores Miss Bainter's broad legerdemain and also Mr. George Nash's rococo façade of a swell but nasty Chink-American. The play is produced by William Harris, the solemn impresario of "Abraham Lincoln" and "Marie Stuart."

"Shavings"—Spoon vittels for the sentimental pessimists. Mr. Harry Beresford, who is beloved more than any other actor by Chicago press men, appears as a noble, unselfish, New England village soft-wit toy maker, who worships children and the wild flowers, and to whom a good deed is more fun than a shrewd trick and prosperity. He loves and loses the desirable Miss Clara Moores, impersonating a pious widow, to Mitchell Harris, a tall trim major of the erstwhile A. E. F. Mr. Beresford's acting is Sears-Roebuck in its inclusions and extensiveness. It is a catalog of exhibition, performance, interpretation, impersonation, characterization, showmanship, caricature, buffoonery, sincerity, insincerity, honesty, and salesmanship, not to be excelled in any list put out by the auctioneers of the theater. A good actor, stopped, perhaps, by popular demand for bad acting.

"Bab"—Mrs. Rinehart, the author of this comedy, has lived a cosmic life. "She knows," from her Odyssean browsings from Flanders fields to Pittsburgh, the ways of men and women from the cradle to the crematory. A great person, Mrs. Rinehart, I think, clever, intrepid, handsome (judging from her photographs), and expert in the transference of that which she wishes to be transferred to what is called the printed page. In "Bab" she exposes through the fluent medium of Miss Helen Hays, the damp sub-deb, flapping her moist wings as she emerges from the so-called nest. Miss Hays is youthful, vigorous, good looking, individual. She does for "Bab" much more than Mrs. Rinehart could have anticipated from the show shops. You will like Miss Hays and "Bab," if you don't expect, as often you do, too much from the alleged American theater.

MISS DALE WINTER in "IRENE"
STUDEBAKER LEWIS-SMITH PHOTO

MISS OCTAVIA BROSKE – "MARY"

"The Bat"—A quiet, exciting circus, full of sleek crimes and misdemeanors. I suspected it to be, from a first night observation, a successful hippodrome, deserving no more attention from a theater critic than Sells-Floto or the Ringlings'. You liked it? So did I. So does everybody. We must have our mud pies.

"The Tavern"—A humorous spoofing by Mr. Cohan of the heavy, old-time, picturesque play of adventure. It did not get over in Chicago as it did in New York, and it is even now packing up to leave. The Chicago production of "The Tavern," if it did nothing else, suggested that Mr. Lowell Sherman should play nothing hereafter except striding parts with curls and sweeping gestures—Virginius, Antony, Spartus the Gladiator, or Romeo. The "hit" in Chicago of "The Tavern" is the remark now and then of Joseph Allen, "What's all the shootin' about?" That line is blown up in the advertisements and the editorials as the "punch" of "The Tavern." One suspects that Mr. Allen's personality is responsible for the inflation of that commonplace inquiry.

"Dulcy"—A smart comedy for bright audiences. Miss Lynn Fontanne, as a maker of mischief and platitudes, is top-hole, and so are the others in her competent entourage. The play is by Messrs. Kaufman and Connelley, New York journalists, with an earned courtesy to Franklin P. Adams, another New York journalist. It is worth while, if you are.

"The Beggar's Opera"—Quaint stuff from the antiquity of the early eighteenth century, by Benjamin Gay. Pretty, old-fashioned music, broad comedy, and excellent English singing and acting.

Mr. Woods, as follows, beats upon his breast a merry tom-tom, and shrives himself of unpretty conduct in the drama:

My Dear Percy: I read with absorbing interest your sincere and touching threnody on my wasted life. If I am not contrite, it is because the bitter-sweet depths of contrition are not in this hardened heart; I ached for repentance, but repentance would not come.

But perhaps there's a reason. Not long ago these sinful eyes of mine looked with admiration not second to yours on the two handsome structures dedicated by my labors to that mellifluous twain, Chicago and Thespis. And as I gazed the spirit of Satan whispered in my ear in this wise:

"Al, these theaters were built, perhaps, for Art, but not by Art. The tragic symphonies of Shakespeare, the Celtic rhythms of Synge, the whimsical pipe of Barrie, or even the husky bassoon of Augustus Thomas, went not into their making. They were built by 'Up in Mabel's Room,' 'The Girl in the Limousine,' 'Breakfast in Bed,' 'Ladies' Night,' and the rest of that cacophonous and wildly cavorting host."

If this be reason, make the least of it.

What profits it a man, say you, if he gain two theaters in Chicago more than Shubert, and lose his own soul?

Percy, it profits him nothing. But those two theaters would not stand today wooing the Muse to the great suburb of THE TRIBUNE if a million souls hadn't been lost with mine to build them. And can I mourn for those souls? No, my dear Percy! Not while their laughter rings in my ears as they de-

Barrymores' Brother and Sister Act, 'Clair de Lune,' Is Pretty, but a Mess

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, April 23.—[Special.]—The Barrymores have become Brahmins of the theater. They have stage rituals sacred to themselves and hallowed by their worshippers, who do not aspire to know what they portend. A future H. G. Wells will erroneously discover that the opening night of Michael Strange's "Clair de Lune," in which Ethel and John Barrymore play in the Empire theater, was also the date of a sun-spot and draw a readable conclusion. History prefers to veil itself in hieroglyphics. The ascending Barrymores are showing a preference for being historical.

It will amuse the future H. G. Wells to discover that a contemporary commentator thought that the meaningful mysteries of "Clair de Lune" were beautiful bunk. "The early Manhattanite," he will write, "had a brain equal to a fair understanding of The Barrie, but it faltered when dealing with the problem of The Barrymore."

"Clair de Lune" is the Barrie-most play. It is also the missing Maeterlinck. Liberate those two from the inhibitions of grammar and sense and you have Michael Strange. I think Strange has gone to the workshop of the former and picked up all the odds and ends of moods which did not fit into "Mary Rose" and to the secret castle of the latter to gather all the miscellany of word sounds which were not used in "Pelleas and Melisande." "Clair de Lune" is pretty, but a mess.

The author makes one unwilling concession to our bold barbarian stage laws. She stoops to a plot. There is an ashamed confession in very small type on the Empire theater programs that Michael Strange borrowed an incident from Victor Hugo's "L'Homme Qui Rit" for the foundation of her play. I believe that Strange is more apologetic for having used any plot at all than for having borrowed one. In any event the plagiarism is slight. The disfigurement of John Barrymore by a large daub of red grease paint which carries one corner of his mouth to his ear is all the author need thank Hugo for.

Around this decorative incident Strange word-paints a thing which is neither fable, because it has no moral, nor play, because it has no trend, nor poem, because it has no beauty. "Clair de Lune" has deceptive simulations of all three. You will think it points some obscure moral until it is all over and the moral lost. You will think it is a play at moments, because Ethel Barrymore is saying something in a sweetly low significant tone. And you will often breathe deeply, as if a beautiful thought had come out of a line, but again it is Ethel Barrymore, draped in gowns that are dreamt to grace her beauty and dripping senseless syllables that are jewels.

The play is about the exquisite depravities of a royal court, to which no location is ascribed and the existence of which is not dated. The empty hearts of its royalties and nobles are moved by empty passions. It contains no heroic chevalier who may aspire to the hand of lonely Queen Ethel Barrymore. She stoops idly to unworthy loves. It is Guinevere with no Launcelot. There is a duchess and her princeling fiancé. There is a pandering seneschal who slinks about distributing various keys to unpassionate intriguing couples. He is the arranger of affairs which pall. There are numerous lords and ladies who wish it were not impossible to yawn while being kissed. It is the palace of Queen Barrymore the Beautiful Bored.

A traveling company of listless mountebanks fills the palace park with formal merriment one evening. They are a leprous clown, his blind sweetheart, and a philosopher-proprietor. John Barrymore makes his entrance dancing some of Nijinsky's steps better than Queen Victoria, but not quite as well as the kronprinz might have done them. He unmasks a hideous visage. The enterprising seneschal shakes up his assortment of keys and makes a new distribution. The clown finds himself in the chamber of the duchess. The blind girl is allotted to the princeling fiancé.

Thanks to the bravery of Miss Violet Kemble Cooper, who plays the duchess, a totally unexpected and amazing moment of drama is injected into the fitful lyricism of the proceedings when she takes her scene with clowning John Barrymore seriously. It is a bit plebeian, of course, this coming right out and acting in the middle of an unacted drama, but the inclination is to "SHOW me the home wherein music dwells and I shall show you a happy, peaceful and contented home"—and there's more truth than poetry in these few lines penned by Longfellow. Poor indeed is the home that now-a-days cannot afford music of some kind. The little money invested in a player piano, grand piano or Victrola will bring musical dividends well worth while. To suggest and to help you choose the right musical instrument at the right price for your home is only a part of the service of this great Wurlitzer music house.

stand up and shout undecorously when Miss Cooper, courageously accepting the scene for what it—a moment of perfect Grand Guignol horribleness—acts the lady degenerate as devilishly as she is written. The only sincere moment in the play is hers, when she throws herself gloatingly in the arms of the disgusting clown and begs for a more real, though horrible, embrace than the ministering seneshal has yet found for her. Strange is here exposed as a decadent poet. It is characteristic of decadence that vice is its only sincere element.

The play falls away from this crisis to its end by inertia. The artistic energy of the author is exhausted by this one person of the moment of viciousness. The clown commits bored suicide. The queen banishes the duchess and the princeling. The seneshal reduces his keys and prospective tips by two. At the last Queen Ethel, in something pale, pink, patrician, and perfect, is left smiling wistfully alone, regretting that queens can live so near so much of life and participate in none of it.

Ethel Barrymore's rôle in the play is negative, John Barrymore's is small. One wonders why either of them plays in it. Michael Strange is the pen name of Blanche Oelrichs Barrymore, the new wife of the latter. Perhaps he, at any rate, did his part for the love o' Mike.

A fortune has been spent on the staging of the play. The costumes are proudly perfect. Miss Barrymore's gowns of white and near-white pale scintillating colors are unreally beautiful. Your excuse for paying the $5.50 which is charged for a seat to this exclusive production might be that you are profiteering when you pay with stuff of so little value as money for a glimpse of Miss Barrymore at the apogee of her lasting beauty. But your reason would be the audience. New oil millionaires have been paying king's ransoms for the privilege of being contained in the same room with the kind of people who are making evenings in the Empire theater social events of the first importance and incidentally terrible experiences with bad manners.

MR. P. T. HARMON,
Care Dreamland Ball Room,
Chicago, Illinois.

After reading your ad. of yesterday which you state Elgar has been crowned king of improvised music in the world, I would say you sure had to criticize O'Hare's crust, when you attempt to crown your made-to-order the king of improvised music according to the rules of harmony, without jazz! You really should say JAZZ AND VERY POOR HARMONY.

Yours for fair play,
J. CEPAK.

MR. CEPAK:

When the musical world crowned the King of improvised music, it was the perfect harmony. He still retains in his method of improvising all numbers.

When musicians of your kind attempt to imitate him, you find yourself out of harmony and in the COMMON JAZZ CLASS! Musicians more clever than you have been unsuccessful in attempting to imitate Elgar. His method of playing the one-step and fox-trot with that crooning, peppery and rhythm, as well as the artistic interpretation given the waltzes with the technic of Mr. Gossette at the organ, is what has placed ELGAR'S BAND IN A CLASS BY ITSELF! They play from the simple song waltz to the most intricate waltzes of Lincke and Strauss.

SECOND THOUGHTS OF A FIRST-NIGHTER
"Away up among the highlights of 'The Four Horsemen' is the poetry and pathos of its love story. All the admiration and sympathy he (Julio) has won as the pampered, reckless idol of the rich old Centaur, he retains when he becomes the deliberately impetuous lover of Laurier's wife. There's a nobility to his villainy that somehow makes him more a man."

The Time Has Come, the Walrus Said, to Save a Bit o'Money

"BURIED TREASURE."

Produced by Paramount. Directed by George D. Baker. Presented at the Orpheum.

THE CAST.

Pauline Vandermullen	Marion Davies
Dr. John Grant	Norman Kerry
William Vandermuellen	Anders Randolf
Mrs. Vandermuellen	Edith Shayne
Godfrey Vandermuellen	Edw. Schenck
Joe De Chavannes	John Charles
The Captain	Thomas Findlay

By Mae Tinée.

MONEY can do everything in the world for Marion Davies—but make an actress of her. It can procure stories for her, furnish her with lavish sets and costumes, surround her with clever people, but the automaton remains the automaton.

Miss Davies expresses emotions of various kinds after just one fashion. She opens her mouth as wide as she can as often as she can and she shakes her head vigorously—doubtless to prove to a not too interested world that her hair is all her own. These are her prize tricks. Add to these the simper, the rolling eyes, the gauche mannerisms, and you have her complete. She has no reserves and no surprises for you save the constant astonishment that possesses you as to how she gets away with it.

At that she hasn't much of a story in "Buried Treasure." It's a foolish thing that meddles a bit with the reincarnation theory and gives Miss Davies a chance to go into trances. During these she believes she is a Spanish señorita. Through the gift, or whatever you want to call it, that she possesses she is enabled to discover buried treasure, which enables her and the poor young doctor she loves to marry with prospects of extreme prosperity.

The plot is awkwardly worked out, with everybody idiotically doing things nobody would be apt to do under any circumstances. Miss Davies, in such situations, may be said to be in her element. But Mr. Kerry, Mr. Randolph, and John Charles looked like they wished they were well out of it. How the others felt doesn't matter—for they didn't matter much in the picture.

It—the picture—will probably be around town for some time. The Davies pictures are booked, it seems, whether any one wants to see them or not.

On this particular one—save your money!

A London Sunday school teacher writes to Constance Talmadge of an incident that occurred in her classroom.

She had been reprimanding a child for lying.

"Haven't you ever heard of 'conscience'?" she asked sternly.

For a moment the child sat apparently wrapped in thought. Suddenly the little face lighted up.

"O, yes'm, Miss C.!" she exclaimed. "Conscience Talmudge."

Despite rumors to the contrary, the four remaining pictures to be made by Charles Chaplin for First National under his contract will be two reelers. There has been an idea abroad that they were all to be features on the order of "The Kid."

Ask Me! Ask Me!

BABS: Oh, my dear, don't grudge me a vacation. My e'en get tired. It's mighty nice of you to feel that way, though. We forwarded your letter to Constance Talmadge. If it's anything like the one you wrote me, she's bound to enjoy it. Good luck, Babs!

KATHIE: I'm crazy about your stationery. It's so nice and oriental and ever'THING! Thank you for the information. Every time I took my typewriter in hand I showed my ignorance, didn't I?

◆

M. A. D.: Address Conrad Nagel, care of the Lambs club, New York City. Y'wekkum.

DASH-DA-DASH: HARVEY was bad to his old side kick, wasn't he? Never mind, here's the column where somebody pays attention to you! Step this way, please. Don't crowd! Hair to the contrary, Miss Daniels, I am told, has ears.

MISS P.: Your Easter greeting card made me vurr' happy. How does it feel to be nice and thoughtful like you are?

◆

FAN: Of course! The more accomplished a girl is, the better chance she has every way, everywhere! So keep right on with your swimming and dancing. Some day maybe the camera will click out a masterpiece—and you'll be in it.

BETTY BROWN: Nice, appetizing little name, if you twist it around a bit. Wallace Reid is married. Vurr' much so. And happy, m'dear! O, WONDERFUL!

THE FATHER-IN-LAW'S RETURN.

The knobs are on the doors again,
  The doors are on their hinges,
And to and fro they gayly go,
  All innocent of twinges.
The screens are fixed, the boxes, too,
  And everything's up to taw;
It's easy to see that he's back with me,
  My marvelous father-in-law.

CHO.

With rule and hammer and plumb and saw—
Oh, I've a most wonderful father-in-law.

2.

The baby's bed doesn't fall apart
  And drop him upon the floor,
And the pantry shelf controls itself
  And doesn't come down any more.
The icebox leak you would vainly seek,
  It hasn't a crack or flaw,
And the house is gay all the live long day
  Because of my father-in-law.

CHO.

For it's here with a hammer and there with a saw—
Oh, he's a miraculous father-in-law.

3.

He's tuned the piano, adjusted the clock
  (It's a heavenly gift, I guess);
And even the gutter is utterly utter—
  No longer a miserable mess.
Everything gees when it ought to gee,
  And haws when it ought to haw;
No wonder I sing what a wonderful thing
  Is a wonderful father-in-law.

CHO.

With his magical plumb and miraculous saw,
And his skill and science and lore and law—
Oh, I have a marvelous father-in-law.

WILLYS-KNIGHT

Improves with use

Begin with the motor

Too many people buy an automobile from the outside in, instead of from the inside out.

Good lines give distinction, but a good motor gives results. The Willys-Knight body is a thing of beauty, but its Sleeve-Valve Motor is a thing of duty, and duty comes first.

Many cars will intrigue you with their lines. But the Willys-Knight adds to the grace of a beautiful body, the quiet cumulative efficiency of the Sleeve-Valve Motor—the only motor that grows finer and fleeter with use.

We will have one of our beautiful Knight sedans, finished in 18-karat gold plate, together with many other of our models on exhibition at the North Side Automobile Show from April 26th to April 30th inclusive, which will be well worth your seeing.

MUSIC

Resume of the Symphony Season Just Finished

By Ruth Miller.

NO one knows just why the Chicago Symphony orchestra chose to close the most successful of its thirty seasons with Siegfried's death music and the finale from Wagner's "Dusk of the Gods." To explain the perversity that caused the orchestral powers to end a year of greatest symphonic glory on a funereal note would furnish a nice problem for a psycho-analyst.

The most brilliant facet in their 1920-'21 jewel of symphonic accomplishment consisted of the orchestral novelties presented, some twenty-nine in all. No one knows just how Mr. Stock did it, but to all outward seeming in his scouting among music upblishers and European music makers abroad last summer he managed to lure into the Chicago's orchestra's library every little continental composition of any merit whatsoever.

Other symphonic leaders summered in Europe and escorted back in state two or three lean and hungry novelties, to the accompaniment of a pathetic plaint about the disastrous effects the war had had upon European composition. Mr. Stock said nothing, investigated the Neo-English school, which is accomplishing more just at present in the way of music writing than all the rest of the world put together, and came back loaded down.

It was suggested to me last week that Mr. Stock resorted to a bit of strategy in going about his novelty hunt. Estimating shrewdly the sagacity of his contemporaries, he had waited quietly until they had done their European music shopping and departed. Then he had gone out and taken what they had overlooked.

Mr. Stock considers that the prize of his grab bag was that young Englishman, Arnold Bax, whose symphonic poem, "The Garden of the Fand," has had two hearings this year. Admitting his slight tendency to affect the perfumed Debussian idiom, the Chicago orchestra's director declares nevertheless that of all the Neo-English school Bax has the greatest originality, finish, and form.

Mr. Holst, whose "Planets" received their repetition on the season's last program, pleases Mr. Stock's orchestral fancy second. He likes this music maker's rugged honesty, his skill in characteristic details of orchestration, and his sound dramatic impulse.

Mr. Stock, who with his many symphonic colleagues ignored calmly the yelps of critical pain that went up in the east and west over the orchestral efforts of Gustav Mahler, has much praise for that Teuton's ways with a big hand. He feels that it will probably be necessary for popular success to telescope the meandering length of Mahler's seventh symphony, which received its American premiere here a fortnight ago. But he is also firm in the conviction that Mr. Mahler with his intricate arrangements of notes will go down in history as a great symphonic name.

Since there should be method even in a novelty list, we shall consider alphabetically the remaining spawn of musical inspiration caught in Mr. Stock's net.

Albeniz's "Catalonia," a well orchestrated bit of piano music, serves us as a safe, conservative beginning. Listed under the second and third letters are two Chicagoans, Borowski and Carpenter, the first represented by his skillfully written poem, "Le Printemps Passionne," and the latter with his "Birthday of the Infanta" suite arranged from the charming ballet.

Dukas, a conservative Frenchman, comes next with his "C major Symphony." At least, this scholarly gentleman named this composition for himself, but in reality it was a pinch of Beethoven, a goodly handful of Franck, all well mixed with Wagner.

Goosens, violinist, pianist, composer, and best of British conductors, who directed the orchestra of the Beggar's Opera in London, furnished us with the exquisite tenuities of his "By the Tarn." Next year Mr. Stock promises us his "Eternal Rhythm," a pretentious orchestral work wrought in the form of a fantasie.

The older, erudite, and cautious school of American composition was represented with compositions by Hill and Mason. Daniel Gregory Mason, whose many books—historical and analytical—are an accurate if conservative warehouse of musical facts and traditional artistic opinions, wrote exceedingly well, if a bit abstractly, in his "Prelude and Fugue" for piano and orchestra.

MISS ETHEL INTROPIDI in "EAST IS WEST" GARRICK MOFFETT PHOTO

The Moor concerto for quartet and orchestra—wherein most of the good compositions of the world went wrong—found its salvation in the splendid playing of the Flonzaleys, for whom it was written and who introduced it to us.

Even Mozart contributed to Mr. Stock's orchestral treasure of something new. The A major piano concerto under the expert guidance of Harold Bauer made its initial bow on the Chicago orchestra programs this year.

John Powell, who should have been saved from the exotic program notes of an ardent friend, played his own pleasantly attractive "Negro Rhapsody" for piano and orchestra, contributing another soothing memory to our season's collection.

Those two energetic young artists, Maier and Pattison, who raised two-piano playing from the dead this year, introduced a concerto by Ropartz and a scherzo by Saint-Saëns to us. To repeat on soloists is not the policy of the orchestra management, but this department was given to understand that the virtuosity of these two is so unique a novelty that we shall be given an opportunity to hear them again next year.

Ravel, brilliant, superficial, cruelly satiric, was represented by his exquisitely frivolous waltzes.

Mr. Stock dismissed the piano concerto and two passacaglias of Cyril Scott with the comment that they were interesting but added nothing new to the world's collection of bizarre music; said nothing that had not already been said much more suavely by those exponents of the musically iconoclastic, Percy Grainger and Leo Sowerby.

From the fluent and prolific pen of the last named we had the overture "Come Autumn Time" this year, and are promised his symphony for next season.

Then we heard Strawinsky at his best in his glittering "Fire Bird" suite, Williams' excellent but long winded song-cycle "On Wenlock Edge," and Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstasy," which latter proved how little musically there is in a name.

A number of this season's meritorious novelties have doubtless escaped this careless cataloging, but this inconsequential résumé contains enough to justify the conclusion that the gentleman was right in his conjecture that last summer in Europe Mr. Stock waited quietly until his colleagues did their symphonic bargain hunting, and then procured what they had overlooked.

Thus having to its credit the largest and most brilliant collection of orchestral novelties, an eastern tour which established it as America's first orchestra, a season of a hundred and more concerts wherein not a rasping note of monetary or artistic failure crept, it pleases our orchestra to leave us this season willfully playing of death and the twilight of the gods.

THE MUSIC CALENDAR

Today at 3:30—Tito Schipa, tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera association, will be heard in concert at Orchestra hall.

Today at 3:30—Heniot Levy, pianist, will give his annual piano recital at Kimball hall under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. Mr. Levy will open his program with a sonata for violin and piano, a composition of his own, the violin part being played by Alexander Sebald. The program includes "Carnival," by Schumann; a Chopin group, "Rhapsodie" by L. V. Saar, and "Concert Etude" by Heniot Levy.

Tonight at 8—Sophie Braslau, contralto, and Mishel Piastro, violinist, in joint recital at the Auditorium. Miss Braslau will sing Gluck's "Faro Senza Euridice," Donizett's "O Mior Fernando," and songs by Rachmaninoff, Gretchaninoff, and Silberta. Mr. Piastro will play Glazounow's A minor concerto and numbers by Goldmark, Leiboeck-Piastro, Schubert-Wilhem and Wieniawski.

Tonight at 8—The Ferdinand Steindal Trio at Fullerton hall, Art institute. The program includes the Mendelssohn D minor trio, Godard's F major trio, and short pieces by Hochstein, Liszt, and Popper.

Tonight at 8:15—Maruska Konard, Bohemian violinist, will make her debut in recital at Kimball hall.

Monday at 8:15—Lucille Manker, pianist; Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Miss Horadesky, contralto, in a benefit concert at Orchestra hall for the Chicago Junior school. The program includes songs by Handel, Poncielli, Altheimer, La Forge, Gretchaninoff, and Manna-Zucca, and piano numbers by Chopin, Mozart, Sgambati, and MacDowell.

Tuesday at 8:15—Bessie Birdie Kaplan, pianist, will give her annual recital at Kimball hall under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. The program includes the "Variations and Fugue" and "Sonata in F sharp minor," by Brahms, a Chopin group, and "L'Orient et L'Occident," by M. Dvorsky.

Wednesday at 8:15—The Swedish Choral club, Edgar Nelson, conductor, will sing Handel's "Messiah" at Orchestra hall. The soloists will be Mabel Sharp Herdien, soprano; Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto; John B. Miller, tenor; Gustaf Holmquist, bass.

Wednesday at 8:15—Rudolph Ganz, pianist, who just recently was appointed conductor of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, will be heard in piano recital at Kimball hall under the direction of F. Wright Neumann. The program includes a Chopin group, the Sonata F sharp minor, by Schumann; "Berceuse," by Spalding; Adagietto and Scherzino by Ganz, and Scherzo by Leginska.

Thursday at 8:15—Ethel Wakefield Gabriel, mezzo soprano, and Allcebeth Foster, violinist, in the fifth of the young American artist's series in Recital hall, Fine Arts building. Miss Foster will play Bruch's G minor concerto, Rust's Grave and Fugue, and short pieces by Mazas-Foster, Elman, and Kallivoda. Mrs. Gabriel will sing songs by Horn, Oliver, Brockway, Saint-Saëns, and Charles Gabriel Jr. Charles Gabriel Jr. will be at the piano.

Thursday at 8:15—Robert Imandt, violinist, under the direction of the Musical Guild of Illinois at Kimball hall. The program includes Tartini's sonata, "Didona Abandonnata," Bach's "Chaconne," Cahusson's "Poeme," and pieces by Leclair, Pugnani-Kreisler, Debussy, Noyon, and Brahms-Joachim.

scended into hell by way of "Mabel's Room" and the Turkish bath in "Ladies' Night." May the blessed rise so joyfully to Heaven!

It is almost with sorrow, therefore, that I make the following confession, which seems almost like a gesture towards salvation: I have done a few things that had a kind of shame-faced seeming of true art. I mention "Gypsy Love," "The Littlest Rebel," "Too Many Husbands," "Happy-Go-Lucky," "The Song of Songs," "Mrs. Warren's Profession," and that rich and memorable portrait, "Potash and Perlmutter." I glide over "Kick In," a robust melodrama; "Madame Sherry," a representative piece; over "Friendly Enemies," "Innocent," and a number of other earnest if not wholly successful attempts in what you might be pleased to call the right direction. I shall do more when I get the money. I shall get the money by selling the public what it wants to buy. Percy, my dear boy, the public shall continue to corrupt me, and you shall continue to save me. How's that?

I am, with all good wishes,

Yours sincerely,

A. H. WOODS.

P. S.—By the way, in all confidence, "Gertie's Garter" is my last bedroom farce. No, I'm not converted. But I don't think there's another Chicago theater in them.

THE summer's recreation at Powers' will be provided by Mr. Belasco with a play by Miss Jean Archibald, entitled "Call the Doctor." Some celebrated names are to be found in the list of actors, which contains Miss Charlotte Walker, Miss Ruth Shepley, Miss Fania Marinoff, Miss Jane Houston, Mrs. Tom Wise, Philip Merivale, William Morris, and John Amory. Monday, May 2, is the date set for the beginning.

It is probable Mrs. Samuel Insull's charity performance of "The School for Scandal" will be abandoned as the opening attraction of the new Apollo theater, difficulty having been experienced in obtaining a cast of sufficient prominence to support the star, who was formerly Miss Gladys Wallis. In its stead, according to plans which may be changed, Mr. Woods has selected Channing Pollock's mystery play, "The Sign on the Door," as acted by Miss Marjorie Rambeau. Miss Rambeau hitherto has confined her exhibitions to centers other than Chicago, and she rarely permits herself to act outside of New York.

The breathless and indefatigable Mr. Woods plans to put Miss Florence Moore out in a piece named "Go Easy, Mabel," written by Charles George, who, they say, is gifted. Mr. Woods also ponders the production of Miss Lillian Walker, beloved of the moviegoers, in a farce by Avery Hopwood, a preëminent composer of the garter and undershirt drama.

So much has been written of late concerning Mr. Woods and his movements in, around, and under the theater, that there are those, no doubt, who yawn at the mention of his name. Still, it seems a duty to report that, discovering the pearl and gray decor of his Apollo theater to lack warmth, Mr. Woods caused it to be changed at great cost to dark and old gold. Mr. Woods repaints his theaters with the same nonchalance that he rechristens his shows. "Gertie's Garter," they say, had eight names before a satisfactory one was hit upon. It belongs, it seems, to the alias-drama.

"The Tavern" will bow out of Cohan's Grand May 1 to make room for another Cohan entertainment, "The Meanest Man in the World." This is an enlargement of a famous vaudeville sketch, and its leading rôle has been played in New York by both Mr. Cohan and Otto Kruger, Mr. Cohan being the present incumbent. Since Mr. Cohan's manifold New York engagements keep him busy at the center of things, he will be unable to appear in the engagement at the Grand and Frank M. Thomas will be his substitute, with Miss Marion Coakley as the leading actress. Leo Donnelley, a funny man, also will be present. Lower prices will be charged at the Grand during the summer.

The library of William Winter, the most famous of American dramatic critics, was sold at auction last week in New York at prices pitiably small. Fifteen hundred dollars was realized for the entire collection, which included books, letters, manuscripts, and dramatic memorabilia. The critic's own manuscripts went for almost nothing, and even a set of Rabelais, with engraved portraits, fetched but $5. No actors, the New York reporters say, were present.

F. Ziegfeld Jr., known to many as the producer of the "Follies," announces his intention to abolish from his shows hereafter, the chorus man. He has come to the conclusion that chorus men are only in the way and not ornamental, and that their place upon the stage may well be taken by young ladies disguised as young men. Mr. Ziegfeld will, however, retain the boys when necessary as voices in the background. This is the second big Ziegfeld reformation. The other was the angry ban he put upon paint as a help to the complexions of the merry intrigantes of his chorus. No rouge, the story goes, has flushed the clear countenance of any "Follies" girl since the proclamation of that awesome edict.

Tonight at Henry Miller's theater in New York Gov. Allen of Kansas will address some assembled actors on the topic of "Americanism and the Open Shop." Many of the players carry union cards and are fervid in the belief that they will get more money if they adhere to organized labor's most radical principles. But the governor's remarks will be of larger interest to those who regard the theater as an art as well as a job. Among the nonunion geniuses who will be present upon the platform are David Warfield, Mrs Fiske, Miss Margaret Anglin, Miss Zelda Sears, Louis Mann, Howard Kyle and Holbrook Blinn. Like most propagandists Gov. Allen will further convince by his salutary observations those who believe as he does; while those who do not, except for a few vagrant and hysterical hecklers, will remain away.

In the class which graduates this year from the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York are the following young men and women from hereabouts: Miss Evelyn Lawrence, Miss Nina Krasnova, and Arthur Hughes of Chicago; Elmore Galley of Ashland, Ill.; Miss Virginia Sale of Urbana, Ill.; Miss Kay Strozzi of Winnetka, Ill.; Gerald D. Stopp of Plainfield, Ill.; Wellman Parsons of Ypsilanti, Mich.; Miss Helene Bennett of St. Paul, Minn.; Charles Brown of Iowa City, Iowa; Robert Randol of Ardmore, Oklahoma; Miss Olive Robertson of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, and Miss Mary Tarry of Columbus, Ohio. Forty-two members were graduated, with sage advice from Frank Bacon of "Lightnin'" and Miss Lucille Watson.

Frank McIntyre, who seems to have been forgotten of late, will come back to the lights in a week or two in "The Red Trail," by Paul Dickey. Among those who will surround him are Miss Vera Finley, Miss Miriam Doyle, Henry Duffy, Francis X. Conlin, and Bernard McOwen.

Raymond Duncan, having announced that "Paris is the dirtiest city in the world," causes that capital to be resentful toward him and his sister, Miss Isadora Duncan, the dancer. As Miss Duncan departs, "La Presse" indicates as follows its umbrage against her: "Let us hope that she is gone and that she will be followed at once by the rest of her family. At least there will be one more available apartment in Paris." Miss Duncan used to be an idol in France.

The Auditorium is to resume its place, May 15, as a headquarters of theatrical entertainment. On that date "Eileen," a romantic operetta by Victor Herbert and the late Henry Blossom, will begin an engagement of [illegible] weeks' duration.

Miss Billie Burke feels the urge of public life again and she will, ere long, return to general view in a musical comedy version of Miss Clare Kummer's "Good Gracious, Annabelle," made by Miss Kummer herself. The identity of the composer is not revealed, but there are hopes that the tunes, too, will be by that versatile lady, who wrote in earlier days the mellow ballad called "Dearie," with which Miss Sallie Fisher used to fill the ears of the minor music-lovers.

Messrs. Weber and Fields and Miss Nora Bayes conspire to produce themselves in a revue some time during fresh and flowery May. "King Solomon" is its name and it will have in its cast Miss Anna Wheaton and Miss Dorothy Dixon.

EAST ENTRANCE

Make This Your Summer Home

What more charming summer home could you ask than the Chicago Beach Hotel?

What location could be more ideal? Here you live in a beautiful secluded spot, the broad blue expanse of Lake Michigan's waters on one side of you and an exclusive park section on the other. Complete isolation from the noise and grime of the city—yet what convenience! Only 12 minutes from the heart of Chicago—from the business district, the shops and the theatres.

With its two splendid buildings (the new East Building just completed) the "Chicago Beach" stands as the most imposing edifice on Chicago's magnificent south shore boulevard system. Yet no hotel can be said to be more truly homelike in atmosphere. 1,000 rooms—some single, some in suites. All at moderate prices, and all tastefully furnished and completely appointed.

Pleasant cafes and dining rooms; unusually excellent cuisine; exceptional service.

Picturesque grounds—13 broad acres. Fine bathing beach; tennis courts. Boating—sailing and rowing—golfing, horseback riding and other sports in season also available for guests. Many indoor entertainments—dancing, concerts, moving pictures, card parties, etc. And with it all, association with people "one likes to know."

Call at the hotel or see our illustrated booklet to appreciate what the "Chicago Beach" offers as a summer home. Write or phone.

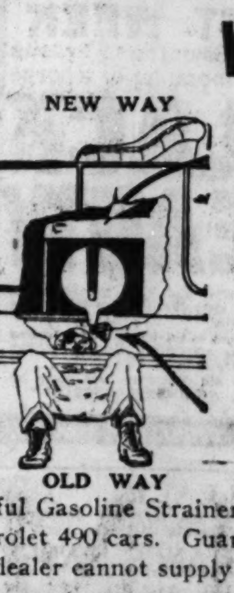
WARNING!



Dirt in your gas tank causes you to stop on railroad crossings, street car tracks, and in traffic, where you are in danger of being run into. In many cases cars have to be towed in from this cause.

Also prevents gas from flowing freely into your carburetor and necessitates holding your choke out, resulting in a waste of gasoline. Avoids unnecessary business delays and interrupted pleasure trips by having this wonderful Gasoline Strainer on your tank. For Ford and Chevrolet 490 cars. Guaranteed the life of your car. The WELL-DRESSED MAN

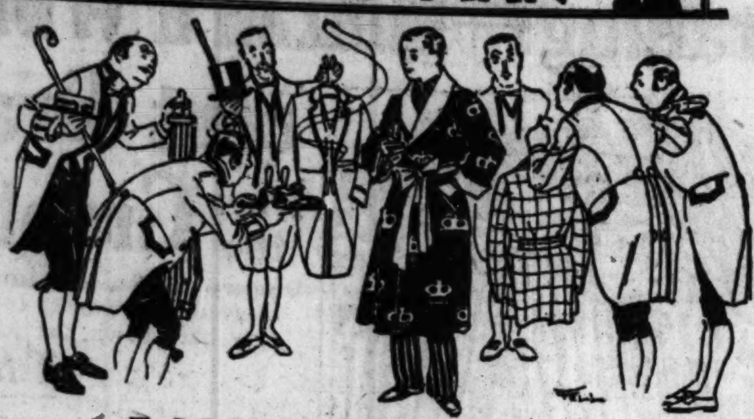
On Keeping Cool and Heeding Fashion, Too

By Alfred Stephen Bryan



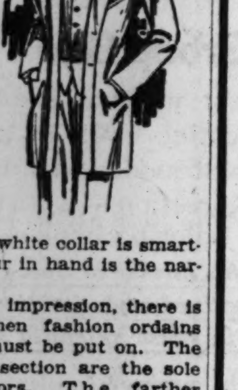
The Daily Dilemma of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales.

WASN'T it Herbert Spencer who wrote, "To be a good animal is the first requisite to success in life, and to be a nation of good animals is the first condition to national prosperity"? To be a good animal, to feel in fine fettle for the day's tasks, one must dress in season and in reason.

We Americans are too often incrusted with the stucco of habit. We do not differentiate enough between seasons which prescribe a sensible change of clothes. Merely to go waistcoatless or to substitute a straw for a felt hat is not sufficient. The weights and weaves of one's outer suits should be adapted to warmer, sunnier days, and the same thing is true of one's underwear.

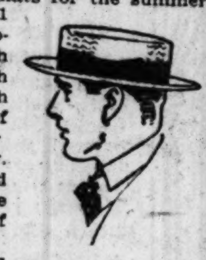
Keeping cool is as much a state of mind as a state of body, and the consciousness that one's clothes tally with the weather seems to make a man less susceptible to fanning, fuming, and the petty irritations of oppressive days.

True fashion is rooted in common, or rather uncommon, sense. It is no martinet. To be fashionable does not mean to be uncomfortable. Such a notion is as antiquated as detachable cuffs.



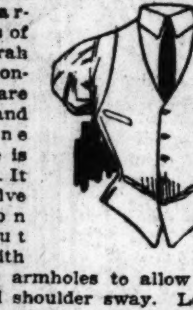
Portrayed is a fashionable square front, single breasted suit of wool crash, linen, silk and linen, batiste, silk, or, indeed, any cool, light, air-open material. This suit is tailored so softly that the lapels melt into the front, forming one unbroken line. The waistcoat, which may be left off, is of ditto fabric. The white collar is smartly low and the four in hand is the narrow knitted type.

Belying popular impression, there is no fixed date when fashion ordains that straw hats must be put on. The weather and the section are the sole determining factors. The farther south, the earlier straw hats appear. In the north from May 1 to May 15 is the customary time.



Taking their cue from the soft hats and derbies of spring, the more modish shapes in straw hats for the summer season of 1921 show a leaning toward narrowish brims and smallish crowns, though this is a matter of preference rather than propriety. Broader brims and higher crowns are also available if you like them.

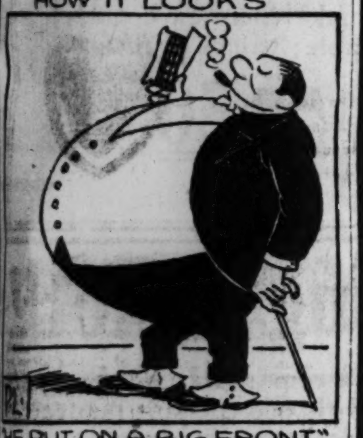
The two straw hats most worn by the generality of men are the split (fine woven) and the sennit (coarse woven) braids. The shape is variously known as the sailor, yacht, or boater, all meaning the same thing.



Many men prefer to omit the waistcoat with the advent of oppressive weather, but garments of tan surah silk or pongee silk are light and cool. One of these is pictured. It is the five button cut out type, with (athletic) armholes to allow free arm play and shoulder sway. Look ahead men plan their wardrobes in advance of the season.

[Copyright: 1921: By Alfred Stephen Bryan.]

S-L-A-N-G
HOW IT LOOKS



"HE PUT ON A BIG FRONT."

Regular Rimes

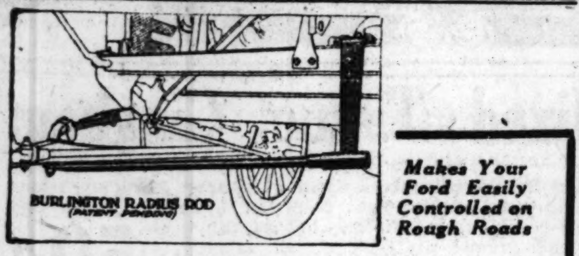
By Guy Lee.

I'm inclined to agree with the critic of bards:
They bore me to death as a rule.
I coincide fully it's not in the cards
To rhapsodize over their drool.
The classical poet goes up in the clouds,
Illusion and Fantasy sings;
But I tune my lyre to the wants of the crowds;
The every day, knowable things.

No doubt there are many who grasp the deep stuff
The Einsteins of poesy pull;
I find it a medley of terrible guff,
A hopeless collection of bull.
My notion of verse is a snappy remark
On the happenings life daily brings;
That's why when on lyrical jaunts I embark
I steer for the neighborly things.

My only idea of Pan is the verb,
And Cleo to me was a vamp;
Esthetic iambic I class as a blurb—
I admit I'm an obvious tramp;
But I'm sure of this much: in my sorrowful plight
The majority's with me, b'jings!
So I lead the old Pegasus out for a flight
And guide him to popular things.

A Safety Appliance for Ford Users



Makes Your Ford Easily Controlled on Rough Roads

Burlington Radius Rod

Is attached directly to the frame of your Ford car; eliminates the possibility of broken crank case, causing loss of oil, burning out of motor, breaking of engine arm, and in this way makes a great saving in motor expense.

TEN REASONS WHY

1. Cannot break crank case. Our rod connected to frame.
2. Cannot break engine arm for the same reason.
3. Practically impossible to bend. Most rigid radius rod for Fords.
4. Wheels absolutely cannot lock.
5. Makes steering easier, improves the control, holds the road better.
6. Insures safe and smooth driving over rough roads.
7. No holes to drill. All parts interchangeable. Saves labor and worry.
8. Can easily be installed on any Ford car or truck. Requires only three bolts on the side.
9. Made of solid steel. Sold on an absolute guarantee or your money back.
10. Insures safety, and normal road shocks are cushioned through the spring device.

Sold on an absolute guarantee. If in ten days not satisfactory money is refunded. Any one can put it on. Price, $10.00 f. o. b. Chicago. A splendid opportunity for dealers. Used by well known and largest business concerns, Ford fleet owners, in Chicago and elsewhere, with great success and satisfaction. For full information write

Repair Bills Held to Low Level

Without doubt, the thing that gives Chalmers owners their greatest satisfaction, is the smallness and infrequency of the repair bills.

Their cars run months beyond the usual time without expert shop attention. Replacements are required infrequently.

Due to Motor Design

This is largely due to the principle of the Chalmers Motor, in which the hot-spot pre-heats the fuel.

This assures complete combustion of fuel in the cylinders. Carbon formation is greatly reduced. No gasoline leaks down past the pistons to dilute the oil in the crankcase. The motor accelerates better, and runs more smoothly.

Car is Beautiful

This better motor performance naturally gives owner-satisfaction. But Chalmers owners are also proud of the appearance of their cars. The Chalmers is beautiful. It is also extremely comfortable.

We welcome the opportunity of proving to you what an excellent motor car investment the Chalmers is.

90% of all engine troubles easily prevented

Garage men and engineers report chief causes of common repair expense

"WHY do I have to spend so much on engine repairs?" You've asked yourself this question many a time. That's just the question we asked engineers and garage men all over the United States.

They report that seven preventable troubles—fouled spark plugs, burned-out bearings, scored cylinders, played-out piston rings, loose wrist pins, worn cam shaft, sticking or pitted valves—cause 90% of all repair expense. Almost always these troubles are caused by improper lubrication.

When subjected to the intense heat of the engine—200° to 1000° F.—ordinary oil forms black sediment. Sediment has no lubricating value. Avoid big repair expenses. Sediment is reduced 86% when you use Veedol, the lubricant that resists heat. (See the two bottles below).

With Veedol in your engine most serious engine troubles are prevented. Have your engine flushed out. Put in Veedol. Leading dealers have it in stock. Ask for a supply of Veedol today.

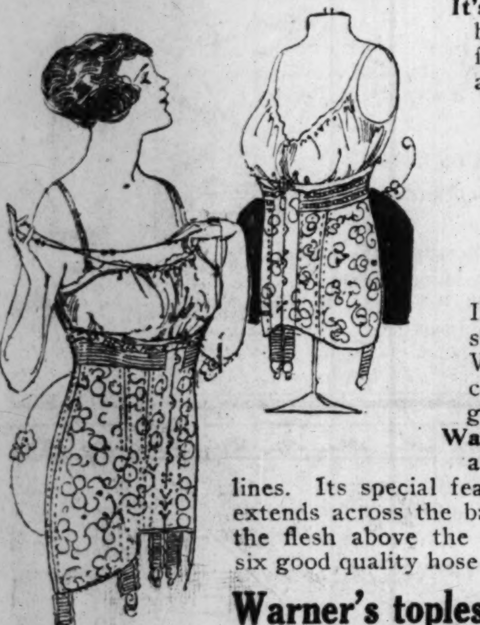
Corsets That Bring Out the New Lines

Third Floor—Dearborn Street



It's an axiom with the modern woman that new clothes can be shown to best advantage only when they have the proper foundation; the most fashionable suit or dress may lose its smartest "lines" when worn over an ill-fitting corset or one that doesn't depict the newest lines.

The new Warner Corsets for Spring possess every essential of grace, fashion and comfort—skillfully welded into models for every type of figure. If Milady's figure is full-formed and needs particular attention, we ask her to put herself in the care of one of our experienced corsetieres.

If Milady has a figure of slight proportions, we are ready to offer her a similar service for her comfort and smart appearance. The New Spring Warner Corsets are here in an assortment of styles and qualities so complete that there is a size and style for every woman as well as for the growing girl.

Warner Corset, as illustrated, for the tall average figure, which requires a corset that holds firmly; it gives the wanted youthful lines. Its special feature is the elastic across the topless front—that also extends across the back—but wider in back, taking care of and massaging the flesh above the waistline; skirt takes good care of a plump figure; six good quality hose supporters, sizes to 34, at........ 7.50

Experts Agree on Wider Pavements for Country Road

Concrete 40 Feet Wide Is Announced as "Ideal" Lincoln Way

CONCRETE paving, forty feet wide, ten inches thick and reinforced with heavy steel embedded in its foundation will be the highway of the immediate future, according to national transportation experts who completed plans last week for the "ideal section" of road to be constructed at some point yet to be chosen along the Lincoln highway.

The section, a pattern and practical suggestion for future heavy duty road construction, will be a relatively short stretch located at some central point along the transcontinental trail, probably in Ohio or Indiana. Plans for the experiment have been developed by the technical board appointed by the Lincoln highway association more than a year ago. Its members have studied every angle of highway transportation, examined all types of roads and have sifted thousands of suggestions from engineers in all parts of the world before announcing the general specifications of their "ideal."

In the end the board has predicated its plans on an average daily traffic of 15,000 passenger cars traveling 35 miles an hour, and 5,000 trucks, traveling 10 miles an hour. They believe that this figure represents the practical limit of traffic on one road.

The experts have officially sustained THE TRIBUNE's wide road recommendations by voting unanimously for a minimum right of way of 100 feet. Most American roads are not more than 60 feet wide between fences. The committee did not stop at 100 feet, but made it a positive minimum and declared that a right of way of 125 feet may ultimately be determined on to carry the traffic in safety.

The section itself will be built with concrete paving 40 feet wide, laid in one continuous slab without central sub-division. This width will permit four lanes of travel, one for slow vehicles moving in each direction and the other for passenger cars.

Beautification of the highway, including 25 foot strips of landscape gardening, adequate lighting at all points and the elimination of overhead wires by the use of underground conduits, is included in the specifications. The "Ideal Section" will cost about $100,000 per mile at the present construction prices, and will be completed somewhere along the Lincoln route early in 1922.

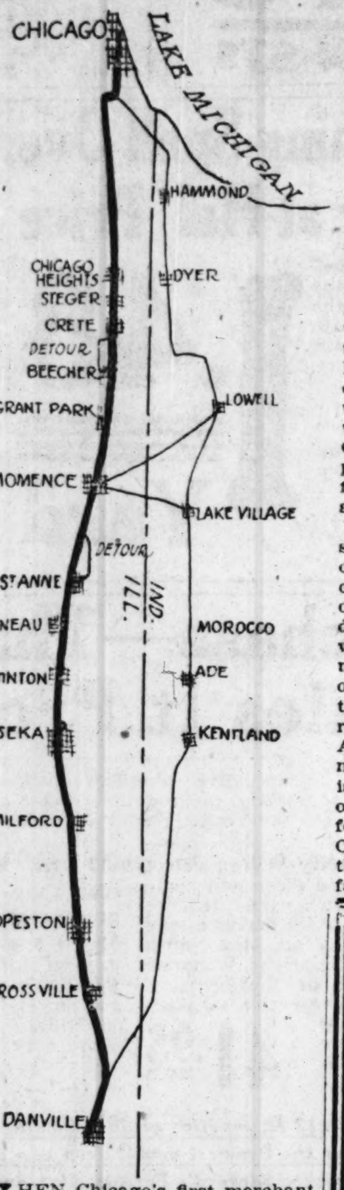
III. DIXIE HIGHWAY—To Danville and Indianapolis.



WHEN Chicago's first merchant ventured southward, losing sight of the friendly lake and equally friendly fort guarding its lower shore line, he found a well beaten path that led, straight as the crow flies, to the head waters of the Wabash river. He traveled the path many times, sometimes on foot, sometimes with pack animals, before Illinois pioneers came to know the road as "Hubbard's Trail."

Today more than 140 miles of the old Indian line of communication is paved with smooth concrete. Thousands of wheels whirl over it daily and few landmarks remain to tell the story of its younger and wilder days. People know it as the Dixie highway, third link in the state's 850-mile chain of paved trunk lines that now make up the practically completed federal aid division of the Illinois bond issue system. An ancient boulder with the name "Hubbard's Trail" and the date of 100 years ago, stands at the roadside near Momence to mark the passing of the pioneer.

This link in the paved system is easy to find. You may reach it by going south in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard. Turn right in Garfield to Western avenue and left in Western, following it straight south over the ragged holes that form Chicago's wheel tax division of the road, through the rough brick pavements of Blue Island, and onto smooth county concrete at Posen, Hazelcrest, and Homewood, where it becomes the Dixie highway. From Homewood south through Chicago Heights, simply follow the pavement to Danville, or use it as the first journey to Kankakee, Champaign, and Indianapolis.

But three gaps remain in the hard surfacing now, and they are rapidly closing under the hands of highway contractors. The first is just south of Crete. When construction starts, detour from the barricade 1.2 miles west to Goodenow, turn south 1.5 miles, and east to the concrete. South of Momence, turn left at the end of the concrete to the first road, turn right to the first road north of St. Anne, and right again to the pavement. Bridge work entering Watseka is due for completion April 26. North of Danville construction work is going forward on a bridge, but the Vermilion County Auto club has clearly marked the short detour. All detours will be fair except in very wet weather.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

CHICAGO'S colors will be carried in this year's 500 mile classic on the Indianapolis speedway by Percy Ford, sales manager of the Chicago Haynes division, Triangle Motors. He will pilot a Chicago-Frontenac, owned and entered by Stanley Kandul. The speedy mount, together with Ford's proverbial skill and daring as a driver, multiply the chances of his bringing home first money.

Another newcomer was welcomed to Auto Row last week. It is the Oshkosh Truck Sales company, a concern which recently took over the international selling rights of the Oshkosh Motor company. Offices and agency have been opened at 1509 Michigan avenue, with Edward J. Post as manager

Special demonstrations, road tests, and mechanical exhibitions will mark "Thoroughbred week," which opens tomorrow at the Lexington Motor Car company salesrooms, 2209 South Michigan avenue.

Waterway delivery of new cars from all lake ports has proved entirely successful this spring, according to Thomas J. Hay, Chandler and Cleveland dealer, who last week received another factory consignment on the S. S. Lakeland. Weekly shipments are made in this way to supply Chicago's spring demand.

Reports from a score of Chicago dealers indicate that automobile sales are increasing daily. Last week's business in Chicago held its own with that a year ago, and there is a promise of further increases with the approach of touring weather.

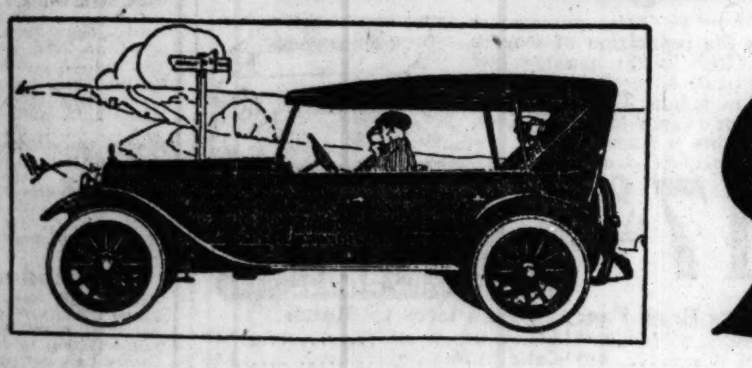
Grant Six



Power—

The Grant Six has it—power that takes you over the long grade or the steep hill at 35 or 40 miles per hour, yet power so flexible and smooth that you can change from 5 miles an hour to a 50-mile-an-hour dash in ten or twelve seconds.

Beauty—

The Grant Six is most decidedly stylish and fine looking, an aristocrat among medium-priced motor cars.

Comfort—

You'll find the improved Grant an exceptionally easy riding car, due to the 94 inches of springs (front and rear).

Ease of handling—

The Grant turns in a 39-foot circle. It is very easy on corner turns. The 23-inch gear shift lever and the emergency brake are placed so you don't have to stretch to reach them. When you start the car it glides away silently and smoothly—and you rarely shift gears.

Economy—

While the Grant has all the power and speed you'll need or care for, it is easy on your pocket-book. Owners are averaging 20 miles or better on a gallon of gas—700 miles on a gallon of oil—8,000 to 10,000 miles on tires.

Cord tires and snubbers are standard equipment on all cars

Closed cars have extra-size cords, sun and rain visor, adjustable steering wheel and heater equipment

Road Champions Fight Political Control of Funds

Maintainance Bill Gets Support with One Reservation

BY J. L. JENKINS.

SENTIMENT for the immediate taking over of all state roads for patrol and maintenance by the highway department is too powerful throughout Illinois to allow for further delay on the part of legislators.

The army of improved roads champions, grown to mighty proportions since Gov. Smalls' action in rejecting construction bids delayed the program for another year, has been assured that this long needed measure will be adopted and has turned its attention again to the ancient Illinois fight for adequately paved roads in the bond issue system. Additional resolutions, advocating the Meentz patrol and maintenance bill and demanding again that as many highways as possible be paved now, were passed by various state organizations last week and sent to Springfield. In brief, the bill proposes:

That the department of public works and buildings take over for maintenance, patrol and marking all federal aid and state bond issue roads as fast as necessary appropriations are made.

That the department be vested with power to enforce the motor vehicle act and to erect standard guide and warning signs along all roads.

That until all state aid roads are taken over by the department and patrols, similar to those in Wisconsin, are established, the roads are to be under the direct control of county boards and that these boards be required to maintain and repair them.

State leaders generally are behind this proposal with a single reservation. Some of them declare that there is a rider in the bill which provides for the elimination of civil service restrictions among highway department employés.

"This rider is vicious, to my mind," said a Chicago highway authority yesterday. "Inconspicuous as it is, it will form one of the most powerful political levers the state has ever known. If civil service regulations are thrown out of the highway department, what is to prevent the political bosses from appointing thousands of officials, clerks, bookkeepers, auditors, and the like from political patronage circles? If these adherents are appointed and Illinois highways are to be built on a 'cost plus profit' plan, what is to prevent them from favoring friendly contractors and milching the highway funds?"

Other Chicago authorities refuse to take the civil service clause seriously, declaring that it will not work disaster to the road building program and can make little difference in final results.

Cook county and Wisconsin highways were made the center of another legislative investigation last week. They were thoroughly inspected by a party of Missouri officials led by Senator Richard E. Ralph, chairman of the joint committee on roads. The party, which includes Senators P. A. Bennett and J. D. Hostetter and Representative J. S. Rollins, together with two Missouri newspaper men, are making a tour of states east of the Mississippi in order to form a legislative and construction program for the spending of a newly voted $60,000,000 highway bond issue.

George A. Quinlan, superintendent of Cook county highways, who has the distinction of more paved roads to his credit than any like official in the world, guided the party over the crack concrete roads radiating from Chicago, explained his construction system and maintenance policy and outlined the history of Illinois building.

In Madison yesterday, the party visited A. R. Hirst, famous chief of the Badger highways, whose fearless advocation of paved roads gave Illinois solons something to think about a week ago.

"Go home and build hard roads," he advised the Missouri delegation. "Pave just as many miles of state highway each year as you possibly can, and while you're paving, then see that part of your funds are spent to keep unpaved roads in repair and the wheels of traffic moving. This is the advice we give in Wisconsin from long experience.

"We have been advertised as the state of good gravel roads, but we believe in gravel and like types of surfacing as a temporary relief measure only on our major trunk lines. Our gravel roads have cost us about $5,000 a mile. We have never had to haul a carload of gravel to any road and pay the freight on it because our material is found everywhere in the state, at the roadside. It may be that you cannot get gravel as easily as we do and that the cost in freight will make your temporary roads poor economy. Wisconsin will have built 800 miles of high class concrete roads at the end of this year. In 1914 we paved for $15,000 a mile. In 1920 it cost us $40,000. This year it is costing us $35,000 despite our accessible materials. And we won't pay less until they readjust these railroad fares that make a mile of paved road here cost $4,000 more this year for freight alone. Build high class paved roads, but keep the others open while you are paving."

IN PHILLY.

Philadelphia has ninety-eight horse drawn fire fighting machines, and 106 pieces of motor driven apparatus.

North Side Auto Show Planned to Reward Fighters

"SOMETHING new and different" is promised by a score of leading lights in the north side's growing automobile row, who have announced an exclusive north side auto show to be held in the Broadway armory, Broadway and Thorndale avenue, beginning April 26.

Twenty-five dealers, listed among the leaders of the association drawing its membership from the business districts north of Diversey boulevard, have completed arrangements for the exposition which, they declare, will embody all of the most interesting features of the national shows in addition to enjoying the homey atmosphere of an exclusively Chicago event. Special jobs have already arrived from the various factories for the big display booths. One gold car will be shown and the newest developments in the automotive field will be given prominence. The program includes music throughout the week and a number of entertainment features.

George Marquette, Marmon and Franklin dealer and president of the association, and J. C. Kramer of the Willard Battery organization are in charge of arrangements together with Directors Herbson, Buick dealer; Corkins, I. H. Burnstein, Willys-Overland; G. F. Kelly, Velie, and Schmitt, Reo dealers.

Popular in Japan.

The motorcycle seems to be far more popular in the orient than the automobile. This is partly due to the streets being too narrow for the practical use of the four-wheelers, and then, too, the economy of the motorcycle makes a big appeal. American manufactured motorcycles predominate and imports are increasing.

Ohio Fatalities.

Of all the casualties caused by motor vehicles during the year just passed in Toledo, O., it is disclosed in the report issued by Registrar Sam Smith that the automobile is responsible for the most deaths and the motorcycle with the smallest number. In fact, of the different classifications in the mortality figures, the motorcycle and the lowly horse drawn wagon have the most creditable records.

Even the Oldest Super-Sixes Today Speak Hudson's Worth

It is not just a matter of idle comment that Hudson's two, three and four years old, are constantly mistaken for cars of recent production.

On the contrary, there is a very clear connection between the way these older Super-Sixes hold their new appearance and smoothness of performance, year after year, and the fact that Hudson for more than five years has held the leadership among fine cars.

And of all its more than 100,000 owners none give such convincing endorsement as those who drive the oldest Super-Sixes and find them still essentially modern in looks and still giving fine, reliable performance.

The Roads Are Still Here

THE family that has owned a good automobile, and no longer owns one, is about as comfortable without a car as a family of birds with their wings clipped.

The distances to school and station and neighbor's home seem to have suddenly stretched out like a rubber band, and only a car will bring them back to normal. The roads are still here. Houses and places are where they have always been, and a car is still the best way to get to the places where you want to go.

When you look at the Standard Eight, remember that you can take its power for granted. It is known for that. You can consider its future as secure because the company that makes it has ample resources.

Think of the Standard Eight as something that brings the places and people you want to visit closer to you, and by bringing distant things nearer, enlarges your world.

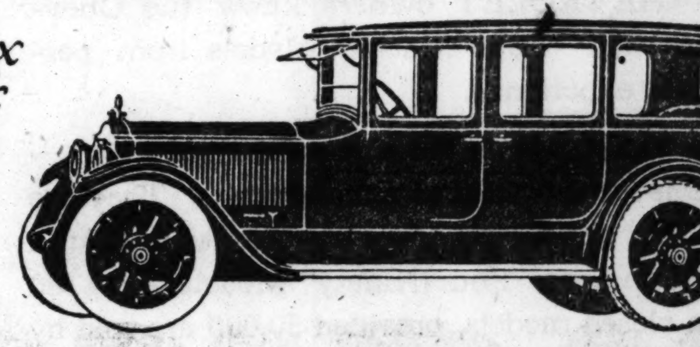
PACKARD

The Twin-Six Duplex Sedan



Where, the whole world over, can you find another motor car comparable to the Packard Twin-Six? Certainly neither Europe nor America offers its counterpart in smoothness and quietness of operation, in range and variety of performance, in plenitude and refinement of power. Certainly not elsewhere will you find such simple artistry and distinction in appearance, so perfectly joined to mechanical action of the very highest order. We shall be glad to have you examine the Packard Twin-Six, and to learn by demonstration, how remarkably this motor car performs.

AVIATION

Pathologists Now Ask Aviators to Restore Vocal Cords

Singer Regains Voice by Trip on Clouds

BY MORROW KRUM.

PHYSICIANS and surgeons have found a new use for airplanes—that of restoring weak vocal cords to their normal strength. Experiments made recently at Bolling field, near Washington, have suggested the possibility of a wide field of investigation as to the therapeutic value of flying. Even from the meager details now available it seems that the future of this field holds tremendous possibilities.

The complete restoration of his voice which had been lost for several months was the happy experience of H. A. Renz Jr. of Washington, who, acting upon the advice of Dr. Charles A. McEnerney of the public health service, made an ascent in an airplane at Bolling field, seeking thus to obtain the therapeutic agency of the rarified upper air. After a flight which touched a ceiling of 14,000 feet Mr. Renz descended to find his voice completely restored. He was piloted on the trip by Lieut. Cyrus Bettis.

The experience of Mr. Renz is not without precedent. Recent newspaper stories have appeared relating the experience of Miss Grace Ford, a Roanoke, Va., girl, whose vocal cords collapsed under strain when entertaining soldiers during the war. As Miss Ford is a singer, the loss of her voice was particularly disastrous, since it, apparently, registered the end of a career. Among the first to volunteer for service as an entertainer at the various training camps that sprang into existence during the first days of the war, Miss Ford found herself, early in the year 1918, voiceless, her singing tones ineffectual, muted. There followed rest, of course, repose, relaxation, medical treatment, but without avail in so far as restoration of her singing voice was concerned.

The Washington Post gives an interesting account, the gist of which follows, of Miss Ford's recovery while taking an airplane flight at Lima, Peru:

"Having failed to get relief after thirty months of loss of voice, Miss Ford decided in the fall of 1920 to try a sea voyage to Panama and South America merely for the tonic effect in restoring her nerves. While at Lima she met friends whom she had known in Europe, and through whom she received an invitation from President Leguia to sing at the palace. Before sending her regrets and explaining her disability, Miss Ford, by chance, motored out to Lima's flying field, where Capt. W. Moore, formerly of the United States army, invited her to take a flight over the city in his Curtiss plane.

"'We circled the city,' Miss Ford relates, 'and then pirouetted upward. It must have been about 8,000 feet from the ground when there came an unusual sensation in my throat and nose, just as if something had given way. I took my handkerchief and put it to my mouth, for I thought there had been a hemorrhage—the sensation was more like that of nosebleed than anything I can describe. Up and up we went until we had reached 10,000 feet, at which altitude my throat and nose felt surprisingly clear. I instantly thought of my voice—the thing always uppermost in my mind—and there, high in the sky, softly tried a few notes. They were clear and surprisingly audible above the whirr of the propeller.'"

Miss Ford's restoration was complete, according to the account. She not only sang at the palace but has been singing ever since.

Pulitzer Trophy Race to Attract Crack Airplanes

Four Classic Races Are to Be Held in Michigan

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., April 19.—All types of heavier-than-air aerial craft, from the light speedster machines to the freight carrying plane, will be seen in action here Sept. 8, 9, and 10, when the international air races are to be held.

Four races have been arranged, chief of which will be the free-for-all classic for the Pulitzer trophy.

The first event will be for the freight carrying planes capable of seventy-five miles or more an hour. The course will be triangular, starting at Selfridge field, and swinging around at the Aviation Country club, west of Pontiac, the Packard Flying field, Detroit, and back to Selfridge field. The contestants will cover the course four times, a total distance of 264 miles, and the three with the best elapsed time, start to finish, will divide $2,500. First prize will be $1,500; second $750; and third $250.

The second event, also to be held Sept. 8, will be for light commercial planes of the two seated type. It will be flown over the same course as the freight plane event, but the result will be determined on a point system, which will take into account speed in taking off and landing. Entrants must have a speed of 80 miles or better an hour. The prizes total $2,500.

Over the same course the third event for light passenger planes capable of at least 90 miles an hour will be raced Sept. 9. The point system of scoring will determine the division of $2,500 in prize money in this event.

For the Pulitzer trophy, final event on the program, Sept. 10, a smaller course has been mapped out. It will be four times around a triangular course totaling 160 miles. The points of the triangle will be at Selfridge field, Thoy, Mich., and Packard field, Detroit.

A minimum speed of 140 miles an hour is expected of the light one-man machines that will enter the aerial classic. The shortest elapsed time for the four laps will determine the winner.

The Pulitzer race, first held at Mitchel field, Long Island, last year, is expected to attract flyers from Europe as well as the United States.

PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America

The One True Test

There is just one sure and convincing way to determine the actual value of a motor car. It is by a thorough, exhaustive demonstration—under conditions that will reveal the true story of mechanical fitness.

In the show room, you can tell at a glance whether a car satisfies your artistic demands. The next step, then, is to get out on the road and discover what lies hidden under the hood. Power, Speed and Endurance are qualities of action that only a ride can establish.

We suggest just this course in judging any Paige 6-66 model. We go one step farther, however, and invite you to compare it with any other car—at any price—on the American market. Take the comparative demonstrations first. Then inspect the price tags.

The Paige-Daytona model, remember, is the stock car speed champion of the world. That great title is incontestable evidence of the strength and stamina that only a champion can possess. And the motor that you will find under a 6-66 hood belongs to Paige and Paige alone. Don't forget that.

FARM AND GARDEN

Grapes for Home Use Now Raised on a Large Scale

By Frank Ridgway.

GRAPES are rapidly becoming America's garnered fruit. Thousands of farmers and gardeners have fallen into the viticulturists' ranks since unfermented grape juice has been elected the most popular fruit beverage in the United States. New and extensive grape arbors will continue to spring up in every grape growing district within the next few years. Grapes will grow in practically every section of the country, and they require little space, which means that grape vines may be soon commonly seen rambling over back porches, arbors, and roofs of both the city and country homes from coast to coast.

From Canada to tropical America and from the Pacific to the Atlantic, connoisseurs of grape wines have been carefully testing the different varieties of grapes to determine the best kinds to grow for the making of unfermented beverages. In making these tests new flavors have been created, and the testers find that there are endless possibilities in combining the juices of the different varieties of grapes that may be grown in a district. New colors as well as flavors are coming from the mixing of two or more kinds of juices. These new discoveries will, no doubt lead to a more careful selection of varieties.

Many Small Scale Growers.

The grape is one of the oldest of domesticated fruits, but within recent years scientists have found out some valuable information about this fruit that has greatly increased its importance and extent of culture in this country. It has been only within comparatively recent years that European varieties of grapes have been successfully grown in America, a factor which had much to do with retarding the development of the grape growing industry. By controlling the mildew, a tiny plant lous, and black-rot by grafting the European varieties on the American stocks, growers are fairly successful.

Then, too, the improved methods of making grape juice are so simple and inexpensive that more grapes are being grown on a small scale for home use.

This phase of the industry will no doubt increase rapidly. Old arbors will be remodeled and new vineyards will be started as soon as growers learn that surplus grapes can always be worked up into unfermented beverage instead of allowing them to go to waste as has been the case heretofore.

Some of the best grapes can be used as raisins or for culinary uses, and the rest for the production of wine. Experts point out the fact that the grape is one of the few fruits in which the sugar, acid, and flavoring is so well balanced that the juice does not have to be modified.

In attempting to encourage the growing of more grapes, horticulturists point out a further advantage of this fruit, particularly emphasizing the importance of the use of the vines as a shade. They believe that the grape vine could be used in the back yards of city homes where space is limited and shrubbery will not do well. The grape vine with its broad leaves will often serve as a valuable substitute for shrubs, furnishing an abundance of green foliage, an excellent shade if properly trained, and then a crop of fruit with its varied uses.

"LITTLE SPECKS OF GARNERED FRUIT."—This is a bunch of Niagara grapes, a variety which is becoming popular in the making of beverages. "Cold" Niagara mixed with "hot" Wyoming grape juice gives a light cherry red mixture with an excellent flavor.

Varieties of Grapes.

The old Concord variety of grape is so well known that it has almost monopolized the industry, but Catawba and Ives are being grown extensively in the northeastern states and are used in making unfermented wines. The Vinifera grape is used in the west. The Muscadine is the favorite variety in the south. In setting out new vineyards, it is best to secure the varieties that have been carefully tried out in the district or locality where they are to be set, regardless of the purpose for which the grapes are to be grown.

There is room for a dozen or more grape vines in practically every yard. The planting may be done in the spring or fall. Where the fruit is to be used in making beverages it is advisable to plant two or three varieties in order that the juices may be improved by blending.

It has been found that almost any two well flavored juices will produce a pleasing drink when mixed. At the Ohio station where tests were made, good combinations were made by using Lindley and Manito, Concord and Delaware, Empire State, and Elvira and Manito, and Niagara and Wyoming. This shows the possibilities of combinations of two or more varieties and also serves as a guide in selecting varieties for planting.

In growing grapes for table use it is advisable to select a few vines of early, medium, and late ripening varieties, and the fruit will ripen as it is needed, over a period of several months.

Sunlight and Air Essential.

Grapes may be propogated by means of seedlings, cuttings, layers and grafts. They do well on practically every kind of soil but they do not do well on low wet ground. In every case the plants should be set where they can be trained. They are commonly trained to cover trellises, but they may be planted along the side of the house and allowed to run over the walls and doorway. To avoid the expense of building trellises or arbors, the plants may be set along a fence and trained to the wire or boards.

The thriftiest vines and the richest colored and plumpest fruit are always found where the plants are grown in a sunny location. Sunlight and air are both essential, and for that reason grapes should never be set on the shady side of a building or in the shade of a tree. The method of planting depends largely upon the system of training to be employed.

A general rule to follow is to set the plants about an inch and a half or two inches deeper than they were in the nursery. If the plants are set along the fence there should be left about six feet of space between to allow room for the branches of the vines to run.

Plants should be one or two years old, either age may be used successfully. Cut the plants back, leaving two or three buds at the time of planting. If the roots are long they should be trimmed back slightly. The vines will usually bear fruit the third year, and with a reasonable amount of attention they will last a life time.

Keep Vines Well Pruned.

After the plants have been well established the principle work will be to keep them pruned properly year after year. Pruning is absolutely necessary if good fruit is to be produced. By trimming the vines back regularly they are easily kept in good condition. The necessity for pruning grapes makes them ideal for serving the double purpose of furnishing a shade and producing fruit. The vines should be cut away every fall, and this gives the sun a chance to strike the house during the winter months.

Pruning is simple if you once understand the principle. The essential thing to remember is that the fruit that is produced this year, for instance, will be borne on the wood or shoot that is grown this spring and summer. Neglected grape vines that are not trimmed for two or three years are unable to mature all of the fruit that is set. The vines soon become a tangled mass, and the fruit produced is small and ill shaped. If the branches are cut back every year within an inch or two of the main stem, the fruit will have a chance to develop. A fifth of the vine can be cut back every fall or winter without injuring the plant.

Grape vines do not require stimulating fertilizers; in fact they will often make a fair growth where the land is too poor to grow a profitable crop of wheat or corn. The vines should be cultivated at least three or four times during the summer.

Every Home Wants a Bed of Memorial Poppies

IN adopting the poppy as the memorial flower, the American Legion did not specify any particular variety of annual poppy. The Flanders Field poppy grows wild in France and Flanders and while its scarlet blossoms are beautiful, it is surpassed in form and color by many cultivated varieties. None of the poppies is very good for cutting, but the Shirley poppies will last a few hours, if cut before opening. Sow at once where the flowers are to remain, thin out to one foot apart, and if all-summer bloom is wanted, make repeated sowings. For this at least an ounce of seed is needed.

The Thorobred
More Style—More Worth

The debut of the Thorobred first sharply drew the line among open cars. The sport motif never found more inspired expression. For all of the keen distinction of the Thorobred, every contributing element is in extreme good taste.

Most exceptional is the low fuel consumption, because for economical power the Lexi-gasifier and Moore Multiple Exhaust System have yet to be successfully imitated.

For these and many more vital features of greater worth the Lexington plan of ten allied factories is responsible. Only by personal inspection can you gain a full sense of how much more the Thorobred offers you. Come in today.

On high-class cars only

NONE but exceptionally high-class cars have four-speed gearsets. Four gears give a faster and better-sustained high speed. Also they divide the work the engine must do, from start to finish, into easier loads.

That's one reason why the newest Winton Six gets away so quickly and easily, handles beautifully in traffic, runs away from the crowd up big grades, and sustains, hour after hour, an enduring top speed that makes miles short and pleasant. We prove it. Visit our salesroom at 2512 So. Michigan Avenue, or call Victory 7700.

You—and This New Machine Can Earn $500 a Month

Five hundred is a low estimate. Many make more. Gibbard, Mich. had amazing record of $60,000-00 last year! Others had wonderful successes. My new TIRE SURGERY machine did the trick!

HAYWOOD TIRE SURGERY

—is the new and better tire repair method. I can teach you in two weeks. Will furnish you with one of these new compact TIRE SURGERY outfits. Will tell you how much to charge. How to build up trade quickly, etc. Experience not necessary. Chas. Evans, Ind. carpenter, knew nothing about tires less than a year ago. He bought this machine. Learned TIRE SURGERY. Now is averaging $100 a week! Opportunity for quick success never better. 7,000,000 car owners in country. Most of them must economize. Can't buy new tires. Must make old ones do. Can tinker with auto but can't mend tires. This repair work will swamp present Tire Surgery Stations.

I CAN PLACE 500 MEN IN GOOD LOCATIONS RIGHT NOW!

It's a proposition YOU can handle. Blair of Ohio does $100 daily with small Tire Surgery station. Oldham of Illinois reports earnings of $2,200 in four months, and so on. These men had no experience. Had very little capital. Possessed no advantages you haven't got. My help, my methods, my machine put them on the road to financial independence; I'll do the same for you.

Learn TIRE SURGERY. Attend my big Indianapolis or my branch schools. Let me start you quickly in a big paying business. Write for my splendid proposition. Get FREE book of facts. Just write postal. Simply say: "Send me your Tire Surgery proposition." Within 72 hours you'll have the whole matter before you. It's a case of walking right into $3,000.00 to $6,000.00 a year. Mail request NOW! 1921 Will Reward FIGHTERS

"Is It Necessary to Suffer from Rheumatism All My Life?"

Hourly—in the sunlight of the day, in the shadowy, silent darkness of the night time—that question grips the heart and haunts the soul of the sufferer from Rheumatism or Neuritis. And the answer has been sought in everlasting search for help, for relief, for just a little surcease from the unending pain.

In the world of Science progress is made slowly. Back in 1914 one of the leading newspapers in New York City and another in Chicago, printed an article about Radium Bearing Ores in Colorado keeping the mine workers healthy and free from Rheumatism. This announcement further stated that the Government Bureau of Mines had undertaken to supervise the working of some fifty-seven Radium Mines in the Paradox Valley, Colorado, which contain the most important deposits of Radium bearing ore in the world—that this ore is a yellowish mineral known as "Carnotite," with Uranium and Vanadium.

It was found that the men engaged in working these deposits, if they happened to suffer from Rheumatism, were not only relieved, but that their general health seemed to be benefited in a remarkable way.

A Matter of No Small Importance

In commenting further on this discovery, these two big metropolitan newspapers stated that while Radium itself is the most costly thing in the world, being worth over two million five hundred dollars an ounce, the ore from which it is taken is by no means so precious that anybody of moderate means cannot afford it.

It takes a ton of Carnotite to produce a bit of Radium no bigger than the head of a pin; and the cost of Radium is due mainly to the difficulty of the processes involved in extracting it. There is no question of the value of Radium in the relief of Rheumatism and Neuritis, as it has been very successfully used in the treatment of these distressing troubles.

Chicago Physician Investigates The Denver Method

How The Denver Method was discovered after years of labor by a very simple, plain man with a practical knowledge of chemistry—the results he actually obtained in many cases of Rheumatism and Neuritis—makes an interesting story, which we will send you upon request.

We believed, just as you have, that some day Science or Nature would produce something which would alleviate the sufferings from Rheumatism and Neuritis. So when The Denver Method was brought to our attention, we wanted to be sure, ABSOLUTELY SURE.

After making a preliminary investigation, as laymen, we determined that the investigation should be carried on by a thoroughly experienced practicing physician, not theretofore or then engaged in the patent medicine business, but a trained, practical scientist. We engaged a Chicago Physician who had no interest whatsoever in The Denver Method. This physician's report, based on interviews with physicians, also men, women and children who had suffered from Rheumatism and Neuritis and who had used The Denver Method, CONVINCED US.

The Physician's Report is Open to You

Our physician-investigator reported that insofar as he knew, The Denver Method was the only method ever discovered which would impart radio activity into the body. Carnotite ore is known to contain Radium—the Violet Ray is one of the rays thrown off by Radium. Do not misunderstand us, however—The Denver Method has nothing to do with the commonly known form of "Violet Rays."

But our physician-investigator was not wholly satisfied with what he found in Denver—upon his return he immediately conducted some tests himself right here in Chicago, which were also highly successful.

One of the first tests made by our Chicago physician was the case of the wife of a nationally known athlete. We do not give names and addresses here, because naturally these must be kept confidential. This woman had been confined to her bed for two weeks with Neuritis. She could not walk. She received her first Denver Method on March 25th and the next day was up and around the house as usual. She says she is well.

Another test was on a Dentist with offices in the Chicago Loop. He suffered from Neuritis and Sciatica, accompanied by sufficient pain at times to keep him from his practice and preclude continuous sleep. From the first Denver Method he has been without pain and he states he has fully recovered. He voluntarily offers to write a letter or give any other evidence requested in regard to the success of The Denver Method in his case.

One of the best surgeons in the State of Illinois outside of Chicago had spinal trouble. He was forced to give up his practice because of severe pain, which was thought to be Angina Pectoris. He also had spinal rheumatism. He was induced by a nurse to try The Denver Method. Remarkable improvement was obtained—the pain has disappeared.

A prominent business man of Denver had been bedridden for eight weeks with rheumatism, affecting practically all of his joints. He was not improving under the usual treatment and upon following The Denver Method he was back to business in four weeks.

A girl of eleven years had an attack of rheumatism lasting ten weeks. The muscles of the thighs were very markedly contracted and extremely painful. One year later she had a similar attack, which only lasted three days under The Denver Method.

These cases conducted by our physician in Chicago are very recent—the cases he investigated in Denver cover a period of over three years. In our files we have upwards of one thousand letters of appreciation as to the effect of The Denver Method upon the writers thereof—these letters are open to your inspection.

You Will Be Helped to Investigate

We used the services of a physician in the test cases conducted in Chicago for the sole reason that we wanted an absolutely reliable report in each instance.

The Denver Method can be used in your own home

It involves no inconvenience—requires no equipment. There is no person suffering from Rheumatism or Neuritis who should not have complete information about The Denver Method—and you will be helped in every possible way in making your investigation. The seeker of the truth will find every avenue of information open in such a way that you can learn all the facts without embarrassment, obligation or cost.

All we ask is that you determine in your own mind that you will know the facts—and then that you do not delay.

The Coupon Below is for Your Convenience

Our office is in the charge of a thoroughly experienced physician. You will receive courteous, considerate attention. Questions that it is possible for us to answer will not be avoided. Those living in Chicago and within a radius of fifty miles call at our office if it is convenient to do so. Office hours, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; evenings, 8 to 10; also open Sundays from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Those living in Chicago and vicinity who find it inconvenient to call are invited to send the coupon; or Phone Harrison 7060. Those living at a distance from Chicago will be given full information regarding The Denver Method upon receipt of the coupon.

Start your investigation now.

NOTICE

In this announcement we have endeavored to impress you with the fact that The Denver Method is not similar to anything with which you may be familiar. It has no duplicate. It can be obtained only through us. It is complete in itself—no powders or pills—nothing to take internally—no appliances. It is painless. No dieting unless you wish. It is remarkably simple and can be used in your own home. Its principle has been known since the discovery of Radium. Complete detailed information will be sent confidentially to any interested reader—sending us the coupon will imply no obligation on your part.

THE POTTERS

The Homeric Fight for a Home.

ILLUSTRATIONS -BY- J. H STRIEBEL

by J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

The Potters have defied their landlord to do his worst. They won't pay the increase and they won't take down the "unfair" sign and they won't move. Meanwhile other tenants are coming through the apartment to look it over—and the First of May, or Renthog Day, as the Potters have come to call it—approacheth with unseemly haste. What to do! What to do!

OVERTURE (by request).

I do not like the gentle Spring—
To me it doesn't mean a thing
But pests who snoop around our flat
And look at this and finger that
And question us on things that be Peculiar to our family tree.

All day they gawp at me and mine,
And criticize and carp and whine,
And open every private door,
And pass remarks about the floor,
Or rummage through the pantry shelves
And wonder how we feed ourselves.

"Do you get heat and lots of air?"
And "Will they put new paper there?"
And "What's inside that other room?"
And "Ain't the kitchen like a tomb?"
And "How many children have you got?
They're such a care"—and all that rot.

They count our silver, lift our rugs,
And speak of roaches, flies, and—other forms of animal life,
And when they leave they send their friends—
The dam procession never ends.
That's why I sadly rise and sing—
I do not like the gentle Spring.

Scene I.

The prospective tenants are being shown through the flat. They are as welcome as Henry Ford in Palestine.

1ST TENANT: Aren't the bedrooms small,
And what a dismal hall!
And isn't it awful dark and drear?
I'm sure I would never like it here.

2D TENANT: You certainly have no light to spare—
What did you say you had in there?
(Opens door and peers in.)
I'll look and see, if you don't care.

MA: (sarcastically):
O, not at all; just help yourself.

1ST TENANT: What have you got upon that shelf?
And is this another closet here?
It certainly needs some paint, my dear.

2D TENANT (to Ma):
I'll look at the kitchen now, I think . . .
(Aside to 1st Tenant):
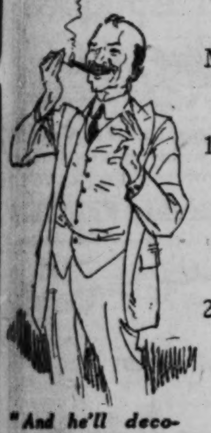
I wish you'd look at that woman's sink . . .

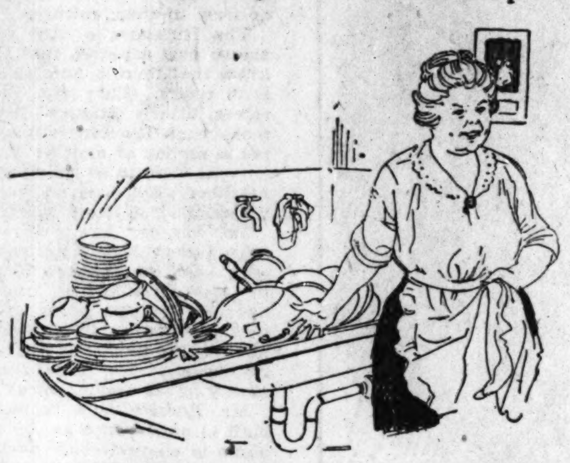


"And he'll decorate, too."

MA: Doesn't this kitchen look a fright?
But I always stack things up at night.

2D TENANT: Now, don't you worry . . . that's all right . . .
This place could stand a lot more light . . .
Maids are so hard to get these days,
And you have to stand for their slipshod ways.

1ST TENANT: Well, I guess we've seen most everything.
Flats are so hard to find this spring,
And when you find one half way nice
They ask you such an AWFUL price.



"I always stack things up at night."

2D TENANT (to Ma):
Where are you going to move this year?

MA: I'm not going to move . . . we'll stay right here.

1ST AND 2D TENANTS:
You'll stay right here?

MA: We'll stay right here!

1ST AND 2D TENANTS:
But your flat's to let . . . you can't, my dear.

MA: Who said we can't? . . . We can, don't fear!
We can't refuse to show you through;
You can lease it, too—that's up to you . . .
But there's one thing that you needn't doubt—
You can't move in until we move out;
And we're not going to move—we're going to stay
If we have to stick until Judgment Day.

1ST TENANT: Well, I wouldn't lease if you feel like that.

2D TENANT: Neither would I; you can keep the flat.
(Exit.)

Scene II.

Pa and Ma may be worried, but they are not the only ones. The landlord is getting a little gray around the gills. This is a fight to the finish. As the farmer said to the hen, lay on, MacDuff.

PA: Well, won't the landlord be surprised
To find the building's organized?
I've signed up every tenant in it
To stick and fight until we win it.
We'll all refuse to move the first
And let old Shylock do his worst.

MA: Something seems to tell me, dear,
(Knock.)
He'll soon be calling on us here.
There he is, I'll bet a pretty.

PA: Welcome to our merry city.
He might just as well come in right now
And finish up our little row.

LANDLORD: Well, well—the Potters; how de do?

MA: Doing nicely . . . how are you?

LANDLORD: Can't complain. . . . What's this I'm told
That all my tenants are enrolled
And pledged to stay here after May?
Is this your doings, Potter? . . . eh?

PA: That's my idear, all right, all right . . .
I told you I was going to fight,
And all the rest of us will stick . . .
We're going to make you pretty sick.

LANDLORD: Just what do you propose to do?
What makes you think you'll bluff this through?

PA: Well, we will tie you up, old dear,
In trials and suits for at least a year;
And meanwhile you won't get a cent
Of anything that looks like rent,
And meanwhile you'll have taxes, too,
And mortgage interest coming due,
And none of us will pay a sou. . . .
Is that perfectly clear to you?
I think it's clear
And a grand idear.

LANDLORD (visibly worried):
'Twould cost us all a lot to fight.
Couldn't we compromise this right?
Suppose I cut this new increase
Fifty per cent . . . Would you sign the lease?

MA: You'd have to decorate this spring.

LANDLORD: I'll do no such a gosh-darned thing.

MA: Well, suit yourself . . . if you don't we'll fight.

LANDLORD: If you'd sign at the old increase, I might.

PA: Well, we won't sign; we'd rather fight.

LANDLORD: Well, then, all right, but it's just for you.

PA: This goes for the other tenants, too.

LANDLORD: Goes for the others? Aren't you bright!

MA: Well, suit yourself . . . if it don't we fight.
And you can kiss your rents and your flats good night.

LANDLORD (surrendering):
All right, you Gyp-the-Bloods . . . all right!
Sign your lease at one-half the increase
And I'll decorate, too, and get some peace.
(Exits.)

MA (triumphantly):
Well, what do you think of our little scheme?

PA (dazed): It can't be the truth . . . It must be a dream.
Our own little flat . . . at one-half the increase.
And he'll decorate, too . . . come over here, Lease.

(And that's that.)

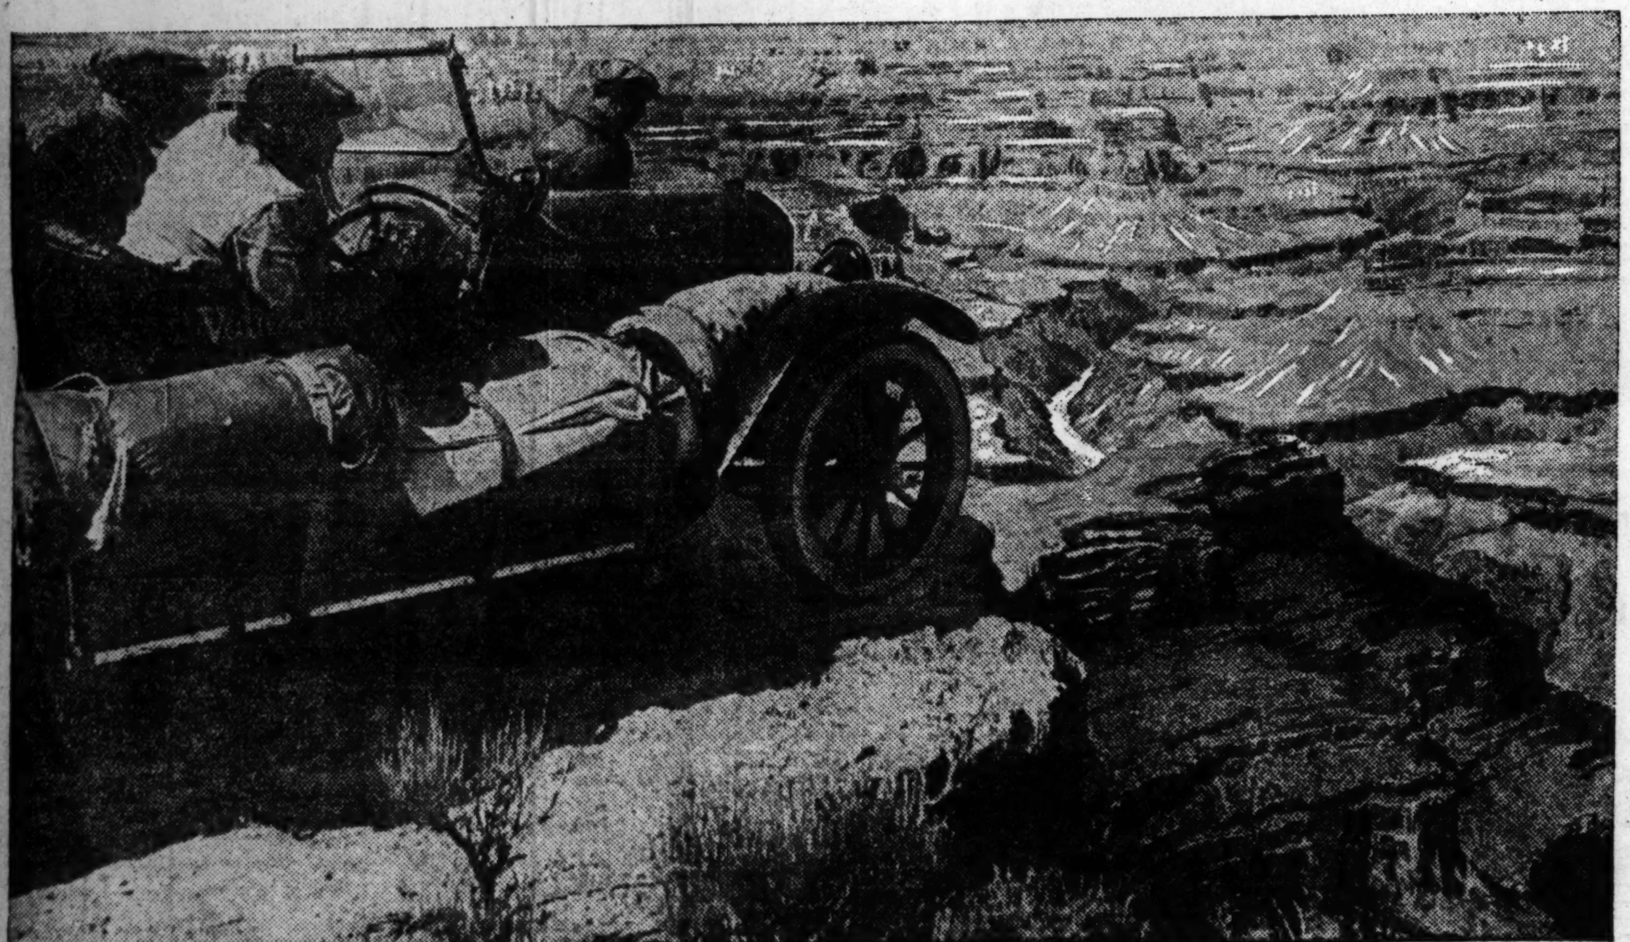
"I'm sure I would never like it here."

Velie Conquers Grand Canyon

Descends 5000 Ft. Into Precipitous Abyss



The following wire was received a few days ago from Harry A. Lord, Los Angeles Velie Dealer:

> "Velie Motors Corporation, Moline Ill.: Velie conquers the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. A Velie 34 stock touring car made the hazardous descent from the Canyon's top rim to the very edge of the Colorado River, sliding and tumbling downward 5,000 feet into the very bowels of the earth and then climbing out again under its own power without any outside assistance. The steep sides of the canyon and the narrow walls at times would hardly allow the car to pass. The way led over rocks of every size and shape, through deep sands such as motor cars seldom encounter; through almost every known species of cactus; where there never was a road and probably never will be. The Velie took all this tremendous punishment without repairs of any nature; nor was there any water added to the radiator during the entire trip. I believe this to be the hardest test ever handed a motor car and the Velie finished with a perfect score. Photographs mailed today."

In and Out Under Its Own Power

Again the intrepid Velie has won laurels by daring and stamina which mark it as the wonder of all sixes.

Not since the Velie battered its way into the Yosemite Valley a year ago had its performance been rivaled. Now the Velie has outdone itself.

To the Gold Cup of the Yosemite—to its splendid record on Pikes Peak—to its Gold Trophy from Great Britain—it now adds its latest triumph—a successful descent into the Grand Canyon to the very edge of the Colorado River—and a climb out again.

Lives Depend Upon Control

There were long stretches where moment by moment the life of the party hung on the dependability of the steering gear and brakes—where the slightest slip would have precipitated car and occupants into ugly, jagged chasms thousands of feet below. The twists and strains were terrific—the Velie at times running at angles just short of upsetting.

This is the same Velie Six that has won the admiration of all motordom for its splendid values and equipment, even to cord tires—at the price of many Fours.

It was picked at random from hundreds of stock cars. It simply upheld the Velie tradition of 11 years. Blood will tell. Although Model 34 sells at a lower price than its larger brothers, not one essential of Velie quality has been sacrificed. The difference in price is on size alone.

It has Velie style with Velie genuine leather deep-plaited upholstery, the Velie lasting mirror finish—and the Velie economy in fuel, tires and upkeep.

Velie a Leader on Values

It is one of the Velie line which includes the Model 48—the still larger Six that is another sensation of the 1921 market for extraordinary quality at low price.

Eight new 1921 models on two chassis: five and seven passenger touring cars, sedans coupes, roadsters and speedsters. See them.

This perilous feat was performed by a Velie Model 34 stock car. You can see the same model at R. C. Cook Company's salesroom, or at any of the following Velie Dealers:

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Comes a Pause in the Social World These April Days

By Mme. X.

CHICAGO society is just entering what is really the pleasantest season of the social year—that is, the little interval between the winter hegiras which scatter the world that amuses itself to warmer climes and the summer outings which still more widely disperse this same contingent.

In the principal foreign capitals, like London and Paris, this is the gayest, most fashionable moment of the year. Here it is not so formal nor so strenuous as the winter season, but has a charm all its own. People meet and compare notes on their various experiences in Florida, California, Bermuda, and wherever the search for pleasant weather and good company has taken them since the latter part of January. They volubly or silently (according to their habit and sex) inspect the new frocks and millinery which spring brings forth as surely as it does buds and blossoms. They exchange news and gossip, and discuss plans for the approaching four or five months.

They are more apt to meet at some one of the clubs, like the Saddle and Cycle, Casino, South Shore Country club, or at some smart restaurant, than at private houses. However and wherever they foregather, there is a distinctly lighter, more genial note in the dinners, luncheons, and other festivities which bring society folk together.

Dinner at the Casino.

Among the important affairs of the week was the big club dinner at the Casino last Thursday evening, when nearly two hundred members were present. After dinner Miss Ruth Draper gave a program of monologues in her chic, inimitable manner.

Among the dinner hosts that night were Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey, Mrs. E. S. Worthington, Mr. and Mrs. John Glass, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hinde, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. John H. McIlvaine, and Eames MacVeagh. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strobel, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bennett, Mr. and Mrs Hale Holden, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Winterbotham, Miss Mary Waller, Miss Eleanor Holden, Miss Gwendolyn Field, Arthur Meeker, John B. Ryerson, and Frank Cramer.

Drama is to the fore among other social activities. "The world" turned out last Tuesday evening to see the members of the Junior league in a performance they presented at Orchestra hall. It was a lively medley of songs and dances, with not too much coherence or deep intent.

It is interesting to note the progress of time in these annual entertainments. When in the early days of this organization the fair young maids and matrons used to appear on the stage in frocks more or less short, or even in modified trousers, there were some of the older leaders of the tribe who commented on it with some measure of disapproval. Today, so well have the Junior leaguers educated the community, the liberal display of sightly and well made forms is accepted without a word. As evil is entirely in the eye of the beholder, this is a distinct advance in enlightenment.

Old Order Passes.

Much is done today with no harm to the social order which a few years ago would have provoked storms of criticism. The only question to be considered is to what extent can the minds and standards of the passing generation be safely educated by the coming one. The latter must deal gently with us, and remember that there is a limit to the elasticity of parents, aunts, and uncles.

Probably the youth of the day would not appreciate the feelings of the father whose daughter, a debutante, I believe, asked him for a pocket flask to assist her in her social career, saying:

"I'm not so pretty nor so attractive as many of the other girls, but if I had some of your good Scotch I'd be a real belle. Do, daddy, let me be one!"

As the tale was told the benighted parent denied the request with some volubility. He had not been sufficiently educated. Just as a passing word and proving that we, too, belong to that part of the procession which is being left behind, we sympathized with some of our kind who deprecated the making a jest of that ubiquitous pocket flash in the Tuesday amateur performance and the introduction of well simulated inebriety as a jocose feature.

It is worthy of note that in older, more established social worlds than our American high life supplies, intoxication is looked upon with much disfavor. A man who should appear in London society or in that of France or other European capitals in a condition the worse for liquor would probably not be asked again. Habitual drunkenness among men and women of good standing is infrequent over there. If any are so addicted, and, of course, drinking is a usual practice and often leads to excess, such addicts are seldom seen in society.

Lure of "Forbidden Fruit."

It is one of the unfortunate concomitants of the present dry laws that the mere taking of a drink (using the word in its technical sense) has become an exciting adventure, while the obtaining of liquor seems to have aroused the ancient delight in lawlessness which sometimes made smugglers and bandits out of the sons of great nobles of the middle ages. Simply to forbid a thing gives it an almost irresistible charm to many people of not too strong intellects.

It being apparently the psychic moment for drama, the next thing on the social calendar is, or rather was, the performance given at Mandel hall Friday evening (to be repeated Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the Arts club) of three plays presented by well known amateurs.

Sutro's "Open Door" was played by Mrs. John A. Carpenter and Aimé Millet. Mrs. Carpenter took Mrs. Marshall Field's place in the piece, the latter returning from a trip to Florida too late to do justice to the rôle.

The second play on the program was Bernard Shaw's humorous satire, "O'Flaherty, V. C." This was presented by Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Donnelly, Mr. Millet, and Prof. Boynton.

MISS THEDESA HIGGINSON

Two of the most attractive girls in the Junior league benefit last Tuesday night were Miss Theresa Higginson and Miss Vivian O'Gara. Miss Higginson, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson Jr. of 1322 Astor street, made her debut last winter, and, although she spent much of the season in Boston and Lenox, where her parents have a country place, she has taken a prominent part in debutante festivities of the winter. With her younger sister, Lee, who is in school in Virginia, she will sail late in June for a two months' stay in Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Higginson will spend part of the summer in Chicago, but will go to Lenox for August and September.

The third on the list was Oscar Wilde's "A Florentine Tragedy," in which were cast Mrs. Mark Walton, Charles Breasted, and Mr. Cormack.

It is a measure of today's sophistication that the standard of amateur acting has advanced so that one can really enjoy the performance of clever plays by clever amateurs. It is always a test of such presentations if a stranger, one who has no personal acquaintance with the actors, can nevertheless find pleasure in their interpretations of different parts. Unfortunately this screed goes to press before the writer has an opportunity to see these plays and players, but, having seen the latter on other occasions, it is safe to predict excellent quality in their work.

Amateurs of Other Days.

Amateur dramatics have for many generations been a favorite diversion with Chicago society folk. Far back in the '70's and '80's of the last century there was a group of players here who did good work under the leadership of one of the cleverest amateur actresses who ever excited the comments of society—the late Mrs. Herbert Ayer.

She and her contemporaries made valiant efforts to overcome the disabilities of an age in literature before the days when Oscar Wilde, George Bernard Shaw, and J. M. Barrie had written real plays, plays which were in themselves of interest to the listener. They played such classics as "Court Cards," "Box and Cox," and occasionally "The School for Scandal." Among the actors of that remote time were the late Mrs. Alfred Mason, the late Mrs. Dudley Wilkinson, Mrs. Edward D. Hosmer, the late Joel D. Harvey, and the late William McMillan.

Following this group of players by some years same another lot of excellent amateurs, among whom were Mrs. Joseph Coleman and Mrs. Peter Dudley.

When this set of amateurs lost interest in interpreting variou rôles there was a long hiatus when no one seemed to care what became of drama. This blank interlude was finally terminated some six or eight years ago when Mrs. Arthur Aldis, whose interest was aroused by a group of Irish playwrights headed by Lady Gregory, Yeats, and Synge, organized a troupe of men and women and inspired them to present some of the most effective of the modern short plays in the most approved and modern manner. It was a liberal education to both performers and audience.

MISS VIVIAN O'GARA PHOTO-DRAKE STUDIO

The latter "gagged" a little at some of the more typical of the Hibernian performances when gloom seemed to clog the wheels of the universe almost too much. On one occasion these words in the easily recognized voice of one of the well known men of the golfing set pierced the gloom of a dark and silent moment in a piece, "Gosh! What's it all about? I'll be darned if I know."

Summers in the Aldis Garden.

Some really capital actors were developed in those Irish days. Mrs. Aldis herself showed great talent in such plays as "Riders to the Sea" and "The Shadow of the Glen," by Synge. Others who distinguished themselves by excellent acting were Mrs. Henry M. Hubbard, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Mrs. William Hubbard, Miss Isabel McBirney (now Mrs. Henry Stimson Jr.), Charles Atkinson, Dorr Bradley, and Chauncey McCormick. Among the plays they presented were "A Pot of Broth" and "Cathleen-Ni-Houlihan," both by William Butler Yeats.

Mrs. Aldis not only organized this interesting troupe of amateurs but provided them with a charming theater on the grounds of her place at Lake Forest. She turned a little cottage into a poetic playhouse, with a roomy stage, a rising tier of seats, and an atmosphere of sincerity and simplicity which was an art in itself, so genuine and complete was it.

Melpomene reigned supreme those summer in the Aldis garden. At night when all the rest of the community was fast asleep the goddess wandered about the place, sat by the pool, played with the goldfish in the fountain, sniffed the fragrant flowers, and knocked the dew off the roses hanging from the arbor.

May Flit to Lake Forest.

Should she revisit the scenes where once she was such a farmiliar spirit this coming summer she would find certain changes. The Play house will be ovvupied by Mrs. Aldis as a studio forthe writing of plays. Her husband and son will be in the nearby abode known as Red Bird cottage. The big house, with its quaint outside stairway leading from the second story to

Mrs. Philip Wrigley of 2466 Lake View avenue will pour at a tea to be given today at 4 o'clock by the Chicago Historical society. Mrs. Leander McCormick also will pour, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. L. the roof will be occupied first by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson and later in the season by Mr. and Mrs. Dorr Bradley and their two daughters. Mr. Bradley sails for England in May to join his family and to escort them home in August.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon and John T. Jr. are moving out to their summer home, which is adjacent to the confines of the Aldis place, by May 1.

Many other Lake Foresters are making an early house opening there, encouraged by the unusual season. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, Mrs. C. M. Ely, and Mr. and Mrs. Byron Harvey are among those who are thus early leaving the delicious spring smoke and delectable industrial perfumes incidental to life in the city.

Let us hope that that imp who often seems to lurk in Chicago springs does not manifest himself and nip them an dtheir flower gardens with a deadly frost.

Poole Paintings Please.

Have you been to the Art institute lately? It has some particularly interesting exhibits there now. Because he is a Chicagoan born and bred, attention is first called to Abram Poole's paintings, which hang in a rather remote room on the first floor. They are most iteresting and effective. He has evidently fallen under the spell of effete and classic times in European evolution. Although his subjects are people of today, they look as if they had lived in the eras before telephone, motors, Marconi, the Wright brothers, etc. There is a certain air of aloof unapproachability about his charming ladies (they are ladiess, not women) which one does not often see nowadays. To be sure, he probably has given it to them with his brush, but there it is.

The striking portrait of his wife, who was Miss Mercedes De Acosta, a profile view, wherein her black hair and white skin are emphasized, is especially charged with this elusive quality of caste, class, distinction—I don't know how to express it.

He himself characterizes his work as "decorative portraits," which is fairly descriptive. It is an interesting exhibit and shows a decorative eye in the artist which should open for him a career in these days when the most promising future for a painter is in mural work.

f an utterly different nature is the collection of paintings upstairs in the institute, the work of the Russian artist, Nicholas Roerich. As different as are the two men. Mr. Poole is a typical young American who has spent many years studying abroad among the galleries of Europe. We Americans are so eager to be a part of the older civilization o fthose hnstoric lands that we quickly merge ourselves entirely in their culture.

The Russians, o nthe other hand, are so new a people that they hardly know that there is another civilization than theirs. They are utterly themselves, utterly Russian. And, furthermore, each Russian is himself. He is not a replica of another Russian, nor does he wish to be considered like his neighbor. He does not care whether his neighbor is like himself.

Do you see how different that is from the average American? Life to each separate Russian is an absorbing problem which he must solve for himself. This is perhaps the reason that the leaves the lesser problems like making money and developing the resources of his country to others—chiefly of the Semitic race.

Mr. Roerich is a typical Russian, both in appearance an din mind. His name is characteristic as it bespeaks his rescent from Rurik, "the doughty Variag" (whatever that may be). He is of medium height. His head is broad above the ears, with rather high cheek bones and a pointed chin, made more pointed by a pointed beard. His skin has a curious palor. His expression is that of a dreamer.

He is, he says, a theosophist—a follower of the doctrine's of Yogi. He paints, not what has before been painted, not after the manner of any school, not in a Russian or theossophistical manner, but what through his strange Russian eyes he sees in clouds and rocks and sea and sky.

* *

Visions We'd Forget.

We may not understand what he is trying to tell us, but in some curious way he awakens the primative, the elemental in us. Sometimes in our dreams we have has visions like these. We were glad to wake up from them. We were glad to forget them.

He sees eyes, noses, mouths, everywhere, in clouds, in houses, in rocks, in architecture. He has a tremendous power of conveying to canvas a sense of dimension, the feeling of space, of calm. Look at the painting entitled "Saint Boris and Saint Gleb," or the one called "The Treasure."

He will be a great acquisition as a designer of scenes for our grand opera. Those Russians have imaginations which will eventually set the world on fire. When this vanishing civilization of ours, which, do what we may has seen its zenith, has passed, the new one wil be largely evolved from Russian minds. But this is wandering for from the bounds of a social column.

Today the Historical society is combining the intellectual with the social. Horace Bridges will speak on "The Roots of Patriotism" in the society's rooms at 4 o'clock this afternoon. There will also be songs by Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hine, followed by a tea which will be served by the social committee, of which Mrs. Hamilton Mc Cormick is chairman. The reception committee is Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, Mrs. Frank Tabor, Mrs. Frank Stout, and Mrs. George A. Carpenter. Mrs. Philip Wrigley and Mrs. Leander McCormick will pour tea.

Next Saturday a group of society people and artists, much the same group as that which got up the very successful Batik ball last winter, are giving a May day dance in the Fine Arts studio on the tenth floor of the building of that anme. The whole of that floor will be given up to the affair, which promises to be a gay one. Among those interested in it are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Linn, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Clarkson, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Russell J. Matthias, Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. McClelland Barclay, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dennett Grover, Eames MacVeagh, and Herman Fochs.

Big Sisters Find Girls Respond to the Helping Hand

By Kate Webber.

THE annual meeting and election of officers of the Big Sisters will be held on Thursday at 2 o'clock at the convent of the Good Shepherd, 1126 Grace street. Members and their friends are invited to attend the meeting, following which tea will be served. Reports of committees will be given and accounts of the work accomplished by the organization will be presented in interesting detail.

MRS. GEORGE V. McINTYRE
ARCHIBALD STUDIO

Chartered four years ago, the Big Sisters organization has grown until the membership in Chicago is approximately 1,200 women. There are several philanthropic departments which work for the betterment of the lives of young girls, among them being one for the help of those brought into court on charges of delinquency.

This branch of service has just issued in the year book a number of suggestions to members, which aid them and will aid others who are interested in bringing both spiritual and material help to young girls and women in need of such assistance. The gist of some of these bits of wise advice is given herewith as an example of the means used to bring about the results attained by this organization:

One of the prime factors in the success of dealing with these young girls is the ability to make the case in hand feel that the worker in her behalf is her friend. This requires infinite tact and finesse, and the Big Sisters have proved themselves true to name by gaining the friendship of their charges. They school themselves not to patronize; they call on the girl in her home; they make friends of the parents and gain their confidence. An effort is made to remedy the lack of home life, which is generally at the base of most girls' troubles. Conditions are bettered and the girl's ambition is aroused for schooling or for a position, as the case warrants.

Knowing the restlessness of girls, the desire for gayety and the company of youth, attractive places are found for them to spend their evenings. The Big Sisters take them to concerts, to plays; give them magazines and encourage the habit of right reading; they invite them to their own homes, write to them; in short, keep in constant touch with them. Individual attention and sisterly interest often attain results which surprise even the workers themselves.

The Big Sisters also maintain a scholarship fund, the application of which has proved that the education of girls is one of the most constructive activities. From the beginning of the work of the special committee in September, 1919, until the present time, the progress of the girls and their almost unbelievable response to their new environment have been most gratifying. The pupils have shown themselves apt in their studies, some of them having been graduated with honors. They are entered as regular pupils, and no one is given information regarding them except the superior.

Names of donors of complete or partial scholarships are not made public; nor are the names of the beneficiaries given out.

In addition to the activities mentioned, the organization provides fuel, food, clothing, and other necessities for needy applicants, arranges for the hospital treatment of sick children, and manages an employment service. The philanthropic work of the Big Sisters is not restricted by race nor creed.

Mrs. George V. McIntyre is president; Mrs. Edward Hines, vice president at large; Mrs. Archibald Eldridge, Mrs. William S. Hefferan and Mrs. Charles H. Moody, vice presidents; Mrs. Edward Kirchberg, recording secretary; Miss Katherine Wade, corresponding secretary; Miss Teresa Gaynor financial secretary; and Mrs. Michael V. Kannally, treasurer.

THE ADLER COMPANY

Specializing Exclusively in Distinctive Frocks and Blouses

107 STATE STREET, SOUTH—FIRST AND THIRD FLOORS—REPUBLIC BLDG.

(PRIVATE ELEVATOR TO THIRD FLOOR)

Now for the Third Week of Low Prices to Gain Friends—High Values to Hold Them!

So sincere are the principles of this new store to widen its acquaintance among the women of Chicago, that success is already a certainty. Visitors predict this success quite frankly—they cannot help but see it in the distinctive apparel—and the low prices make them doubly certain. A most cordial invitation is extended to women who are particularly discriminative—who seek the ultra—and who appreciate it when it is priced according to their ideas of economy. And there is a type of sales service here that is in perfect keeping with the store itself—infinitely satisfying.

Just a Word About Adler Frocks!

This store specializes in frocks, thus offering a limitless variety. The spacious third floor is devoted entirely to their showing. You will surely recognize the superb distinction of Adler Frocks the moment you see them. They have the spirit of individuality that every woman so greatly admires. They portray character. They possess lines and effects that are the very keynote of fashion. But as has been stated before, telling means so little and seeing means so much.

Sybil

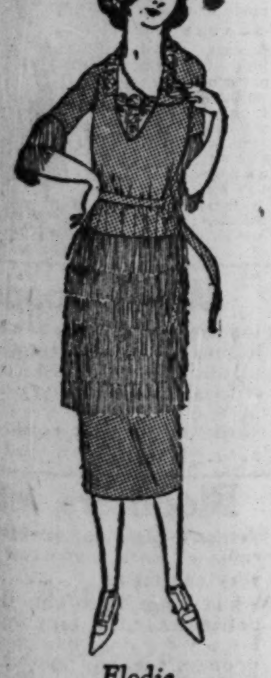
$65.00

Revue de Modes

Paris has introduced quaint little creations of serge, crepe de chine, taffeta and silk jersey in shades of blue, brown, beige, gray—and the omnipresent black. Some frocks flaunt period influence in the handling of tunics and sleeves, while others show a classic background. A few clear-lined draperies—others quite elaborate in spite of the prevailing trend of simplicity. The chemise gown is decidedly in favor. Its frequent appearance in a host of accepted creations emphasizes its place in the world of fashion.



Elodie

A dainty Canton Crepe frock of superior quality with fine silk fringe (a favored note in very newest modes). Filet lace collar and vestee—silk fringed sleeves. Navy, gray, white, henna, black.

$39.75

ADLER BLOUSES

Again does the variety of Adler Blouses now offered seem worthy of mention. The satisfactory choice of a blouse is so greatly dependent on variety that women should be ever alert for the widest assortment from which to choose. That assortment awaits you here.

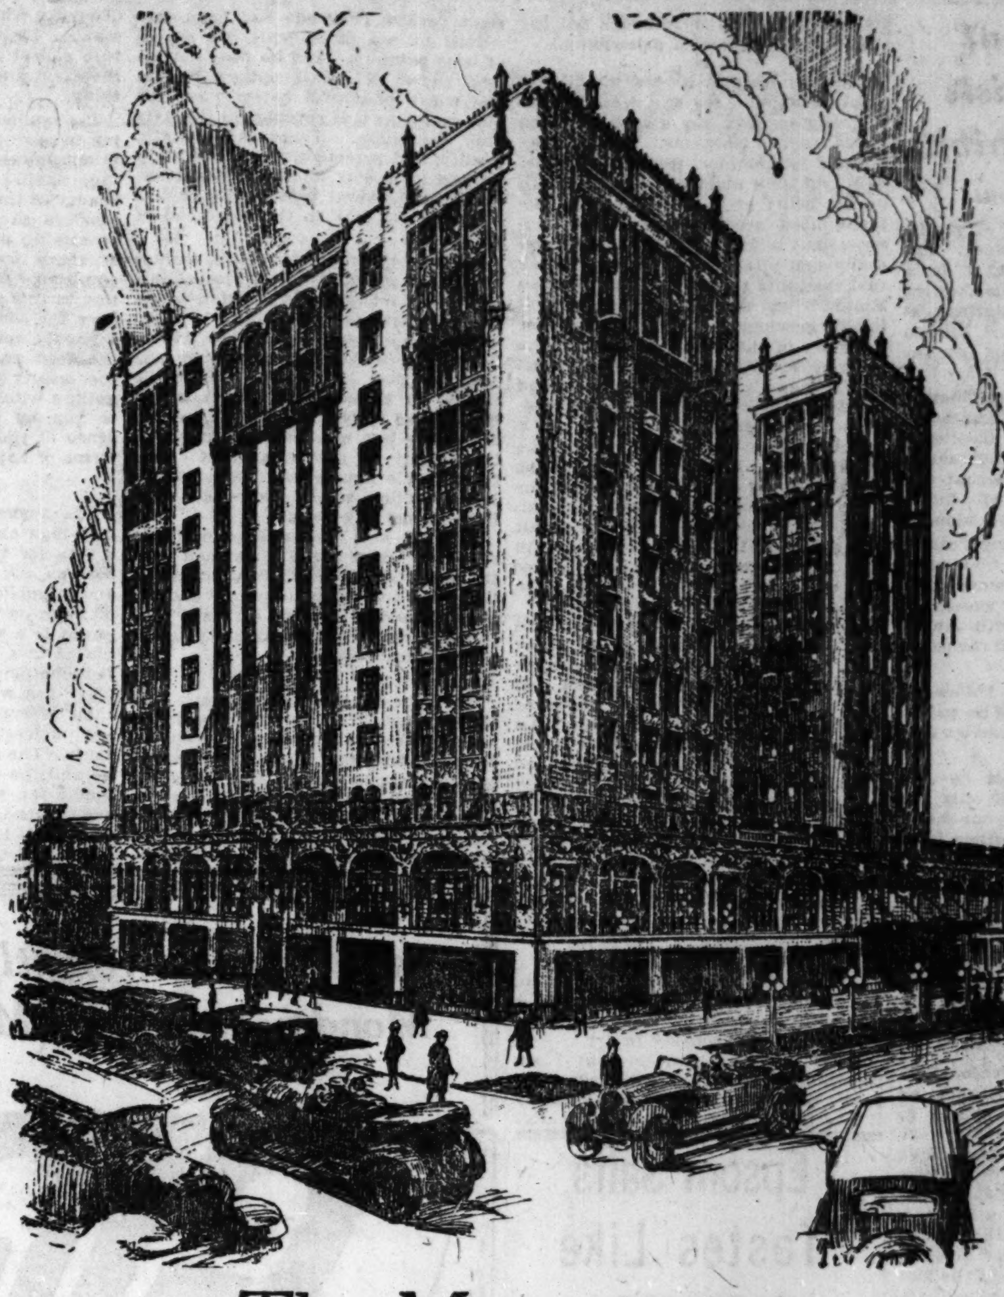
NEW YORK CHICAGO



The Management of the Sheridan Plaza Hotel

Is Desirous of Meeting the Responsible People of Chicago Who Are Interested in Securing a Home.

In the selection of a hotel home three essentials must be considered: The building—the management—the clientele.

The Sheridan Plaza is easily the most perfectly appointed residential hotel in Chicago. Every detail has been planned to give luxurious comfort consistent with the quiet dignity of its atmosphere.

The management—personally directed by Mr. George F. Adams—former manager of the Greenbriar and Chamberlin—stands for the absolute in service.

The choosing of the clientele is most carefully done—references being required in all instances—so that the high standard of the hotel will always be faithfully reflected by its guests.

Monday, April Twenty-fifth, marks the opening of the Sheridan Plaza Restaurant, surely destined to become famous under the direction of the following world-known artists:

M. D. BARTA, Steward—Grand Hotel, Vienna; Baur au Lac, Zurich; Palace Hotel, San Francisco.
JOSEPH DORE, Chef de Cuisine—Hotel Sacher, Vienna; Circe d'Artiste, Paris; Criterion Restaurant, London.
JOANESCU TASSELLO, Chef Patissier—Maison Dore, Paris; Maison Chiboris, Paris; McAlpin Hotel, New York
PETER HAUSEN, Maitre d'Hotel—Hotel Balmoral, Paris; Royal Hotel, London; Hotel Astor, New York.

Yet the prices will be moderate in the extreme. In addition to a la carte service—a business luncheon for seventy-five cents the plate—a table d'hote dinner at a dollar and a half or two dollars are especially recommended.

And selected with equal care are the artists who compose the orchestra—which will be one of the many attractions of this very complete hotel.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

Two Prominent Foreign Artists Here for Exhibits

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE are two artists of prominence in Chicago this week. One is a Russian, the other is a Frenchman. The first is showing an extensive exhibit of paintings at the Art institute; the second has an equally important exhibition at the Arts club.

Nicholas Roerich and Paul Thevenaz, different they are as their nationalities suggest, but alike in that each possesses power and individuality. They are the type of artist that creates a school; other men will follow them; they follow their own vision.

Probably the most striking feature of the Russian paintings is their ability to carry a story. The most sober picture, the tiniest character sketch for a stage costume, is filled with the romance that undoubtedly filled the painter's mind as he worked.

Roerich feels his story before he paints it, so when he paints he paints as he feels and his picture carries conviction.

Unfortunately this cannot be said of all painters. There are only too many whom you feel in your heart painted this, that, or the other from a sense of propriety, a feeling for color, an idea that such and such would make a nice picture or a pretty picture—even to write of it is sufficiently disillusioning, but when we see it, as see it we often do, the result is disastrous to the ideas we may have been cherishing that art is a sacred flame fed by rare deeds.

Roerich feeds his art on deeds. Consider in this connection, if you will go for a minute to a further gallery in the east wing of the Art institute, the paintings by Maurice Fromkes. Here you find the attractive, the decorative, the feminine, the pretty, the nice paintings. Not that there is any desire to belittle Mr. Fromkes' art. It is charming. In the "Water Lilies" one can almost smell the fragrance of the blossoms. But, taken as a whole and placed beside the Russian pictures, a lack of virility is felt. The same lack that is read into the titles. For example, what would you think "Meadow Sweet" stood for? Flowers? Wrong. "Meadow Sweet" is a picture of an adorable little girl.

Similarly with "Pussy Willows," "An Ancient Belle" (which is really an attractive idea), "Granny's Mantel," and "A Breath of Autumn." They are perfectly good titles, but a little—just a little—of the odor of the verses by poets who are termed "lesser." They lack punch, precision, and purpose, also pep, to revert to the vernacular. Notwithstanding all of which they are charming, delicate, sweet, and appealing.

But Art with a big A is not spelled in those letters. It is spelled rather in the letters of vital, virile strength and putting over the painter's message. If he has a message. The great artist always has a message—just as the great writer has. It is again the lesser lights who can sing the sun, moon, and stars and have in their heads not the slightest conception of astronomy.

Nicholas Roerich knows what he is painting about. He has a story, several stories, and has expressed them in his various canvases. Though they are told for the most part under a cold light, yet their story often has warmth in the heart of it. Some of the pictures need study, others need foot notes; but a great many come to you easily and pleasantly. I should judge that the mind which conceived "Pagan Russia" (to cite one instance) will image graciously for us next winter the story of the "Snow Queen" in the settings for the opera of that name which Roerich has been commissioned by Mary Garden to paint for the Chicago Opera company.

One impression gained from the Russian's work should at least be hinted. Many of the pictures appear to be painted on silk. There is a richness and sheerness of quality about the canvases that refuse credence to any simpler assumption. Of course it is not true, but that fact takes nothing from the thrill of the conception.

Paintings on silk always have the ineffable mystery of the orient about them—just as the mention of a sandalwood box brings up the perfume and charm of Araby (often an unvisited Araby) to one's mind. Paintings on silk seem to belong to another world and an older civilization. Japan and China have almost a claim on such paintings. The Roerich pictures have to a large extent the exotic romanticism of a Chinese design overlaid with the rich colors of Persia. With all this, they are Russian, typically Russian though hinting nothing of Anisfeld, who brought Russia to us a year or so ago.

So much for the present for Roerich. With Paul Thevenaz we approach a different aspect of the same fundamental truth of honesty in art.

I am not sure exactly what I expected when I went in last Wednesday to see the Thevenaz exhibit. Certainly it was the unexpected that I saw. For some reason Thevenaz had been connected in my mind with the school of isms painters. And he does not belong there! There is not an ism in the whole delightful category of his art—so far as it is revealed in the Arts club exhibition. There is strength, virility, and personality in the exhibit. In fact, it boasts all those characteristics that several paragraphs back I attempted to tack to the masthead of great art.

Perhaps the first thing that strikes you in the paintings is the remarkable mastery of technique in drawing which M. Thevenaz possesses. Such a pleasure is this realization, that you scarcely look for further delights. Then you discover that he has a remarkable ability for transmitting expression to his painted canvas. Then you realize his color—but not that as much as the quality of aliveness that runs through his figures and the veritable joy in action which converts them from things to beings.

Even his still lifes, as a general rule more still than life, are touched with the magic of his mischievous imagination. Look at "Nasturtiums," and enjoy the spotted dog; or look at "The Crystal Elephant," and amuse yourself with its translucency.

But his more serious work, the larger work, gives us none too much time to linger over these sketches. Probably the most impressive piece of painting shown in the gallery is the long panel depicting "Manhattan," a panel that is a decoration for the dining room of Mr. F. C. Havemeyer. Here you get to the full the precision of stroke which is this young Frenchman's. There is no beauty in the picture except the solid beauty based on the exact drawing. It is an entrancing thing.

The studies and the cupids for a ceiling in one of the larger rooms or halls in Mr. James Derring's house are striking, again with the accent on the beauty of the lines. Similarly with the tempora sketch, "Mermaids," for the swimming pool of Mr. S. Blumenthal If there were enough adjectives to emphasize the excellence of the action in this sketch, and yet leave some over for some of the other paintings, I should spill them all here, as it is the deed must be taken as done, and the beauty of the piece, with its beguiling witchery, must be struck home to you by a mere repetition of the sense of the mildest of all descriptive terms of approbation: Good.

The suggestions offered by these drawings and paintings seem to open a way for the freer use of decorative designs, not conventional, in the home and in public places. One of the pieces of work on which M. Thevenaz is engaged is a series of paintings to be placed in a moving picture theater. A few photographs of these may be seen. They are wonderful, not so much for their serious intent, as for the charming understanding that lies back of them. The spirit of the American public and the character of the American movie fan public's idols of the screen are touched upon in this series of panels with a laugh hidden in the bristles of the artist's brush.

The group of jungle paintings apparently are intended for sketches to be used at a future time. Again in them the most conspicuous feature is the virility of line in the drawing. The power and conviction of purpose that underlie the larger canvases are seen in these smaller scenes.

Take four of the more whimsical pictures—"Clowns," "Satyr," "Typhoon," and "Minuet"—from another side you receive an equally strong impression of the artist's genius. Just so do you receive distinct impressions from his portraits. They are unlike the usual run of sketched portraits inasmuch as each registers distinctly, from the characteristically coiffed head of the Russian, Fania Marinoff, to the eager intent face of our own Mrs. John Alden Carpenter.

This is one exhibition that should not be missed. It will continue at the Arts club until April 30.

The Palette and Chisel club is having an interesting exhibit of paintings by Arthur G. Rider, painted for the most part during the months he spent recently in Spain. There are scenes of boats along the beach, of hills and valleys, and charming castles drenched in warm yellow Spanish sunlight—the kind of sunlight that never stretches across the Atlantic. The pictures are well worth a visit. The club is conducting the exhibit much after the fashion of the winter annual show, when if one liked a painting one could bid for it, and if the price bid was the highest offered, the picture was yours without more to-do. The idea is an attractive one, and it is hoped that it will work as well in a one man show as in a more representative exhibit.

At the Art institute there are paintings by Abram Poole in gallery 16. Unfortunately the hour I went a lecture was being given in the room, and the lights were dimmed so there was nothing to be seen but blurred outlines. Perhaps by next week I shall really have seen these canvases—the darkened glimpse was full of interest. In the upper galleries are the pictures by Harry Stickroth; the water colors; and the photographs by the Chicago Camera club.

ASTRONOMY

FLYING IN SPACE.

I HAVE a clipping on my desk from an English paper wherein a scientist attempts to prove that we could never hit the moon with a projectile, however hard we might try. Without in any way detracting from the negative side, let me say that a decision which states that a thing is not so is, in its fundamental nature, unsound.

It is difficult to prove vigorously that a fact is so; to do it one must carefully scrutinize a great number of contributing circumstances, until finally the proof rests one way or the other. But to prove that a thing is not so would require a mind so infinite in extent that it could see all the facts, discovered and undiscovered, and no mind exists, or will exist for a long time, that does that.

Logic demands that we regard a fact as so until circumstances seem to disprove it beyond a doubt. There is no reason why a cannon could not be built that would shoot to the moon, and hit it. Such a gun would cost a great deal of energy and money, and the returns from it would be nil. This is the principal reason why it has not been built.

There is nothing impossible in the idea of flying through space, any more than there was in crossing the oceans, reaching the north pole, or navigating the air. Space has its peculiar problems to be conquered, like all other unsolved questions. We see moons and planets moving through the void, comets pass by all the worlds, coming and going on their unseen paths. The meteors that streak through the air were little rocks, flying through space is reasonless, uncontrolled orbits.

Logs drift and pile before the waves on the sea, but when the mind of man is there the ship keeps its appointed course in spite of wind and wave. Were the mind of man among the planets he could guide his spaceflying ship with the ease he now sails the earth.

The problems to be solved before man can go to Venus, Mars, the moon, and to the further worlds are briefly these: we must devise some way to generate a speed greater than seven miles per second, for this is the velocity necessary to leave the earth.

A carrier must be built strong enough to withstand the pelting of meteors with velocities up to forty miles per second, none of them, however, actually very heavy. It must carry food, air, and water for a trip of several months' duration, and must withstand temperatures from 200 degrees below zero to as much above. It must have devices to enable it to enter planet's air while going at great speed, to start and stop at will, and ways must be provided for landing on desert and rocky worlds.

An ordinary cannon, built very long, accurately sighted by mathematics, and charged with a carload of powder could send a ball to the moon. If the ball were aimed right, it might even just graze the moon and eventually come back to earth.

The science of gunnery is one that is hardly touched. A space ship would have many of the problems of gunnery in different forms to cope with. Perhaps the projectile would carry its own propulsive force, like a rocket, and the recoil of each discharge would send it flying.

Most of the energy liberated from a blast of powder goes into the smoke, fire, and noise, you remember. Only a small percentage is actually used to send the shell along. The rest is wasted. It is said that if the same charge which now will send up a toy rocket for 100 or 150 feet were all used in propelling it, the rocket would fly two miles high. Perhaps a space ship will greatly conserve its energy, so that a small charge will carry it a great way.

If you think that the venture would be difficult or impossible, try to put yourself in the frame of mind of some ancient who had just been told that there would some day be boats as large as one of his cities, driven across the oceans by fire, and which habitually went with a speed greater than a horse could run.

THRILLING! TREMENDOUS! TITANIC!

METRO'S marvelous production of the mightiest story ever written
VICENTE BLASCO IBANEZ'

THE 4 HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE

THE CRITICS CONTINUE THEIR UNPRECEDENTED PRAISE:

"Thousands of persons are going back to the La Salle Theatre to study this wonder drama. Each time there is a new viewpoint."
—ROB REEL, American.

"None of the appeal which helped make the sensational success of the novel has been lost. The characters appear to have stepped from the pages of the book."
—VIRGINIA DALE, Journal.

"The lovers of 'The Four Horsemen' touch the pinnacle of romance. . . . You can tread the trail of the actor's art many a mile before you find the equal of young Rudolph Valentino in the scene when Laurier (Sainpolis) surprises him in his rendezvous with Laurier's wife. . . . A wonderful portrayal of a real man subjecting to all the errors of a great love and committing none of the gaucheries."
—OBSERVER, Herald and Examiner.

As each big feature is produced the statement is always made that the ultimate in cinema achievement has been reached. But along comes another, and it is found to surpass all its predecessors. Such a picture is "The Four Horsemen."

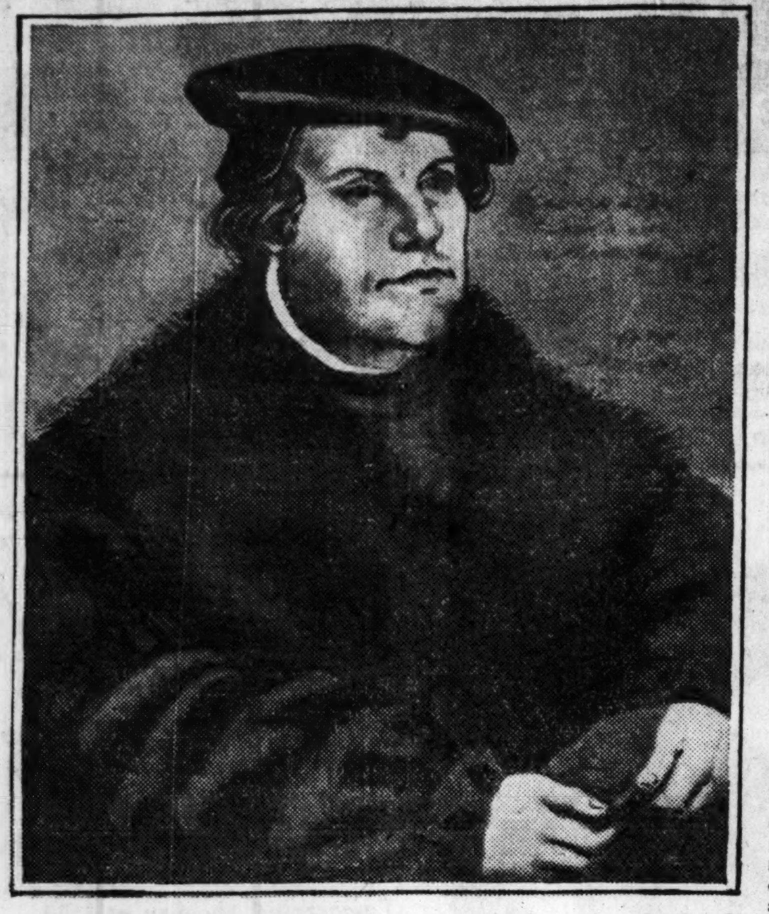
NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS · WORLD

Church Federation Host to Congress on Disarmament

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.



MARTIN LUTHER, from the portrait by Lucas Cranach in the Royal gallery at Dresden. It is just 400 years ago that the great leader of Protestantism appeared before the diet of Worms with his historic refusal to "recant," and the quadricentenary of this launching of the Reformation in Germany is being observed this year throughout the world.

THE congress on reduction of armaments and the sixth annual meeting of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches will be held in Chicago on May 17, 18, and 19, with the day sessions in the New England Congregational church at 19 West Delaware place, and the evening meetings in Medinah temple at 14 East Ohio street. Among the many prominent speakers are William Jennings Bryan, Jane Addams, John Spargo, Edward A. Filene, and the Rev. Drs. Charles F. Aked, Nehemiah Boynton, and Charles S. Macfarland.

The Chicago Church federation is coöperating in the arrangements for the congress, and will act as host of the occasion. Among the well known Chicagoans who have been asked to take part on the program of the congress are Joseph R. Noel, president of the Association of Commerce; Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston of the church federation; Rabbi Emil Hirsch, Archbishop George W. Mundelein, the Rt. Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, D. D.; Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Bishop Samuel Fellows, Drs. Shailer Mathews, John Timothy Stone, William E. Barton, Herbert L. Willett, and Frederick F. Shannon.

Some of the leading men of today are quoted in the program of the congress. "The world does not seem to learn from experience," says Gen. John J. Pershing. "It would appear that the lessons of the past six years should be enough to convince everybody of the danger of nations striding up and down the earth armed to the teeth. But no one nation can reduce armaments unless all do. Isn't it time then for an awakening among enlightened peoples to the end that the leading powers may reach some rational agreement which would not only relieve the world of this terrible financial load but which in itself would be a long step toward the prevention of war?"

Maj. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss is quoted as saying: "Disarmament is the only practical method of limiting war. It is the only means of preserving the world from bankruptcy and civilization from ruin."

William H. Taft writes: "Of course I favor, in the interest of world peace and national economy, reduction and limitation of armament by the leading maritime powers."

Among other prominent men quoted in favor of disarmament are Herbert Hoover, Senator William E. Borah, Sir Frederick Maurice, and Gen. Sarrail, commander of the French army that operated from Saloniki.

Clifford W. Barnes, president of the Sunday Evening club, will resume his informal Bible talk, this evening at the 7 o'clock meeting, after an absence of three months in California, on the general subject, "Stories of the Early Church." The Rev. Charles W. Gordon, D. D., of Winnipeg, Canada, known the world over as "Ralph Connor," the author of "The Man from Glengarry," "Black Rock," "The Major," "The Sky Pilot in No Man's Land," and many other books, and a major in the Canadian army during the war, will speak at 8 o'clock on "A Modern Man's Religion."

Bishop Frank M. Bristol of Chattanooga, Tenn., will speak at St. James' Methodist Episcopal church, the Rev. William R. Wedderspoon, pastor, 46th street and Ellis avenue, this evening at 8 o'clock.

An increase of 12,500 during the year in the membership of the diocesan union of the Holy Name society, making it the largest diocesan union of the society in the United States, was reported following the annual meeting of the society.

The membership in the Chicago archdiocese now has reached 82,500 and the number of branches 190, an increase of 35 during the year. One of the secular activities of the society is the big brother movement, by which youths are reclaimed from their early missteps. A plan for enlarging this work, outlined by Bishop McGavick, resulted in the subscribing of $4,000 for the cause.

The Rev. M. J. Ripple, O. P., of New York, who was the special guest at the meeting, declared that the big brother work here had been the inspiration for similar work in New York, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Washington, Los Angeles, Denver, and other cities.

Father Ripple said the big brother movement was one of the most valuable welfare activities undertaken by any Catholic society, and that it should be emulated in every city in the country.

John H. Maney, for many years active in St. Mel's branch of the Holy Name, one of the largest branches in the archdiocesan union, was elected president of the union.

The Chicago Federation of Synagogues, with Israel Cowen at its head, has pledged itself to coöperate with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in raising $50,000 for Chicago's Sabbath school extension and chaplaincy departments. The quota for Chicago is only part of a larger sum which is being raised all over the United States for similar purposes. Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch of Sinai temple made the principal address at a dinner given on Thursday to the campaign workers at the Hotel La Salle.

The chancel choir of St. Mary's church at 9th street and Wabash avenue, familiarly known as the Paulist choir, will give a sacred concert this evening at St. Sabina's Roman Catholic church, of which the Rev. Father Egan is pastor, at 78th and Throop streets.

The members of St. Margaret's alumnae will hold a memorial service for Virginia Sayre this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Church Home for the Aged, 5445 Ingleside avenue. The Rev. Herbert W. Prince, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, will officiate and dedicate a memorial room in the home named by St. Margaret's alumnae for Miss Sayre.

Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, will address the Younger Business Men's class of the Kenwood Evangelical church, 4600 Greenwood avenue, at 12:15 o'clock today. Recent speakers have been John Fletcher, vice president of the Fort Dearborn National bank; Frank Winans, vice president of the National City company; E. D. Sewell, vice president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul railroad; F. A. Murray, western editor of the Wall Street Journal, and Henry H. Kennedy, attorney; and among those who have promised to speak soon are President Judson of Chicago university and ex-President William Howard Taft; Harry A. Wheeler, vice president of the Union Trust company; Joseph R. Noel, Chicago Association of Commerce; and John G. Shedd, president of Marshall Field Co.

The interest in the class meetings reflects the success of an important movement headed by the Rev. Dr. A. J. McCartney, under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce, to bring the city's business men and preachers into close and continuous contact for mutual discussion of the interdependent phases of ethical and economic problems.

Julia Gay Memorial Methodist Episcopal church at Garfield boulevard and South Paulina street, will hold a debt raising rally this afternoon for the church edifice, which was built nine years ago at a cost of $35,000. An indebtedness of $6,000 now remaining will be raised today, it is hoped, through the efforts of the Rev. Dr. F. D. Stone, district superintendent, and the pastor, the Rev. Dr. John Hall.

The movement for a community Sunday afternoon at Lincoln Center, 700 Oakwood boulevard, Joseph M. Artman, director, will reach its climax today with the recital at 3 o'clock by Carl Sandberg, for after that the programs will be suspended until fall. The subjects at Lincoln Center Sunday afternoon have ranged from poetry to politics, and from science to love. On last Sunday afternoon the mixed audience of colored and white people talked over the problem of race relatives, Graham R. Taylor of the Chicago commission on race relationes and William Pickens of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, being the speakers. A twenty-five piece orchestra adds to the program of these neighborhood gatherings under the leadership of Dr. Cronkrite.

Revival services will be held this afternoon and evening in the assembly hall of the Chicago Normal college at 69th street and Stewart avenue, when Luke Rader, brother of Paul Rader, the evangelist, will speak on "Where Are We in Prophecy?" and Robert R. Brown will discuss "What Is Next?" The services are under the auspices of the Christian and Missionary alliance, of which Mr. Brown is the district superintendent.

Economical Living!
When you add together today's rentals, maid's wages, laundry, gas, electricity, depreciation on rugs and furniture, and all the other extras that "keeping house" in an apartment includes, you will discover it costs more and you get far less than at the Somerset.
Here one moderate rental pays for practically everything but the cost of your food.
For instance, two persons may secure a delightful apartment at the Somerset for $150 to $200. This includes a big, sunny, elegantly furnished living room with concealed wall beds—a bedroom by night; big dressing room with enormous wardrobe and dressing table; bath with shower; breakfast room, kitchenette, linen, silver, maid service, gas, electricity; spacious closet room.
Are you tired of having all your meals in restaurants? Do you long for a home-cooked meal? Somerset kitchenettes are practical; and economical, too.
Apartments without kitchenette are $100 and upwards. Not an ordinary little hotel bedroom, but a big, exquisitely furnished living room, with concealed wall-bed, dressing room with wardrobe and dressing table, and tiled bath with shower. Complete hotel service. Families of refinement will find the Somerset an ideal home.
LOCATED at Sheridan Road and Argyle, overlooking the lake. Elevated, surface and motor-bus transportation.

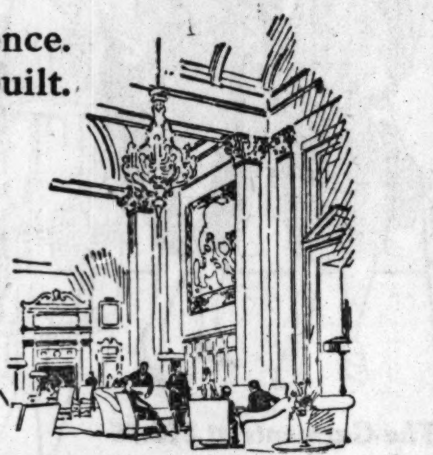
One of the Largest Steamers Afloat
33,700 tons—45,000 horsepower

First Voyage of The New Queen of the Seas

A Monument to French Art and Science. Considered the most beautiful Ship ever built.

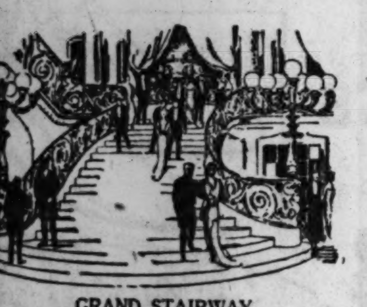
Sailing from New York, June 23rd



CORNER DE LUXE ART EXHIBIT SALON

S. S. Paris, the newest, largest, most magnificent French ocean liner ever built makes its maiden voyage from New York on June 23rd. The supreme example of marine science, a masterpiece of artistry and taste, unsurpassed by any vessel afloat in luxuriousness, comfort and convenience.

FROM the moment the traveler steps on board the Paris, he is in the sunny land of France with all its subtle charm and beauty. From the grand luxe, six-room suites to the simplest cabin, every feature of the ship attests the artistic genius of France. Famous artists and decorators have joined to make the Paris the most beautiful and magnificent of vessels. Panelling, and columns of rarest woods, exquisite frescoes and paintings, an exhibition gallery of works of art, a gymnasium, a Punch and Judy Show for the young of all ages, and an Aquarium, are but a few of its interesting features.



GRAND STAIRWAY

IN ADDITION to beautiful surroundings, is the celebrated cuisine and thoughtfulness and courtesy of the world-famed French Line service, which complete the comfort and pleasure of the traveler.

The Paris, with its displacement tonnage of 37,000, is 768 feet long, 86 feet wide and 60 feet deep, and carries 3,240 passengers and a crew of 664. It is a quadruple screw oil burner developing 45,000 horsepower and a speed of 22 knots. It is equipped with every twentieth century device for safety, including a double bottom hull; 15 water-tight compartments; most modern lifeboats; a submarine signal apparatus for traveling through fog, and a powerful motorboat equipped with wireless.

COOK'S TRAVEL SERVICE

EUROPE—Our illustrated booklets include a large variety of itineraries for Escorted Travel. Our parties are leaving by luxurious steamers at short intervals, during April, May and June. Particularly attractive, too, are our inclusive independent Tours arranged for Individuals, Families and small Parties, covering transportation, hotel accommodations, sight-seeing, private guides—when desired, etc. Another very attractive program is offered in our Tour de Luxe to the NORWEGIAN FJORDS, and including visits to LONDON and PARIS (battlefields). This tour sails from New York June 18th, and will arrive back in New York August 15th.

CALIFORNIA—Most interesting tours, offering complete relaxation and covering the "Golden West"—Grand Canyon, Apache Trail and the "American Riviera" of Pacific Coast resorts.

NATIONAL PARKS—"The Land of Glaciers." Miles of beautiful subalpine gardens, snowfields and huge glaciers, picturesque mountain trails and ranges.

ALASKA—A fascinating cruise via the famous Inner Passage, embracing calls at Alert Bay, the age-old Indian Village; Ketchican, well-known salmon canning centre; the famous Klondike Region, etc.

BERMUDA—Frequent departures. Our interesting Summer programs are now ready and are exceedingly well planned.

AROUND THE WORLD—A most fascinating trip around the world, the first after an interval of seven years. There will be two westward and two eastward tours, commencing respectively from the Pacific Coast September 3rd and October 1st and from New York October 15th and November 26th. The itineraries are the best that have yet been planned and are sufficiently flexible to align with individual desires.

SALESMEN.

One average sale in our business will net you $84. We will back you up with good live leads which should enable you to close from 1 to 10 deals weekly. This is not real estate, insurance, books, bonds, etc. This company is well established and doing a good business today. Up to present time we have been little affected by conditions, and the outlook for 1921 is very optimistic. Applicants should be over 26 years of age. Interviews Monday, 10:30 to 4:30, and Tuesday, 9:30 to 4:30. MR. MARGOLIS, Suite 316, 5 S. Wabash-av.

SALESMEN

We can offer you a lifelong position in an established business, where character and ability are more important than experience. You satisfy us and we will satisfy you that this opportunity is a real one. Apply in person, 612 Westminster Bldg. Ask for MR. SPANTON.

SALESMAN,

$5,000 TO $15,000 A YR.

Stop and think what this means to you. Our men are actually doing this and they did not have experience when they came with us. You can do the same if you will. Some men are begging for a job at $35 a week and are afraid to answer a job that offers $5,000 to $10,000 a year. We have only a high class, honorable, clean proposition to offer, and want the best of references. If you think you can qualify call today or in the evening between 6 and 8 at 5155 N. Broadway, or 7053 Stony Island. Ask for the manager.

SALESMEN.

Owing to increase in business solid substantial old line insurance company is enlarging its sales force. Real Facts About Buying Fur Bargains for Cash.

A retail store such as ours, which c its business on a cash basis, gives the values, because of the following facts. them over and think about them:

1. The cash store sells for cash, and therefore always has ready money to buy whol for cash. In this way the wholesale price by the cash store is considerably lower. F example, during the recent money strin among fur wholesalers in New York the R sale Shop picked up vast amounts of quality merchandise wholly because we ha the ready cash to give for it.

2. The cash store has no heavy bookkee charges or credit losses to add to the price the merchandise.

For the two reasons given above, the Resale Shop buys at a lower wholesale cost and with a lower overhead charge. Our overhe is still lower on account of the low rent w pay. All these things are factors enter into the retail price you pay. These are th reasons why the Resale Shop has consider undersold all other Chicago stores for yea These are the reasons why we have d larger volume of fur business than any oth store of our size in Chicago.

The Resale Shop handles bargains for ca and bargains in first quality furs is our s cialty. We have furs made in our own fa tory, and a written guarantee goes with ev purchase. We do not handle poor quality fu nor furs that have been worn. We manufacturers' samples, which are alwa the best quality and fully guaranteed.

FOR SALE—
CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY LANDS.
Your last opportunity. In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. Here grain growing, dairying, and live stock raising are being carried on successfully. The country is ideal for mixed farming. The Canadian Pacific Railway is offering a large area of these fertile lands in Lloydminster and Battleford districts. This fertile land will become the home of thousands of prosperous farmers. On similar land Seager Wheeler grows world's prize wheat. Near Lloydminster the world's prize oats have been grown, and butter of the highest quality is made. A man can soon become independent on a farm in this district. These lands can be bought now at an average of about $18 per acre. You pay down 10%, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then sixteen annual payments. Interest is 6%. M. E. THORNTON, Supt. of Colonization, Canadian Pacific Railway, 104 Ninth-av., Calgary, Alberta.

LINCOLN

LELAND BUILT.

CADILLAC, Type 57—4 passenger phaeton. This popular model has recently been repainted and in the finest mechanical condition, has the appearance and performance of a new car. $2,250.

CADILLAC 57—7 passenger touring car. Delivered in March, 1919. Equipped with winter sides and 6 cord tires, 4 of which are absolutely new. Cars of this same type, but delivered a year earlier, are selling for as much as we are asking for this car. $2,100.

CADILLAC, Type 57—7 pass. sedan. Beautifully upholstered in brown velour. The mechanical condition is fully equal to that of a new car, and at our price of $3,000 is a bargain such as is seldom offered.

CADILLAC, Type 51—7 passenger touring car. In remarkably good condition throughout. Equipped with the same sized wheels as on the current model; $700.

PACKARD 2-25, 7 passenger touring car. Has been used very little and is in a mechanical condition equal to new. Actual mileage is only 10,400. This model is conceded as the best ever turned out and is equipped with 6 practically new cord tires, spotlight, etc., $1,750. Also a series 1-35 at $1,000.

KISSEL, 4 passenger coupe, 1921 custom built model. A very beautiful car and absolutely like new in every particular. Was delivered a few months ago at a cost of $4,400. This car is now being offered by us at a price which will quickly move it. $2,750.

FRANKLIN BROUGHAM, 4-5 passenger. In splendid mechanical and coach condition. Upholstered in gray broadcloth. Full opera seats, 5 wire wheels, with cord tires. $1,750.

BUICK, coupe, in exceptionally fine condition throughout. Has been run just a little over 8,000 miles. A bargain at $1,250.

CHANDLER, 4 passenger coupe, formerly owned by one of Chicago's leading bankers; has been run only 12,000 miles and is mechanically perfect; equipped with 5 wire wheels, with cord tires. An unusual bargain at $1,400.

CHANDLER—1918, 7 pass. sedan, equipped with wire wheels and cord tires and in splendid mechanical condition, $1,200.

COLE, Model 870, 7 passenger touring car. Purchased in 1920 and has every appearance of being brand new. Painted a dark green. The mechanical condition of this car is perfect and the equipment is very complete, including leather covered winter sides. No better Cole anywhere in Chicago. $2,000.

HUDSON—Model 11-0, 7 passenger touring car, with Rex winter top; summer top, now on, has never been used. This car is absolutely like new in every respect and is a real bargain at $2,000.

STEPHENS—1920 model, 6 passenger touring car. Is in a mechanical condition equal to new and represents an unusual value at our price of $1,600.

WILLYS-KNIGHT, 7 passenger touring car, 1918 model. In good mechanical condition; 6 wire wheels, with cord tires. $600.

CHANDLER, 7 passenger touring car. Has had the best possible care, as is evidenced by its general condition. $700.

STUDEBAKER—7 pass. sedan, 1918 model; equipped with wire wheels and cord tires. The mechanical condition and appearance of this car is remarkably good. $750.

STUDEBAKER, 7 passenger sedan. Has had low mileage and is in fine shape throughout. Equipped with 5 tires, almost new; 2 bumpers, clock, etc. No better bargain in a used Studebaker anywhere in the city. $550.

FIAT ROADSTER

(BRAND NEW)

LATEST IMPORTATION.

This is one of the new little "four" cylinder imported roadsters. A wonderful small car that will run 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline and show a speed of 65 miles an hour. Very smart appearance. This Fiat is made with the same painstaking care at the famous Fiat plant in Turin, Italy, as the largest car they build. It will never wear out.

Bird-Sykes Co.
A WISE PLACE TO BUY.

Every used car sold by BIRD-SYKES COMPANY positively must measure up to the BIRD-SYKES COMPANY'S high standard of dependable merchandise.

Immediately as each used car is taken in trade [for a new Paige] it is tested by an expert mechanician, who determines whether or not this car needs any repairing to make it a 100% reliable car. If repairs are unnecessary this car is thoroughly greased, oil changed in engine, thoroughly cleaned, and renovated. If repairs are necessary no detail is too trivial, no job too large, but what receives intelligent and proper attention.

Great care is given to the appearance of all used cars at BIRD-SYKES COMPANY. Most of them are sent to our expert painter and when they come out are like new cars. This paint work is of such a high standard that the car will look good for an indefinite period if given the proper care.

All cars are provided with factory equipment of tools, etc.

EVERY CAR CARRIES STANDARD USED CAR GUARANTEE DURING THIS SALE.

No Brokerage Charges on Any Cars Sold on

TERMS

BIRD-SYKES COMPANY will gladly extend terms to reliable parties who furnish satisfactory reference. Notes bear 7% interest. Purchaser pays only standard rates for insurance; no brokerage.

CADILLAC'S 8 BARGAINS

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, TOURING CAR. This is the latest and current series and the same car we are delivering new today for $4,400. Customer has exchanged this car for one of our inclosed models. We have made a thorough examination of this car and it carries our guarantee. Painted a standard Cadillac blue and has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. Upholstering shows practically no wear. In fact, the entire car does not look like the ordinary used automobile. Rarely do we have an opportunity to offer such a nearly new car of the current series that we can guarantee at such a low price. Special for this sale $3,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, SUBURBAN SEDAN. This car is painted a dark Cadillac green and paint is in wonderful condition. Has an excellent set of cord tires, 2 extras, bumper, clock, etc. Upholstered in beautiful velour that shows practically no wear. This 7 passenger sedan body is mounted on one of our 132 inch chassis the same as our new car, which we are selling new today for over $5,700. Mechanical condition of this car is exceptionally fine and mileage is low. We have never had the opportunity of offering a late model sedan at anywhere near the price we are offering this at. For this reason it will be necessary for you to act quickly. Price $3,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. Mechanical condition of this car will bear most rigid examination and demonstration and is guaranteed by us. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra and bumper. Paint is exceptionally fine. This model is conceded to be one of the best that we have ever produced and this is the first opportunity we have had in some time to offer a Cadillac guaranteed touring car at this price. Upholstering, top, and general coach condition shows practically no wear. Car has had remarkably low mileage and regular oiling and adjustment attention in our service department. This bargain is available at $2,500.

PEERLESS TOURING CAR, 1920. This is the same car they are delivering new today for over $3,300. It has been carefully used by the original purchaser, who has given it proper attention, and it has just been driven enough to smooth it up and make it run beautifully. Has an excellent set of Goodyear tires and 2 extra as well as a set of winter curtains. Upholstery and top are in very fine condition. The price that we are offering this car at makes it necessary for you to take immediate action if interested. This car will bear most rigid examination and demonstration, and is a big bargain at the price we offer it at. Price $1,800.

STUTZ ROADSTER. This particular model is believed by some to be the best Stutz model ever built. If you are looking for a fast racy roadster that is in good mechanical condition, with a good set of tires and one extra, do not fail to see this bargain. The former owner has kept this car in good condition and it is worth much more than the price we are asking for it. If you are interested it will pay you to act early Monday to receive a demonstration. Special for this sale, $575.

STEPHENS SALIENT 6 TOURING CAR, Model 86. A light 6 cylinder touring car that has only been delivered a short time. Paint, upholstering, and top condition on this car are in good shape. Mechanical condition is good. The original purchaser has driven this car himself and has given it good care and very careful use. This car sells new today for over $2,600 and can be had at a great reduction. Special for this sale, $1,200.

PACKARD TOURING CAR, MODEL 3-38. This car is equipped with a Kimball limousine body. Has a good set of Goodyear cord tires and one extra. 5 wire wheels. The mechanical condition, in fact the general condition of the car, is worthy of your careful inspection. We believe this to be the best Packard bargain we have ever offered. Price on this, including limousine body, is $975.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 51, COUPE. Here is an 8 cylinder coupe that is without a doubt the best bargain we have ever offered. The price we have on this car is ridiculously low. Mechanical condition is exceptionaly good and it has an excellent set of tires and one extra. Paint and upholstering are in good condition. This car must be seen to be appreciated and is not an old worn out model, but is modern and good for many miles of service. You will probably never have another opportunity to buy a high grade Cadillac coupe at the price this car is offered at, $675.

Roamer Sport

DUESENBERG MOTOR.
CURRENT MODEL.

There isn't another "special job" sport model in Chicago that can compare in smart appearance with this beautiful Roamer.

The coloring shows the touch of an artist. It is a Harris & Rodgers creation. The body is purple, and the chassis, 6 wire wheels, 2 tire covers, fabric leather top and seat covers in silver gray. Silver guard rails are mounted on the rear of the body and the hood is polished aluminum. Silver radiator with custom built silver lamps and racing type radiator cap and motometer set off the front of the car with two wire wheels, tires, and tire covers mounted on either side of the car just "aft" the radiator. Truffault Hartford shock absorbers lend to its easy riding, and a disappearing tonneau wind shield protects the occupants of the rear seat. To add to its distinctive appearance and racey style are military steps and individual crowned fenders. Bosch magneto, racing type Zenith carburetor, 4 speed transmission, clock, etc.

Driven carefully a few thousand miles over boulevards and now at its best. If you desire an attractive, distinctive appearing car that has speed and power, this is the one you've been waiting for. You are invited to come in and see it.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

SALES EXECUTIVE OR ORGANIZER.

An able man or organization to handle the northern part of Illinois, part of Indiana and Iowa for a group of tool manufacturers.

The line at present includes the products of eight different concerns, manufacturing taps and dies, broaching machines and broaches, key-way cutters, drop forgings of all descriptions, measuring and dividing engines, locating and drilling machines, size blocks and compartors, gauges, counterbores, drill grinders, tap wrenches, boring and facing tools, knurlers, mandrels, toolmakers' scrapers, a complete line of tacks, etc., etc.

This connection will require upwards of $10,000 to swing, and will have earning possibilities of from $25,000 to $50,000 a year and over.

We will furnish stocks, samples, literature, advertising, and carry the accounts; in fact, do everything but get the business. The money required will in no way be in the nature of an investment.

As several of the lines are now listed with jobbers, I shall refuse to see any but responsible parties who have furnished me with references in advance.

Utilities Winning Long Fight.

While the position of industrial securities is "mixed" and that of the rails is uncertain, it is pleasant to record that utilities of the better class are clearly and definitely improving.

State utility commissions and various local rate making bodies came to their senses before the national authorities in charge of the railways and put rates on a level high enough to maintain properties and pay a reasonable return to security holders.

There are, of course, many exceptions, particularly in the large cities, but over the country in general the battle for the property rights of investors against vote seeking politicians is practically won. This result has been achieved principally by selling utility securities to patrons of the companies. When half of the voters in a state hold stocks or bonds of local enterprises the man who wants votes knows he cannot get them by attacking "the corporations."

For many years investors have made up a fairly large proportion of the voters of most states, and they might have checked the attacks of demagogues at any time merely by organizing and showing their strength. They failed to take any action on that line, however, and now the companies are bringing about the same result by turning themselves into great organizations of voters.

The important fact to investors is that securities of companies that already have obtained living rates are in a way to improve steadily. Costs in general are declining slowly and as they diminish the margin of profit tends to increase. When rates are to be readjusted it is much easier now to oppose a reduction than it was two or three years ago to get an advance.

Brief Answers.

W. K. A., Calgary, Alta.—The Plymouth Cordage company has plants at Plymouth, Mass., and Welland, Ont. It has $4,000,000 of stock and no funded debt. It has paid dividends since 1832, except in 1839, 1843, and 1858. In recent years the rate has been 8 or 10 per cent.

H. A. H., Nashville, Tenn.—Denver and Rio Grande preferred stock is purely speculative now. The road has been sold at foreclosure. The stock is worthless unless stockholders can get the sale set aside or unless the purchasers offer them some compromise.

M. H.—The Boston and Wyoming dividends of 3 and 7 cents are payable on April 25 to stock of record April 9.

Short stock quotable 50@77c below above quotations.

An uneven advance in hog values carried the average 20c above Friday and the highest point since Wednesday at $8.25. The top moved up 10c to $8.60, while some inbetween kinds were as much as 30c higher. Packers were the best buyers and trade closed strong.

Comparatively small shipping orders and more liberal offerings of under weights narrowed the price range still more, there being only 35c spread between the top and average against a spread of $1.95 a month ago.

The week's receipts of hogs were about the same as the previous week, while shipments decreased 11,000, the total sent out at 18,400 being smallest since last November.

Last week's estimated average weight at 235 pounds decreased 5 pounds compared with the previous week, being lightest since February and 10 pounds lighter than a year ago.

Cattle Trade Strong

Closing cattle trade was strong, with yearlings and good light kinds fully as high as a week ago, while 1,400@1,600 pound beeves closed 50c lower than the previous Saturday. Butcher stock declined 25@50c during the week.

Saturday's sheep trade was featured by the arrival of 2,000 California spring lambs, which sold at $12.00. Aged lambs closed 50@75c above a week ago, with sheep 25@50c up.

Receipts at Chicago for next Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, [illegible] hogs, and 19,000 sheep, against 10,5[illegible] cattle, 33,986 hogs and 17,330 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at [illegible] cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep.

Probable receipts of hogs for next Monday are estimated from 29,000 to [illegible]. C. F. Hall marked 29,000, W. H. Overman 33,000, J. M. Waters 35,000, F. W. Waddell 37,000, Felix Gehrmann [illegible], E. R. Gentry 41,000, Edward Morris [illegible]000, and Arnold Wescott 50,000.

HAY MARET EASY

The hay market had an easy tone and despite the light loadings in the country, buyers are not disposed to take hold freely. Receipts were 45 cars of timothy with No. 1 $22 to $24, and other grades $14 to $21. Alfalfa receipts were one car, with the range $14 to $23. There were only five cars of prairie in, mostly from South Dakota, with the range $10 to $18. Rye straw receipts were one car, with the price $13 to $14, and other straw $11 to $13 per ton.
